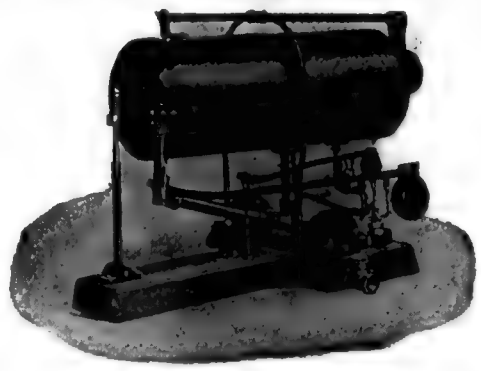
Greenhouse Heating.

WRITE the REVIEW about your heating troubles; state the details, giving a little sketch of the way your houses are laid out, and we will give you the benefit in this department of the suggestions of one of the best greenhouse heating engineers in the country.

THE NEEDED BOILER CAPACITY.

Please state what capacity of brick-set, return-flue boiler will be required to heat, by steam, to 50 degrees in zero weather, the following range of houses, located in New Mexico: Four connected houses, 25x120 feet each, seven feet to the eave line and twelve feet to the ridge, with glass in one end and in the sides of the outside houses to within three feet of the ground; also six connected houses, each 20x160 feet, both gables glass, same height as first houses mentioned. B. H. I.

One sixty horse-power boiler, or preferably two thirty horse-power boilers, should have sufficient capacity for this plant. L. C. C.



HEATING A FRAME.

I should like to offer a few suggestions in connection with the inquiry from T. H., in the REVIEW of January 14, page 72, in regard to the heating of a violet frame. The circulation in a hot water system is almost identical with the draft in a chimney. In the latter case it is simply hot air rising and being replaced by cold air, which may be drawn up or down according to the power generated by the hot air, rising in the upright stack or chimney. In hot water circulation the principle is the same and the drawing of the return water uphill, so to speak, is accomplished by the power generated in the upward flow of the hot water in or just after leaving the boiler or heater. Therefore it is quite feasible to circulate hot water in a loop below the heater

"DETROIT" Automatic Return Steam Traps

A Positive Factor of Economy For Steam Heated Greenhouses

"Detroit" Traps will keep entire system free from water at all times, making every foot of heating surface hot and efficient, returning automatically all water of condensation directly into the boiler—hot—and without a pump or injector.

or boiler, as is often done in basements of buildings, railway cars, etc.

I cannot understand, from the inquiry, if the tank spoken of is closed or open. If it is closed and can be heated, as stated by T. H., there should be no difficulty in heating this violet frame, even though it is lower than the tank or heater, by carrying, say, a 2-inch pipe from the top of the tank up to a point about two or three feet farther above the tank than the frame is below the tank; putting on a return bend tapped for ⅜-inch pipe for a small expansion tank, running down with the same size (2-inch) pipe and connecting with the coil in the frame, which in turn is connected with the bottom of the heater. If possible, see to it that it is downhill from the return bend at the top of the riser to the return end of the coil, and then up to the bottom of the heater. The circulation generated in the heater and riser, and in the corresponding down pipe, will cause the water in the coil to circulate, and the higher this riser is carried above the heater the more rapid the circulation in the coil will be. The small expansion tank, connected at the top of the riser pipe, will free the system from any air or steam that may be present.

R. G. Milford.

TWO VIRGINIA ROSE HOUSES.

I expect to build two connected rose houses, each 42x280 feet, nine feet to the gutter and eighteen feet to the ridge, with a cross section walk in the center of each house. Kindly let me know what will be the best way to pipe them for steam heat. I never carry over ten pounds of steam. What size and how many pipes should be used for flows, and also for returns? I shall use raised benches. The outside temperature here seldom gets below zero; possibly once or twice in winter it will run about 5 or 6 degrees below. D. G. G.

Each of the houses 42x280 should have not less than twenty-two lines of 1¼-inch pipe, and twenty-four lines would be a little better. These can be fed by a single 4-inch main, carried under the ridge, or by two 3-inch flows, one under each purlin about halfway between eaves and ridge. L. C. C.

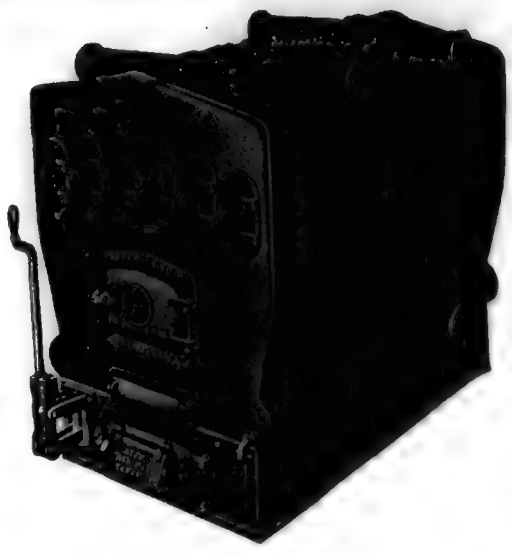
INDIANAPOLIS.

Just as soon as the last of the visitors had left Indianapolis the weather took a sudden change and by noon, January 29, was a young blizzard, that kept increasing till, on Saturday, it was full grown, the temperature at 10 degrees, with a high wind, that gave the firemen a hard time. The strong wind lifted a corner of A. Wiegand & Sons' conservatory and loosened a few panes of glass. With quick work it was soon secured and further damage averted.

Business during the week has been good, all seeming to be busy.

The city florists' monthly meeting will be held February 10, at Walhalla hall.

S.



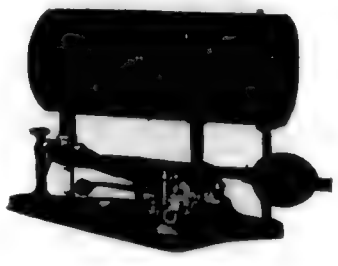
CINCINNATI.

The Market.

When it began to look as if we were not going to have any winter this year a regular old-time blizzard set in and for two days it blew at the rate of about twenty-five miles per hour. There was snow falling most of the time also. The temperature went down to about 10 degrees above and stayed there. As may be supposed, the growers caught it pretty strong. It was hard to keep the houses from freezing up with such a wind blowing, and several report small damage from frost, but, taken all together, it did not amount to much.

The cold snap has had a tendency to shorten the supply of stock and, as a consequence, prices are a little better than last reported. There is a slightly better demand and, with not so much stock coming, the market was kept cleared out well and business was much more satisfactory.

The demand for carnations for McKinley day scarcely created a ripple in the market. Few were seen being worn and the day is doubtless one of the past.



Is Your Cellar Shallow?

HERE is the boiler for it! Has hub connections for low flow pipes. It's a sectional boiler—a boiler with a proven record for economy.

GIBLIN & CO., Utica, N. Y.

The growers who had salted away some stock for that time are not greatly pleased with the returns they got. Instead of getting an increase over the regular market price, they found that their flowers were sold at reduced prices. This was necessary in order to move out the surplus stock.

We are having ideal winter weather now, and if it will only continue for some days it ought to be a great benefit to business in general.

Valentine's day ought to bring out a good demand for violets and sweet peas. We are well supplied with these items now and some fine stock is coming in. Violets do not average so well in price, but sweet peas are doing well.

S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, was a caller on his way home from the carnation meeting. Martin Reukauf, from the same city, was also a visitor.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

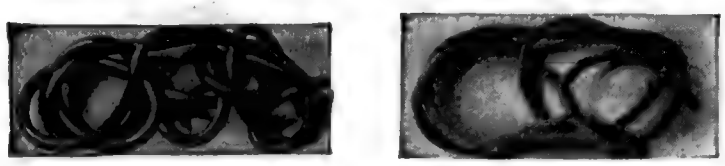
Cut flower trade has been fairly active and shipments have been well used up. Indeed, there has been room some days for larger supplies of roses and carnations than have come to market. Carnations, however, are now coming in more abundantly. Violets are in greater request than for some time, notwithstanding the fact that those from the south and from the vicinity of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., almost immediately lose their fragrance when the boxes are opened. There have been numerous dinners, luncheons, receptions, etc. The demand created by these, with the customary funerals and hospital needs, has kept up a well distributed activity.

The weather has been like April and May. There has been no frost in the ground for the last ten days, which is very unusual for this time of the year. The temperature ran up to 64 degrees January 25. This kind of weather is not favorable to the best kinds of flowers. January 30 we had a touch of the blizzard, which swept down on us from the north, with heavy winds and with occasional snow flurries.

Sweet peas are a glut and have been so for some time, and the Exchange is stocked up with large quantities, with few takers at any price. Mignonette seems to be losing its popularity, as it does not last long enough to suit some of the trade.

Various Notes.

John Cook, the originator of My Maryland, is to give a talk on that rose at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 8. This is also to be carnation night, and it is expected that some of the newer varieties from out of town will be on exhibition.



A visit was paid to Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., at White Marsh, Md., January 24, where is to be seen one of the finest known collections of geraniums, which are being shipped away in large orders, over 20,000 being shipped in one day. The stock is in the pink of condition. All stock is being sold out of 2-inch pots; no rooted stock out of sand is sold. Preparations are being made for one of the largest stocks of dahlia plants that this firm has ever grown. All of the geranium cuttings are potted up as soon as made, as this is considered one of the surest methods of rooting them. Whole benches can be seen with very few blanks, which proves this to be the best way to propagate them at any season of the year. Q.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was somewhat dull last week. All stock was plentiful, except white roses, which were a marked scarcity. Easter and rubrum lilies throng the market, and bulb stock is good and the prices low. The last two days of the week brought the worst blizzard the city has experienced for years, and traffic was delayed considerably. Incoming and outgoing trains were running on anything but schedule time, causing shippers a great deal of worry and some loss.

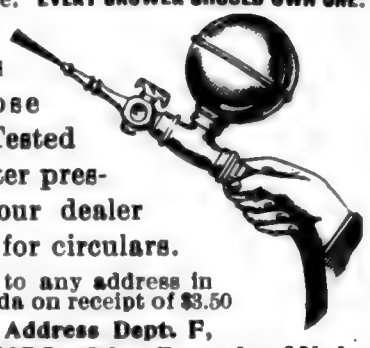
Various Notes.

Carnation day being so stormy, not as large a sale was noticed as usual. Miss Whitted had a fine window on that day, containing a bust of President McKinley draped with silk flags, and masses of the best varieties of his favorite flower artistically grouped in the show window.

R. A. Latham has booked a fine decoration for the coming week. Business was especially good with him last week, as he had a number of dinner and reception calls for flowers.

William Gray, formerly with the Minneapolis Floral Co., is now with Miss Whitted.

Mr. Smith, of Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouses, reports a fine stock of Easter lilies, to be ready for Easter.



The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some exceptionally good tulips and Harrisii. S. Swanson, formerly of Wayzata, Minn., has charge of the cut flower department. M. E. M.

TEWKSBURY, MASS.—Albert Roper, on Pleasant street, is putting up a large tank for his greenhouses.

TOLEDO, O.—The Toledo Florists' Club held its annual carnation exhibition at S. N. Peck's flower store on the evening of January 27. Several of the new sorts were shown.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Lawrence Cotter, superintendent of the Lake View Rose Gardens, at Jamestown, N. Y., aptly describes White Killarney as the queen of the twentieth century, and he intends making it the standard white rose for next season. He is enthused with the grand success that his former confrere, Alex. Montgomery, is having with it at Waban, and will not be content until he has it growing here to even greater perfection, and that is going some. Everything is being grown here in the six-cipher column. George Heelas has the store looking even brighter than ever, and rightly attributes the good sales to a constant supply of the best and freshest going.

Fred A. Dorman, of Jamestown, has been able, in spite of quiet times, to build a handsome dwelling and has one of the snuggest plants in this section.

Eliot Worden, of Jamestown, has the best trade in the east end and intends spreading out soon.

Thomas Russell has a big trade in bedding plants at Brooklyn Heights, Jamestown. He has purchased a large tract of land and may build a range of glass of King construction. The trussed-roof house recently built by D. R. Herron, of Olean, with cement benches and walks, will be copied as a model. It is 22x160 feet.

J. V. Laver, of Erie, Pa., is completing two houses, 45x135 feet, with cement benches. This gives him a big range and is evidence of increasing business.

Vern Schluraff, of Erie, has laid out the grounds surrounding his houses. The title of Floral Park is well applied.

William Honeysett, of Erie, has the finest stock of Princess of Wales violets in this locality and has no trouble in getting top prices for all he can pick.

The Robb Floral Co., of Erie, makes a fine showing of outdoor stock through the season.

J. H. Dann & Son, of Westfield, N. Y., are recognized as the banner growers of asparagus on the lake shore. Their advertisement in the Classified Department of the Review has repaid them many times over. Their stock is clean and bushy. M.

Lowell, Mass.—Senator Hibbard has introduced in the senate a bill, accompanied by a petition from this city, for a law permitting florists to deliver flowers for funerals, churches, etc., on Sunday mornings up to 11 o'clock. The bill is the outcome of the recent edict of the police department compelling the florists to close on Sundays, and from the fact that it is introduced it would appear that the police were right in their contention, despite its unpopularity.

About Its Erection

Taken side by side, with conditions equal, the U-Bar house can be erected with less trouble and greatest speed. Look at a U-Bar house and it is plain enough why—rafter and roof bars combined in one—the entire frame reduced to a mere web—no complicated fittings to bolt up—one-third less glazing to do because the glass is spaced one-third wider—simply straight away work from start to finish.
If yours is a case where time counts and where greatest endurance and highest productiveness are requirements, then send for a catalog and get in immediate touch with us.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

WIZARD BRAND TRADE MARK

MANURES

Dried, screened and packed in bags of 100 lbs. each.

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE
PURE - UNIFORM - RELIABLE

A strong and quick acting manure, highly recommended for carnations and chrysanthemums.

SHREDDED CATTLE MANURE
Easy to Handle and Apply

Stronger and better in every way than rough manure. Lasts much longer on the benches. Unequaled for mulching and feeding roses, liquid manuring and mixing with bench and potting soil. Used by all the largest growers.

Talks on Cypress

Every florist should know the various grades of cypress lumber. If you expect to get the best, you ought to find out what the best is.

When a log is brought into the saw mill it is cut up in several thicknesses and grades. Whatever is free of sap or defects is put in the "tank" grade; that which has a little sap and a few knots is put in the "1st and 2d" grade; boards that have sap all over one side, or are unfit for "1st and 2d," are called "selects"; then comes No. 1 common, No. 2 common, "shop," cull, pecky, etc.

Only one of these many grades is used for greenhouse material—the "tank" grade. All the lumber that we use is this grade, and to make sure that no sap gets into our material, we have an expert that goes over each board and each sashbar before it is shipped.

A little sap is found in all grades of cypress, but less is allowed in the tank grade than in any other. You cannot be sure of sap-free material because it is made of "tank" cypress—it must be inspected by someone who knows—before and after it is made up—at the mill. Don't take chances, but get your greenhouse material from people that guarantee the cypress to be free of sap.

Get our catalog before you build again and then get our prices.

Estimates furnished free on request.

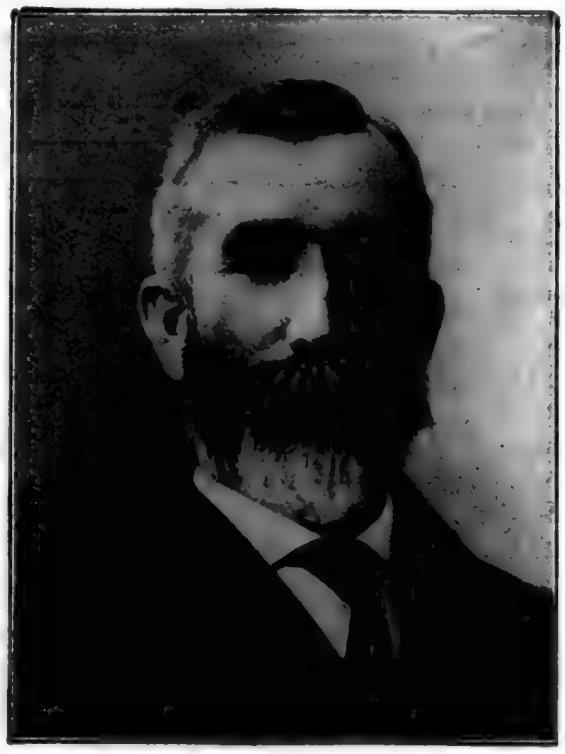
ROSE GROWING AS A BUSINESS.

[An abstract of a talk by William H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass., before the class in floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, January 20, 1909.]

No business is really better than growing the queen of flowers. There are many reasons for this. All the reasons why we ought to be farmers apply equally well to rose growing, and under more favorable conditions. The best location for a rose business is the very best place in the world to live—out in the country, with easy access to the city.

What I suppose you would like to know is how much capital and knowledge is required to place a man in such a position and to securely maintain the business. How much knowledge is really needed? All possible knowledge is best, and many of us have had little at the start, but out of what you know and what you think you know, you must bring forth confidence and courage. Combining these with your best judgment and with enthusiastic, ceaseless and untiring industry, you will then have a chance to drive on to success. While cultivating your roses you should also attend to the cultivation of your courage, as you will find this is the most important of all the qualifications leading to business success.

Capital and Site.



Capital is like knowledge—a large amount is very desirable—but what I suppose you would really like to know is, how small an amount can be made sufficient. The cost of rose houses is about 50 cents per square foot of ground covered. From 3,000 to 5,000 feet would be required to produce sufficient income to support a family. From that you can easily figure for yourself the capital required.

Land is a serious and vital question, and one that needs careful consideration before it is decided. A small farm with a large mortgage is the answer to the man with limited capital. A heavy clay soil I consider best, but good roses are grown on all kinds of soil. A broad, level field facing the south, with as good protection from north and west wind as possible, is required for a greenhouse site. Within reach of town or city water is best. If this cannot be had, the kind of home supply would need to be considered before locating. Near the railroad station saves time and money. Just as good roses can be grown on a $500 farm, if the soil is good, as on one that costs ten times as much.

Greenhouse building, I presume, has been thoroughly covered by speakers who have addressed you before.

The Best Roses to Grow.

The market you have for the sale of your product should decide the question whether you would grow summer roses or the winter-blooming kinds, or both. Of the winter-blooming kinds, Bride and Bridesmaid have been the standard for many years. Bridesmaid has been largely replaced by Killarney, and White Killarney will soon replace Bride. The varieties I have planned to grow for next season I am grafting at the present time. They are Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Beauty and a few Perle, Safrano and Bon Silene. These I find the best winter bloomers. For summer, I grow Kaiserin, Carnot, Beauty and Killarney. I have tried many kinds of pink roses for summer. Have not as yet found any that are very satisfactory, and have had to use Killarney for that purpose, although it is really a winter rose.

William H. Elliott.

Grafted Roses.

I grow all my roses on Manetti stocks, except Beauty and Perle. Grafted plants cost about three times as much as own root plants, but of most kinds they are greatly superior. You can also cut an extra crop from grafted plants, which will more than pay for the difference in cost and leave you much stronger plants. We graft from 100,000 to 150,000 plants each year. A strong, vigorous-growing stock is needed to produce the best plants. The scions should be selected from the best wood and from the best plants. These plants are grown mostly in benches three and one-half feet wide, three rows of plants to a bench, with soil from three to five inches deep.

Soil and Planting.

Soil is prepared with the greatest of care and in the most thorough manner. A good clayey sod is plowed four to five inches deep, and carted on to a hard piece of ground, where it is dumped and spread about six inches deep. One load of cow manure to every three loads of sod is spread over the top; then, with the use of the disc, harrow it until it is thoroughly pulverized; then bone is added, the finest ground bone being preferred; proportions about one part bone to fifty parts of soil.

Planting is done in June and July. Plants are set about fifteen inches apart, in soil about six inches deep. These are given clear water during the summer. In the fall, we start the liquid manure. For this purpose I use cow manure only. The only rule I have about the strength of it is to make it as strong as I can. The plants are thoroughly watered about once a week through the winter. Chemical fertilizers I have not used very much. What I have used have not proved satisfactory. The great secret in rose growing is to give them enough to eat.

Cutting and Marketing.

Roses are cut twice daily before they are very open, great care being taken to get them all in the same condition. All the roses from both my New Hampshire and Brighton greenhouses are shipped into Boston daily. Ordinary kinds are graded into about eight different grades and sold to the stores and through the Boston coöperative market also. A great effort is always made to have a large supply when the market is short of flowers, and as small a supply as possible when the market is overstocked.

Income.

A great variation in the income is caused by the success or failure in the cultivation and also by the popularity of the varieties grown. We aim, however, to produce each year 50 cents per square foot of ground covered; not the amount of bench space, but the whole amount of the ground covered. This return should yield a good profit. I have had returns run as high as 75 cents per foot, and other years as low as 30 cents, the latter producing no profit at all; the former would produce a large profit. I hope any of you starting into this business will always have the good fortune to have the larger return.

CUTTINGS DECAYED AT ROOTS.

I am sending you two rose plants which were taken from the sand three weeks ago. Will you analyze the soil and kindly tell me what is the trouble, if in the soil or not? I have 2,000 like the sample and am at sea as to what is wrong. The roots, you notice, have decayed. They have received nothing but fresh water, that we know of.

J. R. E.

The apparent trouble with these cuttings is that they have been allowed to remain too long in the sand, or until the roots got tough.

Pot firmly and shade for four or five days during bright sunshine. Keep the house at 56 degrees at night and 75 to 80 degrees during the day, and give plenty of water. Use the syringe twice a day during bright weather and give plenty of air.

While these soils are far from being ideal rose soils, they are still capable of producing good young stock and also, with the proper admixture of fertilizers, of growing good flowering plants. The quality of the soil is not the cause of the roots decaying. RIBES.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE ROSE CRESCENT.

The crescent in the illustration is made of pink and white roses, with a background of cycas sprays, the lines of the crescent being softened by sprays of adiantum. It is one of our series of funeral designs by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. Mr. Fox finds this a very useful design, which gives excellent value where a not too expensive floral offering is desired.

PHIL.

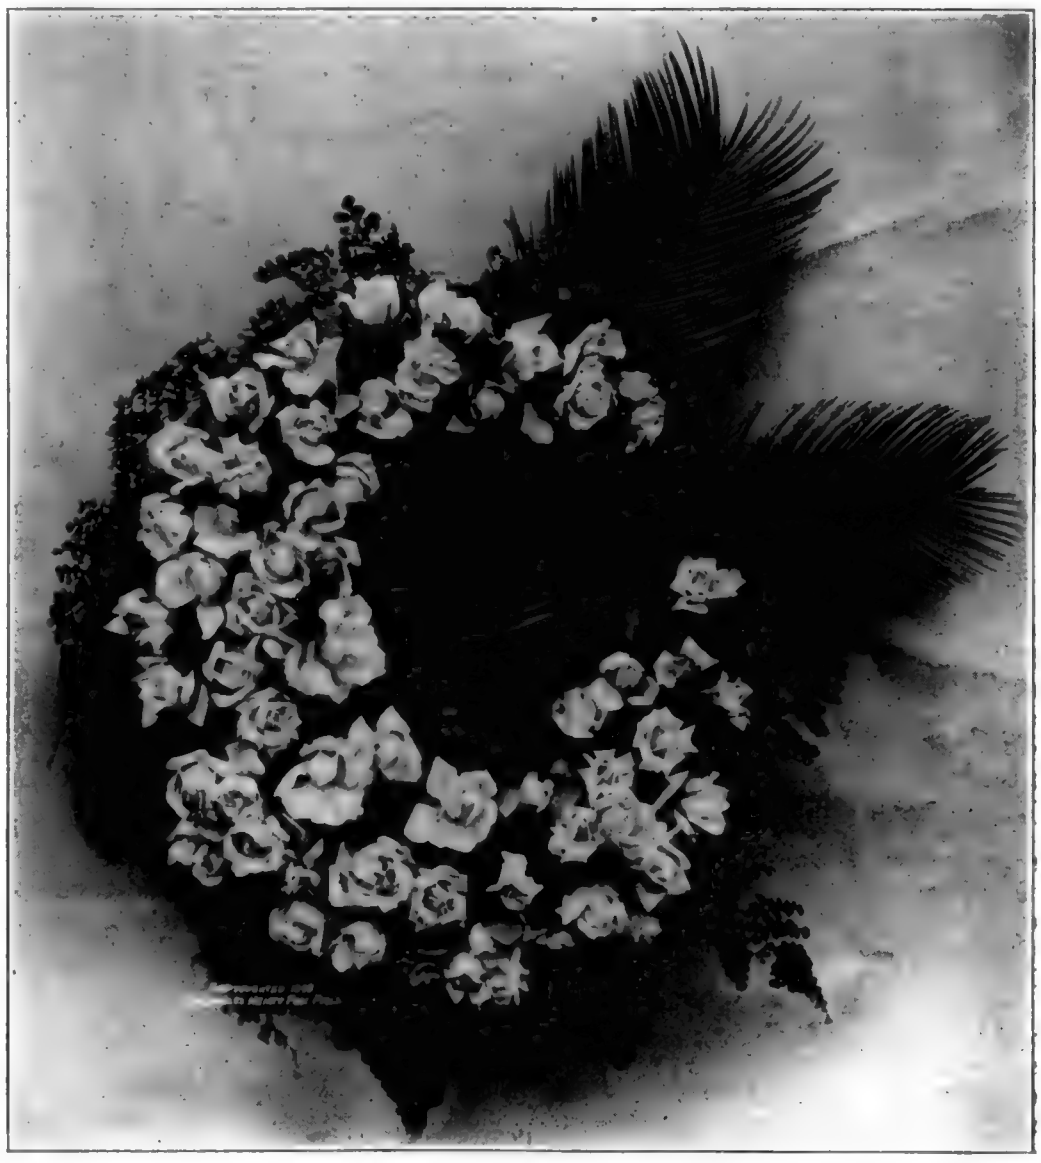
AN ELKS' DESIGN.

The illustration on page 7 is reproduced from a photograph of a design used by the Elks at Joliet, Ill., in whose clubhouse many a visiting florist has been entertained. The design in question was conceived and executed by Albert C. Rott. All members of the order will appreciate its significance and appropriateness.

The design can, of course, be made of any stock which is available, but much of the effect will be lost if the wreath is made too solid; better loose sprays of boxwood with the flowers on stems of some length, so that the arrangement will appear light and graceful rather than heavy. Mr. Rott has used white lilac, when in season, for this design, with excellent results.

A BOATWRIGHT DECORATION.

The recent visit of E. H. Harriman to Augusta, Ga., gave to the Boatwright Floral Co. the largest order of the year—the decoration at the Country Club for the banquet given by the Augusta Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Allan Boatwright directed the work.



Southern gray moss and graceful vines covered the ceiling and formed a canopy over the heads of the guests. Numerous pink-shaded lights emphasized the delicate traceries of moss and vine and shone with a soft and witching glow. In the center of the ceiling, where the garlands of misty gray and glistening green were drawn together, an immense wreath of pink and white carnations was suspended and fastened with a bow of rose colored chiffon that looked like an immense fluttering butterfly.

In the corners of the room the festoons of vine and moss were caught with rose-colored lights. Forming a background around the places of Mr. Harriman and the speakers was a bank of lilies, ferns and palms, and over the mantel, just opposite, was another beautiful bank of the same flowers and foliage. Huge white and gold pedestals filled in the spaces between the windows, and were surmounted by banquet vases bearing tall lilies and ferns. The central ornament of the banquet table was an immense gold basket, which stood on a circular mirror. This was filled with Bride and Bridesmaid roses and long sprays of asparagus. On the handles of the gold basket were great gauzy bows suggesting butterflies like the one in the center of the ceiling decoration. The ends of the tables were decorated with the same gold baskets filled with pink and white roses, only of smaller size. Smilax was garlanded over the table, allowed to drape the ends and sides, while violets were scattered with apparent carelessness over the board. Besides the long table, which filled the length of the Country Club hall, were a number of smaller ones adjoined, and upon each of these were low bowls of pink and white carnations, garlands of smilax and scattered violets.

The adjoining cafe and smaller dining room were decorated on the same general plan, but with a variation in the color. The red walls of the cafe gave the color note in this room. Red lights glowed among the green vines and draperies of gray moss. The mantel in this room was artistically decorated at one end with a high vase of silvery birch bark, filled with red carnations, and at the other with a unique and beautiful twig basket from which poinsettias, in their cardinal brightness, shone. In the center of the mantel was a large bowl of Richmond roses.

RETAILERS WANT NOVELTIES.

That the leading retailers more and more are coming to appreciate the need for novelty is clearly in evidence this season, according to S. B. Wertheimer, who has in the last few months visited the best stores in most of the large cities. "I never have seen a time," says Mr. Wertheimer, "when there was so keen an interest in new articles. Of course the smaller stores are still content with the staples in all lines of supplies, but the leader in each town seems to at last be wide-awake to the fact that to hold the lead something must be offered that is not to be had in every other store. The reputation of being a season ahead of the rest of the town is the best sort of advertising for a flower store, and a good many retailers have found it out. Good novelties in the way of accessories for use with flowers are not so easy to pick up, and anyone who has a really good thing now has only to let it be known to get all the business he can conveniently handle."

Crescent of Roses.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION.

I have a lean-to greenhouse sixteen feet wide, sixteen feet high at back, but only four feet high in front. I want a walk in front against the side, which will necessitate an excavated walk. The posts are down three feet in the ground. How should I support the house? Will there be danger of its sagging over, there being no supports in the middle of the house? I have another house I would like to alter in the same way, a twin house seventy-eight feet wide and sides four feet high, but the posts are only two feet deep. This house is supported at the ridges, but I fear to dig beside the posts. J. M.

I would advise putting a line of supports down the center of each house. This can be done easily by using ordinary gas pipe. It will be necessary to dig out a little under each foot piece and lay some bricks or flat stones to rest them on. In the case of the wider house, where the posts will be entirely uncovered, you will require to jack up the roof a trifle and dig out under each post so that it rests on a solid foundation of brick or stone and cement. W.

PRESERVING GREENHOUSE WOOD

I read with interest the article on "Preserving Greenhouse Wood" in the REVIEW of January 14. Can you inform me as to the merits of Carbolineum for preserving wood, especially benches in greenhouses? Has the U. S. Forest Service experimented with it?

This material is sold by Bruno Grosche & Co., 5 Jones Lane, New York. They ask, in a circular sent me last August, $9 for a 10-gallon can of S. P. F. Carbolineum. I would like to know whether the material is worth this, as a preservative for greenhouse benches. Among other testimonials they state: "The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick, N. J., says on page 252 of its report on preservation of greenhouse benches: 'Sixteen beds were treated with tar, creosote, whitewash, cement, copper sulphate, etc. When the soil was removed the untreated benches were decayed from one-fourth to one-half the way through the boards. The boards treated with cement, whitewash, tar and creosote showed considerable decay, while those treated with S. P. F. Carbolineum were in decidedly the best shape.'"

About thirty years ago and more, my father did a good deal of "Kyanizing" with greenhouse timbers. I cannot state at this time how much it prolonged the life of the wood of those old greenhouses. I do know, however, that an outdoor arbor supported by 3x4 hemlock posts, planted in the ground about thirty years ago, is still standing on the original posts. These posts were soaked in a solution of mercuric chlorid, but I cannot tell you now, for how many days. The solution was considered strong enough when it would blacken a silver spoon.

About thirteen years ago I built a cheap greenhouse, supported by 3x4 hemlock posts. The butts of these, or portions in and to a distance above the ground, were soaked in a solution of mercuric chlorid for about a week, I think. The past summer we had to splice most of these posts. Whether being inside a greenhouse or different treatment made these rot quicker than the arbor posts is a question.

For the last three years I have been painting or brushing crude petroleum oil on heart cypress benches. Last summer the first treated did not show any signs of rot, but of course we would not expect heart cypress to rot in three years anyhow, as the whitewashed boards are also good.

Has the Forest Service experimented with crude petroleum as a preservative, either by soaking boards in it or brushing one and two coats over the surface? How does it compare in efficiency with Carbolineum? Of course the former is much cheaper, about the price of kerosene.

I may state that my father found out that Kyanizing wood made it more brittle. It would snap off easier than untreated wood. A. J. PENNOCK.

An Elk's Design.

ROOF AND BENCHES.

Will you kindly tell me which would be the best kind of roof for a greenhouse thirty-five feet wide? Also the best arrangement of benches for the above size of house? J. W. S.

The roof which will give you the maximum of light is an even span. You would get a smaller air space by having a double roof of the ridge and furrow style. This would, however, give you more shade and you would not save much in the way of fuel, as the houses with the bigger area heat the easiest, the temperature also keeping more uniform. A ridge and furrow structure will grow good plants, but an even span one you will find will beat it. Some large growers are giving their houses a longer slope to the north than the south, claiming that it gives better winter results.

For a house thirty-five feet wide the best arrangement will be to have a path two feet wide along the sides of the house and have five benches, each five feet wide, with a path one and one-half feet wide between them. Do not make any benches along the sides of the house. You can care for the plants much better when you can walk along each side of the benches, besides giving them the needed headroom. W.

SECOND CROP ON STEVIA.

Could you tell me how to get the second growth of flowers on stevia? We have a few hundred large plants, from which we have cut the flowers. We had occasion to buy some late last year and got some from our wholesale house, which looked much like second growth of stevia. F. & F.

It will not pay you to attempt to get any second crop from stevia. What flowers you might, perchance, get would amount to little. The stevia you got was probably held back in a cold north house. In such a place it can be kept back until even the middle of February. All it needs after housing is to be kept just clear of freezing. C. W.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.—F. D. Keyes has removed to a store in Parsons' block. The store is nicely furnished in mission style, and Miss Lena Keyes is in attendance. Mr. Keyes' business has grown rapidly during the last five years, and several additions to his greenhouses and equipment have been necessary.

Geraniums

FOR WINTER FLOWERING.

An Opportunity Neglected.

The popularity of zonal pelargoniums as bedding plants and for use in piazza or window-boxes and vases, shows no falling off. No other flowers can compare with them for these purposes, and the introduction annually of many new and unique varieties keeps the public appetite whetted. But the culture of geraniums, entirely apart from the bedding sizes so much in demand in May, is still rather limited and could be profitably extended by many florists. Such geraniums as are seen in bloom during the winter months are customarily of such sorts as Double Grant, Alphonse Ricard and a few other double varieties. Bright and attractive as these may be, they sink into comparative insignificance when placed alongside the well grown plants of the better varieties of singles, more particularly those known as the English round-flowered type.

Some of these are not successes bedded out, but others are good alike outdoors and under glass. All are so much more beautiful than the doubles and flower so much more profusely that it is surprising to find so few grown commercially. Any florist who can work up a stock of this type of geraniums for spring trade can readily get a fancy price for them. I have in mind a florist in a city of 30,000 people, who propagated a large quantity of these singles a year ago, and in May his customers preferred them to the old type and were willing to pay fifty per cent more for them. This experience is not exceptional, and not only will this class of geraniums sell better in spring, but there is a wonderful opening for them as winter-blooming plants. At present they are but little seen and the varieties are mostly old-fashioned. Wide-awake florists, who have seen well flowered single geraniums, state that they would have no trouble in selling them at good prices. Having had occasion in December, 1908, to send several batches grown in 6-inch pots to charity fairs in Boston, it was noticed that the geraniums were eagerly snapped up, while Lorraine begonias, cyclamens, azaleas and poinsettias were neglected. This would seem to dispose of the hackneyed argument that geraniums will not sell in winter. Of course they will sell, if they are properly grown and the colors are what people want.

For December Sales, Start Now.

To secure a good lot of geraniums for blooming in December, 1909, the cuttings should be started about the end of February. Let them dry a little in the sun before potting them and trim off the leaves quite closely. Use 2-inch pots for each cutting, and for compost a mixture of loam, leaf-mold and plenty of sand will be found suitable. Stand the little pots closely together on a bench over hot water or steam pipes, where they can get the benefit of some bottom heat. Give one soaking of water and then apply it sparingly until the cuttings are rooted. Never use any shade; full sun is required. Do no spraying overhead and a small proportion only will fail to root. Shift to 3-inch pots. At this stage use no leaf-mold. Later shifts can be given into 4½-inch and 6-inch pots. The latter size is a convenient one to flower the plants in, unless extra large specimens are desired. It is an advantage to have the pots well matted with roots at flowering time. This prevents undue leaf growth at the expense of flowers. For the final shift a compost consisting of two parts fibrous loam, one part dried cow manure, some sharp sand and a dash of bone or Clay's fertilizer will be found about right. Press the soil firmly in the pots at the final shift and, as the flowering time advances, keep the plants toned up by occasional doses of liquid manure and topdressings of such highly concentrated fertilizers as Bon Arbor or Clay's.

Some pinching will be necessary to keep the plants shapely and a few stakes may be needed as the flowering season advances. I have found it better to grow the winter geraniums under glass all the time. When stood outdoors, if the weather should happen to be drenchingly wet, the foliage will spot badly. No drying off is necessary to successfully bloom these geraniums. To have them follow chrysanthemums and be in good shape for Christmas, discontinue pinching the shoots at the beginning of September, and let flower spikes remain after the end of October. A house kept at 50 degrees at night, with a dry atmosphere and plenty of sun, will suit geraniums admirably. Plants carrying ten to twenty trusses per pot of such sorts as Paul Crampel, Jacquerie, Maxime Kovalevski and Reformator would be preferred to poinsettias by nine customers out of ten.

Some Good Sorts.

A selection that has proved satisfactory for winter flowering is as follows: Paul Crampel, brilliant scarlet, unsurpassed for both pot culture and bedding, 6-inch pots of this variety, if well grown, will carry fifteen to twenty big trusses of flower; Reformator, a heavier grower than Crampel and dwarfer in habit, color reddish scarlet, makes a fine pot plant; Maxime Kovalevski, a strong grower and free bloomer, the flowers are dazzling orange scarlet and a mass of them is very effective; Duke of Bedford, immense trusses of rich crimson colored flowers, the individual florets two and one-half inches in diameter, one of the finest of the English round-flowered type; The Sirdar, big, perfectly formed, bright scarlet trusses, very vigorous; Juste Olivier, striking, crimson rose shaded orange-red, big trusses carried on strong stalks, keeps a week in good condition in water; Cannell's Crimson Bedder, dark crimson, immense flowers; Claire Albaine, pure white, large trusses, a vigorous grower; Emile Zola, one of Lemoine's finest introductions, makes a superb plant, very floriferous, color rich salmon orange, one of the finest geraniums in commerce; J. M. Barrie, light rosy pink, immense individual flowers, one of the finest of the English round-flowered type; Ian Maclaren, color salmon orange, shaded with white, of same habit as Emile Zola, makes a superb pot plant, one which takes every visitor's eye; Pink Domino, a pleasing shade of rosy pink; Jacquerie, still hard to beat, either for pot culture or bedding, the immense crimson scarlet trusses produced on strong stalks, an ideal Christmas variety; one or two improved Jacqueries are advertised for the coming season and, if better than this good all-around sort, must be very fine.

Geranium The Sirdar.

Geranium Pink Domino.

The list of varieties can be extended almost indefinitely, but the foregoing list will be found to contain nothing but strictly first-class sorts, which should take well commercially. So many fine new sorts are being sent out annually that it will pay wide-awake growers to try a few having colors likely to prove popular.

BULB CULTURE IN THE SOUTH.

[A paper by Richard Eichling, of New Orleans, read before the New Orleans Horticultural Society, January 21, 1909.]

In reference to the heading of this article, I must state beforehand that the methods of forcing and growing of the various bulbs hereafter mentioned are only adaptable at a latitude of from 31 to 29 degrees. Of the different bulbs imported for either forcing or growing purposes, I have found the following the most profitable in our southern climate:

1. Hyacinths, Roman White and Dutch Miniature, single and double, in named varieties as follows: Baron Van Tuyll, white; Norma, shell-pink, Gigantea and Gertrude, bright pink; Cardinal Wiseman, red; Grand Maitre and Chas. Dickens, dark blue; Queen of the Blues, porcelain blue.

2. Narcissus Paper White, Trumpet Major, single yellow; Von Sion, double yellow.

3. Freesia refracta alba and candidissima.

4. Calla Æthiopica.

5. Lilium Harrisii and longiflorum giganteum for winter and spring flowers, and such as lancifolium album, roseum and rubrum and Lilium aureum for spring and summer.

6. Iris Hispanica, British Queen, white; Formosa, purple; Louise, lavender, and Belle Chinoise, yellow.

7. Tuberoses, single white.

The storing of the bulbs after their arrival is very important. The most suitable place is a well ventilated, dry room, provided with sufficient shelves alongside the walls. In case of severely cold weather, a safeguard against freezing must be provided for. In placing your bulbs on the shelves, make not more than five layers, to prevent them from getting heated, and keep a watchful eye on your stock during winter and especially toward spring, to discard all the softened and spoiled ones.

Hyacinths and Narcissi.

1. Roman Hyacinths and Narcissus Paper White, Trumpet Major and Von Sion can either be planted in the regulation bulb boxes for early forcing, or in the coldframe in parallel rows a half inch apart from side to side and one inch apart from top to bottom, with a covering of an inch and a half of soil. Cover the frame with boards in such a manner that the rain may run off. After the growths are about four inches above the soil, remove the boards and replace with well fitting, clear sashes. Ventilate according to the temperature; a board covering during frost is sufficient. Romans and Paper Whites planted in the coldframe about the middle of August will be in bloom by Christmas or New Year, the latter named even before that, about the middle of November, providing the weather has been favorable; but to be sure it is best to have your Christmas stock of Romans planted in boxes, so you can give them greenhouse heat if necessary. From January 1 you can pick continuously the same kind of long-stemmed, large white flowers, as if they had been forced indoors. To be always provided with fresh flowers, plant your bulbs in intervals of about two weeks up to the first of February; later than that is not advisable, as the bulbs then begin to get soft and produce short stems, with small flowers.

2. Hyacinths, Miniature Dutch and Narcissus Trumpet Major and Von Sion, grown in a coldframe in the same way as mentioned above, will yield very satisfactory results, saving time and money. Hyacinth and narcissus bulbs planted in boxes should be placed in a high, shaded spot, free to the north winds; covered with charcoal dust or light soil about four inches thick. As soon as the growths appear above the surface, bring your boxes inside and force them according to your necessity. If overstocked, bring your flowering boxes into an airy, cold and well shaded place and water sparingly between the rows; the coldframe stock in such a case shade with trellis shutters. From the time your bulbs are planted, either in boxes or in the coldframe, never allow them to get dry. Any loamy soil, mixed with one-third of either old cow or horse manure, will do.

Geranium Reformator.

Geranium Claire Albaine.

Freesia and Calla Aethiopica.

3. Freesia refracta alba and candidissima, the last named a newer pure white variety, should not be planted before the middle of September in boxes, the coldframe or in the open ground. With the coldframe process I obtained the best results, saving time. I had fine, long-stemmed flowers in season, and found that the bulbs had greatly increased in number. Freesias planted in boxes should have a watering of liquid manure once a week after the buds are formed until in bloom.

4. Calla Æthiopica can be profitably grown in pots, raised benches or solid beds. If grown in pots for selling purposes, 1½-inch to 2-inch sizes are good enough, but for the cut flower trade, 2-inch to 2½-inch is better. For the former use a 6-inch pot and for the latter a 7-inch or 8-inch, as the size of bulb demands. Crock your pots well, use a medium rich soil and plant so deep that only the tip of the bulb protrudes above the rim of the pot. Put the potted bulbs in a cool house under the bench, and water well. Keep them somewhat dry until partly rooted and the growths are from six to eight inches long; then place the plants on the bench about eight inches apart from pot to pot, both ways. Give them a layer of old cow manure, a free supply of water, and during sunny weather a frequent syringing. Renew the manure layers occasionally and, as soon as your plants have about four to five well developed leaves, water once a week with liquid cow manure. Never allow more than four to five leaves on the plant, as each additional one takes part of the strength from your plants, as well as from the the flowers.

Callas grown on the bench or in the solid bed should be provided with a good drainage, the soil made somewhat richer than for potting purposes. With the watering be more careful; the moisture will remain longer and the danger of your plants rotting off is greater. When in full growth, feed in the same way as is done by pot culture; likewise cut all unnecessary leaves off. Plant the bulbs neck deep and from eight to ten inches apart. Use a well ventilated house and give a night temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees. It is best to plant fresh bulbs every season; carried over stock will not even justify the labor of potting or planting.

Lilium Harrisii and Longiflorum.

5. Lilium Harrisii and longiflorum giganteum are real money-makers when successfully grown and brought into the market at the proper season, especially at Easter. During the last ten years that I have been growing Harrisii in the south, I came to the conclusion that the success depends a great deal on the condition of the bulbs and the proper house after the plants are about one foot high. As soon as the stock arrives it should be planted and placed either in a cool house under the bench or in a deep coldframe, and in the latter instance covered with boards. Select your bulbs according to size; plant seven-by-nines one in a 6-inch pot, and in case you get five-by-sevens, two fives in a 6-inch pot. Crock the pots well. Use a little old cow manure on the bottom, which will help the young growing plants considerably, and have the bulbs covered with one and a half inches of soil, which allows the top roots to get a good hold and adds to the feeding of the plants and buds later on. Any good half-rich loam will do for potting.

After the growth is about three inches long, take the plants from under the bench and coldframe and place in a cool, half-shaded house or frame for about ten days, to get the plants accustomed to the light and to stiffen up. After that, grow them on in the open coldframe until it is time to bring them inside for forcing, and expose those growing in the house to the full sun. Water carefully, pot by pot, only what is getting dry after the bulbs are planted, but never let them get dry after the plants have once a good root-ball, and on sunny days syringe the growing stock well.

Plants about two feet high can easily be brought into the forcing house under a night temperature up to 75 degrees, but keep the plants always well syringed by day and twice during the night. To all plants of such a size, it does not matter if in the forcing house or not, give a manure watering once a week until the buds begin to show color. It is advisable to harden off all plants partly in bloom and not used immediately in a cool, shaded house; the flowers open slower and will last longer. If you have no facility to bring your stock of bulbs intended for later planting into cold storage, make arrangements with your shipper to send them on at your own convenience, because lily bulbs, even if taken out of the boxes, will not keep as well as hyacinths or narcissi in our southern climate.

On account of the scarcity of pure, undiseased Bermuda stock, the Japanese Lilium longiflorum giganteum has to a great extent taken its place. These bulbs, free from any disease, are grown in the same manner as the Bermudas, and if kept during winter in cold storage, can be planted in a coldframe as late as the middle of April, giving you a fine crop from the end of May until July.

Geranium Juste Olivier.

Geranium Maxine Kovalevski.

Of the spring and summer flowering Japanese varieties, I have found lancifolium album, roseum, rubrum, also Lilium aureum, the easiest to grow, ready sellers as pot plants and very useful as fancy cut flowers. Plant your fresh stock during the winter months; a late planting may not give the expected results. I would not recommend the planting of cold storage bulbs of any variety during summer, because they bring only from one to three flowers and a great many lose their flowering germ entirely. Northern cold storage stock of Lilium giganteum for early winter is all right.

Iris Hispanica and Tuberoses.

6. Iris Hispanica, in the previously named varieties, cannot be highly enough recommended as a prolific bloomer. Plant the bulbs during the middle of October in the open ground, not too low located, in medium rich soil, one inch and a half apart in the rows and about five inches from row to row, and cover them a little over an inch with soil. Give a good watering after planting. Keep the bulbs partly dry in the beginning, but, as soon as the growths start, do not allow them to get dry. The flowering season lasts from the middle of March until the middle of April, which often happens to be Easter time, when such flowers are most in demand.

7. Tuberoses, single, are the only ones to plant successfully and profitably in the south. The bulbs are to be planted in rows during the month of March, either single or in clumps, according to the stock and space on hand, in a rich soil with a facility to drain off during heavy rains. After the plants are growing, water well during dry spells and especially when they are in bloom. The flowering season lasts from July until sometimes the end of November, providing we have not too wet a spring or summer, which proves always disastrous for tuberoses. The flowers of this species open freely and the spikes are more graceful than the ones of the double variety. Let the plants dry off when the season is over, dig them up in clumps and store away in a cool, dry place until the shipping and planting season begins.

Ranunculus, anemones, double and single; tulips, double and single; Scilla Sibirica, crocus, Lilium candidum, etc., are not profitable to grow below a latitude of 32 degrees, because these bulbs require a more severe winter to get well rooted, in order to produce good, salable flowers.

In concluding my article, I may add that the aforesaid methods of growing flowers from bulbs in the south are practiced by me at the present time, after an experience of about three years up north and fifteen years in the south. Although this culture is very widely known, it would give me great pleasure and gratification if these few remarks would in some way or another be of assistance to any member of the New Orleans Horticultural Society.

EDUCATION IN FLORICULTURE.

A Correspondence Course.

I noticed in the Review of January 21 an inquiry by G. T. D. about a correspondence course in floriculture, landscape gardening, etc. In reply I would say that if G. T. D. will address the Home Correspondence School, Springfield, Mass., he will receive the information he desires.

I have just finished taking a course in landscape gardening and found it quite a help. William Gerlach.

More Details.

In the Review of January 21, G. T. D. inquires whether there are any agricultural schools that give correspondence courses in floriculture or landscape gardening. I would inform him that the Home Correspondence School, Main street, Springfield, Mass., gives one or both of the foregoing courses, or a course on carnation culture, any one of the three for $12 cash, or $15 on the monthly payment plan—$3 down and $3 per month. The same school also has a course in horticulture for $20 cash or $25 in monthly payments.

I can speak from experience as to the course in landscape gardening. It consists of seventeen lessons, taken from Maynard's "Landscape Gardening." The course is gotten up by Professors Craig and Coit, of Cornell University. It is a great help to beginners and well worth the money.

Anyone taking one or all of these courses, plus Scott's "Florists' Manual" and the Review, will be on the road to success, if he keeps his eyes and ears open and is not afraid to ask questions.

At the Pennsylvania State College a practical course already is given in the growing of cut flowers and decorative plants. Several lectures are devoted to window-gardening and the growing of flowers in the home grounds. The course is given in the second semester and consists of thirty-four lectures and recitations and seventeen practicum periods of two hours each. The Pennsylvania legislature at this session will be asked to appropriate about $25,000 for the erection of greenhouses at the State College. With such a range, the college will be in a position to give most complete courses on all lines of floricultural work.

R. L. Watts, professor of horticulture, is in charge of the department. Prof. J. P. Pillsbury is instructor in floriculture. The course in horticulture, which includes floriculture, among many other things, provides specially for the study of the following topics:

Plant Propagation.—A consideration of the methods by which plants are propagated; germination and testing of seeds; hard and soft wood cuttings; grafting, budding, propagation by division and layerage. Special attention is given to the methods most commonly employed by market gardeners, florists and nurserymen.

Greenhouse Construction. — A course on the construction and heating of various types of greenhouses used on private grounds and by commercial establishments. Among the problems considered are the forms of houses, materials used in construction; heating by flues, hot water and steam; various types of boilers and the installation of heating plants.

Prof. J. P. Pillsbury.

Vegetable Forcing.—A study of the principles of vegetable forcing in coldframes, hotbeds and greenhouses. Some of the vegetables considered are the tomato, lettuce, radish, cauliflower, asparagus, cucumber, rhubarb and mushroom.

Plant Breeding.—A study of the principles of plant breeding and their application to the improvement of fruits, vegetables, flowers and ornamental trees, shrubs and vines.

Landscape Gardening.—The principles of landscape gardening are studied and applied to the planting and beautifying of home grounds, school grounds, parks and streets. The trees, shrubs, vines and plants on the college campus are particularly valuable in furnishing material for practicum work.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—O. A. C. Oehmler, of the Gude Bros. Co., recently met with a painful accident while taking down a decoration. Two of his toes were crushed, but he hoped that in a few days he would be able to attend to his duties as usual.

STIGMONOSE AND LEAF SPOT.

I send you two shoots of my Rose-pink Enchantress. This disease started about five weeks ago and spread all over the house. As soon as the plants are affected, they grow poorly. I am afraid I may lose the whole crop and shall be very thankful to you if you will tell me what kind of disease it is and what is the remedy for it. C. T.

Most of the light spots on or in the foliage seem to be stigmonose, though there seem to be some spots of the common leaf spot. For the former you can do but little, except to give your plants a very moderate diet, careful watering and abundant ventilation. Select your cuttings for next season's stock carefully, from plants which do not show this disease. In this way you may gradually work out of the disease. The Enchantress varieties, being rapid and succulent growing sorts, are fast getting filled up with this disease, and, unless the most rigid selection of cuttings is practiced during the next few years, this group of varieties will soon pass out of cultivation.

For the spot disease use Bordeaux mixture. You can buy this in soluble form, to be diluted to the proper strength. Apply about once each week and wash off with a fresh water spray before applying each succeeding dose. Choose a bright day for this.

Drop a pinch of sulphur here and there on the steam pipes, to keep the air pure and sweet. A. F. J. B.

LAWSON THE SECOND YEAR.

We hear much about Lawson carnations running out and are inclined to share the same opinion. But before we drop this grand old variety from our list we want to give the trade the benefit of our experience and observations of this variety grown the second season without replanting.

Two years ago we had two benches that looked good to us late in spring, and we decided to run them over another season. During June we topped all the shoots that were beginning to run up to bud. We kept them well fed and properly syringed and watered during the summer, and kept the house as cool as possible at all times. We applied a thick mulch of rich compost and gave the plants every encouragement to make a good growth. The way those plants bloomed last winter was a sight to see. They started in a little late, about the last part of October, but from then on were a wealth of fine blooms on good stems throughout the winter, producing much more heavily than the first season. Our only reason for not having some of this variety the second season this winter is that we did not plant any new benches of it last year. One of our neighbors, though, has a bench in its second year this winter, which gave him the same results as we got from ours last winter. He topped his a little earlier in the season than we did, and consequently began cutting that much earlier.

We would hesitate to recommend this system of growing carnations for all varieties, but with Lawson we unhesitatingly recommend it. Care must, however, be taken to give the best of treatment. As soon as the spring crop is off, the plants should confine all their attention to making a strong growth. We shall try this system with several varieties this coming season in solid beds. Our plan is to top them during April and May, instead of June, and thus throw the crop earlier. Our previous experiment, as well as that of our neighbor, was made with plants on shallow wooden benches of the prevailing type. Baur Floral Co.

TWO PIERSON CARNATIONS.

At the Indianapolis convention of the Carnation Society one of the varieties to attract attention was a dark pink sport of Winsor, which originated with the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y. The judges gave this a certificate, scoring it 85 points. Mr. Pierson is of the opinion that this will with many growers take the place so long occupied by Lawson. The character of growth of Winsor is well known. The dark pink sport is like the parent in everything except color. This is more even than in Lawson, which will add considerably to its market value.

A Pierson seedling which was well liked at Indianapolis was No. 30, white, which secured a certificate of merit, scoring 86 points. There seems less opportunity for white carnations than for dark pinks, but at the Pierson establishment No. 30 is highly thought of.

CARNATION MAY.

Carnation May has been advertised as the most profitable for florists. I should like to know in what way. Mine are not growing much. They come semi-double and short-stemmed, but the plants were received late. I want to give it another trial next year, and would like some hints on the best way to grow this variety.

M.

Our firm introduced the variety May last season, and one of the strongest points we claimed for it was freedom and profitableness. The bloom is of medium size, grading up nicely with Bountiful, Lawson, Victory, etc., just as we said in our ads. It is such a free, early and continuous bloomer, however, that it has been more profitable to us than the Enchantress varieties. This season, however, we have had to cut into our plants so much for cuttings that we are not getting the maximum number of blooms, by far.

As to its peculiarities, we can say that it has none. All it wants is reasonably good culture. Give it a fairly early start as a cutting. Pot, plant and top just as you would any other carnation. Lift about August 1 and let it come into bloom whenever you can use the blooms. It naturally makes a fine plant and bushes out with moderate topping, and it lifts easily.

We have found a few plants which throw single blooms, and we try to avoid these in taking cuttings. There never have been enough of these, however, to cut any figure. We have also had a number of plants sport into a deep rose shade of color. Some came with a solid color, while most of the blooms came streaked. We have worked up a stock of some 500 plants of the solid-colored sport, which we have blooming here this season. We expect this to be our main variety in rose-pink next season, as we shall have some 5,000 plants to bench.

We cite this latter feature merely to show that we really believe the variety May and its sports to be all that we claimed for May when we introduced it. We are growing about 2,500 May this year for blooming, as against 1,500 Enchantress, and we are planning about the same proportion for next season. We would not do this if the variety did not really pay us to grow. We have long ago passed the stage where we would grow a variety of our own raising just because it was our own. We grow carnations for profit, and the most profitable varieties are what we are aiming to grow, regardless of who the raiser may be.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Show Pelargoniums.

With the increasing sunlight and lengthening days, pelargoniums are now growing quite rapidly and any which have not been shifted into their flowering pots should be potted as soon as possible. For compost use two parts fibrous loam and one part old dried cow manure, also adding a dash of fine bone and sand. Ram the compost in the pots firmly and be sure the drainage is efficient. Stand the plants in a cool, light, airy house and space them out before they become crowded. Any pinching should be discontinued after this date, or the blooming period will be late. These showy pelargoniums are of no use for bedding out, but make good house plants and will flower quite a long time on a shaded piazza if kept well watered. Their arch enemy, green aphis, must never be allowed any quarter. White fly also has a special liking for these pelargoniums. Hydrocyanic acid gas is the only remedy. Use it on a cool night. Experience has shown that two ounces sulphuric acid, two ounces water and one ounce potassium cyanide for a house 20x50 will overcome the white fly. Leave the jar in all night, being sure to lock the door and allow no one to enter.

Cinerarias.

Plants of the early batch of cinerarias are now in flower. These have nice foliage right down to the pots and sell well. As house plants they are satisfactory until they get an attack of green aphis. Their large, showy flowers seem to have a peculiar attraction for many retail purchasers. Cinerarias can hardly be grown too cool; anything short of absolute freezing suits them to a nicety. They are speedily ruined in a high temperature and simply will not stand forcing.

The late batch should now be in their flowering pots and as the sun's rays are now getting quite strong, a light shade on the glass should be afforded, or, better still, a length of shading cloth be hung over them. Pots well filled with roots should be afforded liquid manure once in four or five days. Go slow on chemicals or you will find the foliage lying down quite limp on sunny days.

Spiraeas.

Any spiræas wanted for Easter must now be moved into heat without delay. The common variety, S. Japonica, comes in ahead of the other varieties, but its inferiority to such sorts as Gladstone, Washington, compacta and astilboides is so pronounced that many growers have now dropped the old variety and are growing the newer sorts. Spiræas grow fast in a warm house and will require spacing out frequently. They can hardly be overwatered, and later in the season it pays to place a saucer under each one. Go light on fumigation when your spiræas are growing. Remember that they will stand even less smoke than adiantums. Either place the plants on the floor or cover with paper, if you must fumigate other plants in the house where they are growing.

Lilies.

How are the Easter lilies coming along? To be absolutely sure of your plants being in on time, you should be able to see and count the flower buds the first week in March. If you cannot do this, your plants will need hurrying. A night temperature of 60 degrees should be allowed plants which are a little backward; increase the heat 5 degrees after buds show. If any plants are already showing buds, they must be retarded. Do not, however, rush them from a temperature of 60 degrees to one of 40 or 45 degrees, or you will probably ruin most of the buds. A house kept at 50 degrees will suit them. As the buds open they can have a house several degrees cooler.

To time lilies exactly needs a lot of care and judgment. The bulbs from one batch would flower over a space of three months if uniformly treated. Much moving around of backward plants into heat, and retarding of too advanced ones will be necessary during the next few weeks. Spray the plants overhead once or twice a day and see that they do not suffer from want of water. Do not let up on the usual fumigating, or aphis will soon cause trouble.

Rhododendrons.

Rhododendrons, if nicely bloomed, make salable Easter plants, the pink and white colors being the best sellers. The variety Pink Pearl, still scarce and high in price, is the queen of the family. Such sorts as album elegans, Boule de Niege, delicatissimum and floriosum make good pot plants. Cunningham's White is the best early forcing variety, coming in a fortnight ahead of the other kinds named. These rhododendrons, if placed now in a temperature of 50 degrees and syringed twice a day, will be along in nice season for Easter. When partially expanded, they may be given cooler quarters.

Kalmia Latifolia.

Quite a few kalmias, or mountain laurels, are in evidence at the better class stores each Easter. There is no special treatment required to flower them successfully. If the plants, which should have been well budded, were potted up in late fall, all the better, but this work can still be done. They will come into flower in seven or eight weeks in a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees and can be treated similarly to the rhododendrons. All these shrubs appreciate frequent sprayings overhead.

Sweet Peas.

Sweet peas are now growing rapidly and the length and strength of flower stems will soon reach their maximum. A night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees suits plants which are flowering. This is exceeded by many growers, but our experience has been that quality has generally been lacking where they have been grown warmer. More abundant water supplies and free ventilation will be needed to keep the vines in a healthy, growing condition. Do not pick the flowers in any haphazard manner. Go over certain rows thoroughly each day and then give them two or three days' rest. Pick the flowers clean; allow none to go to seed. Pull up any dead haulm and be sure not to neglect the ties, or twisted, unsalable flower stems will speedily result. Be sure you have supports in readiness for the late batches. It is really surprising how fast they grow now.

To secure a good, early batch outdoors, start a quantity of seeds in a cool house about February 20. Place three or four seeds in a 3-inch pot. These can later be placed in a frame and planted outdoors in April. You will get far finer and earlier flowers from seed started in this way, as compared with what you may sow in the open six weeks hence.

Rambler Roses.

Rambler rose plants wanted for Easter flowering should by now have broken freely and have shoots several inches long. Be sure they have a sunny house and avoid cold draughts, which will speedily cause an attack of mildew. There will be little danger from red spider if you keep a moist, genial atmosphere and use the spray nozzle on bright days. Keep the plants well spaced as they grow. Elevate any specially good ones on stands, being sure in such cases that they are watered carefully. A temperature of 55 degrees at night should not be exceeded for these ramblers, if you want them to be strong and to carry large, well-colored trusses of flowers.

Schizanthus.

Easter is two months away and plants of the popular Schizanthus Wisetonensis can now go into their blooming pots. Grow them cool and airy to keep them short and stocky. Discontinue pinching. Afford one or two shoot supports. Water freely and afford liquid manure twice a week when the roots have filled the pots. This schizanthus is still much of an Easter novelty. It pleases purchasers and there would seem to be a market for more of it.

A BUFFALO STORE.

Jacob N. Bailey, manager of the Buffalo Cut Flower Co., sends the photograph of his establishment reproduced herewith. The concern is one of the younger wholesale houses, but Mr. Bailey has had a long training in the business and western New York is steadily gaining importance in all departments of the flower business.

STOCK PLANTS.

Will you kindly let me know how I shall take care of my chrysanthemum stock plants? I am always bothered with their running up too tall before time for taking cuttings. Shall I keep them cut back? And how tall shall they be before doing so? Also, about the cutting of same after they are potted; how tall shall I let them grow before cutting them back, and how far from the ground would you cut them? L. A. G.

The proper care of the stock plants is a subject that many florists seem to give little thought to, and yet on the condition of the stock plants depends absolutely the success or otherwise of the next year's crop.

In many places they are dropped down under the bench as soon as the room they have occupied is needed for something else, and then surprise and disgust are expressed, a month or two later, when it is found that the stock plants are either dead or making weak cuttings. Almost every florist has a cold house where he grows violets or holds back azaleas and such stock, and such a house, where the night temperature is around 40 degrees, is the ideal place to rest the mum stock. Take them up from the bench and put into flats or pots in new soil and give a good watering to settle the soil. Then put them in the cold house in a light, airy position. Keep them on the dry side and if there was any fly on them when they were taken from the bench, either dust them well with tobacco dust or spread stems around them.

In such a position the plants make little growth and never run up tall, as L. A. G. says, but stool out so that by March there is a goodly number of fine, healthy cuttings ready to be taken. Also, the plants, not being weakened, are in shape to keep on producing good shoots. The mum, while almost a hardy plant, is never really dormant, and the low temperature, while not enough to induce conditions of growth described by L. A. G., is still enough to keep the plant on the move.

Shoots that are running up too tall should be cut back so that they will break again. The tops can be rooted if needed and potted or boxed up, and the tops of these in turn can be used for cuttings. As to how tall plants should be before they are cut down again, it is not material. If the top is not wanted for a cutting the tip can be pinched out as soon as the young plant is growing nicely, and successive pinchings will keep the plant just as dwarf as one wishes. It is a mistake to let the plant run up a foot or more in height and then cut it down into the hard wood. Such a plant does not break strongly again and the check is severe, whereas pinching the young, soft shoots does practically no harm. If it is intended to grow bush plants this pinching can be continued till late in July; in fact, must be continued to keep the plant within bounds and furnish more shoots; but if it is desired to grow one or two flowers to a plant it is an easy matter to take up as many shoots as are needed, say June 1, and as soon as these shoots have a good headway the plant will put all its energy into them, and the useless wood at the base of the plant can be cut away.

Some growers seem to think that the plants to be set out on the benches must be propagated at just such a time and moved along without any check, or pinching, or anything else. While such a method may be the ideal way, it is not the only way by any means, and I have many times seen plants that had been doing duty as stock plants and been cut over half a dozen times go ahead and make a wonderful growth just as soon as they got their head, so to speak, and were allowed to run up for flowering shoots. C. H. T.

OBITUARY.

W. C. Krick.

W. C. Krick, Brooklyn, N. Y., died Sunday, February 7, and was buried February 10 with Masonic honors. Mr. Krick was widely known in the trade as the manufacturer of an immortelle letter for use in design work, a pot hanger, and other useful contrivances.

Alex Von Asche.

Alex Von Asche, of Woodside, L. I., N. Y., died February 4. He was a veteran rose grower for the New York market and was highly esteemed by all who knew him.

Alex N. Kay.

Alex N. Kay, of Churchill, O., died of pneumonia, February 2, at the age of 70 years.

Lorenzo G. Yates.

Lorenzo G. Yates, a horticulturist of Santa Barbara, Cal., died January 31, at the age of 77 years. He had acquired a wide reputation as a specialist in the ferns of the Pacific coast. He was born in England.

Hermann Wildpret.

Hermann Joseph Wildpret, a well-known gardener of Teneriffe, Canary Islands, died December 18, 1908. He was born in Rheinfelden, Switzerland, October 5, 1834. Immediately after leaving school he took up gardening and served a long and vigorous apprenticeship. At the age of 22 years he left for Santa Cruz, Teneriffe. At first he occupied a very modest position, but his untiring zeal and sound knowledge of floriculture soon won him the attention and confidence of his superiors and in a short time he was appointed superintendent of public gardens at Orotava, Teneriffe. This position he occupied for over thirty-five years. His influence was soon felt, not only in Orotava, but on all the Canary Islands, for he set about introducing many new varieties of plants, and improving and naming many which had hitherto grown wild on the islands. For instance, upon his arrival only one palm was grown in Teneriffe, namely, Phœnix Canariensis, while now one will find over 100 varieties, nearly all of which were introduced by him. But on account of his nationality, being a stranger in a strange land, he had very many enemies, who finally succeeded in ousting him from his position. Mr. Wildpret, being then well advanced in years, did not seek a new position, but went into retirement, contributing articles to the various European trade papers.

MARIE LOUISE VIOLETS.

Enclosed are some Marie Louise violet buds. Will you please tell me if the petals are white when the bud first breaks? H. W. A.

The buds on all the double blue violets are of a pale color when they first appear. In winter they come even lighter than they do later in the season, and might quite naturally be mistaken for Comte de Brazza or Swanley White by anyone not accustomed to their culture. C. W.

KEARNEY, NEB.—Fire originating in Green & Wiley's heating plant, in the evening of January 29, partly destroyed three of their greenhouses. Cold and broken glass wrought further damage. The insurance had expired only a few days before.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Can anyone see signs that Enchantress is running out?

The salesman should be an optimist, but a pessimist frequently is a safe creditman and good collector.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society has issued the premium list for its third spring exhibition, to be held March 24 to 26.

The S. A. F. medals and certificates awarded at the national flower show have all been delivered. The silver gilt medal is an especially handsome thing.

It is a pleasure to note that reports on last week's business are almost all favorable. Conditions seem to be nearly normal again in all sections of the country.

Messrs. Hugh Low & Co., well known English growers and among the first to take up American carnations, have put on the British market a special carnation fertilizer, in tins.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

Don't ignore a complaint; tell the man you can't do anything for him, if you feel that way, but by all means answer his letter, for the protection of your own reputation and that of the trade at large.

Branches of forsythias, spiræas, such as Thunbergii and prunifolia, Cydonia Japonica and others, will open nicely if placed in water in a warm greenhouse, and make a welcome addition for window or table decorations.

The Cincinnati florists are good advertisers and they know that nothing sells one's wares so quickly as does a satisfactory sample. So they are preparing to hand out to the S. A. F. executive committee, when it meets in March, a sample of the hospitality with which the society will be received in August. The executive board will be banqueted.

WHO NEEDS ORDERS?

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time:

Our advertisement is taking all we can produce; we are working today on an order for 20,000 geraniums which we credit to the Review. R. VINCENT, JR., & SONS CO.
White Marsh, Md., Feb. 1, 1909.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The spring exhibition of the American Rose Society is to be held in the Iroquois hotel, Buffalo. The proposition is advanced to make it a free exhibit; in other words, to popularize it to the fullest extent. Buffalo has a large population and Vice-president Kasting is active; his firm will receive any exhibits sent to them. J. Rowland Cloudsley, secretary of the Buffalo Florists' Club, 584 Main street, is appointed manager of exhibits.

Special prizes have come from various parties not mentioned in the preliminary schedule which has been distributed. Various inquiries are coming concerning exhibits. The pot rose class seems to be awake. The rose is the state flower of New York. B. Hammond, Sec'y.

ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will hold its annual meeting at Springfield next week, February 16 and 17. The Springfield Florists' Club has been hard at work for weeks, making arrangements for the entertainment of the large number of visitors who are expected. There will be a large trades display in Arion hall, and the business sessions will be held in an adjoining audience room. It is largely due to the work of this society that the state legislature two years ago made an appropriation of $15,000 for the study of florists' problems by the State Agricultural College, and Dean Davenport, of the State University, will be present at this meeting to tell what has been done in behalf of the trade and to outline the work in mind. It is planned to ask the legislature for an appropriation of $35,000 for the next two years and it is hoped the convention this year will be a specially good one, because the state legislature is now in session at Springfield and many legislators will attend the convention.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

This is Lincoln centenary week, with its many dinners, local and elsewhere; Valentine's week, with its special demand for violets, and automobile show week in Chicago, with its decorations and festivities—so, if anyone with good stock fails to have his share of the business, it's because he doesn't advertise.

Last week made a good record, in spite of increased supplies and lower prices on a number of important items. Most wholesale houses had at least as good a week as a year ago, and some of them better, which is worthy of note because at this date last year business was excellent; the slump, due mostly to the financial panic, did not hit this market until the latter part of February. This week starts with a good demand in all departments and excellent prospects for the later days, when the Valentine's day special demand will become the principal factor, following the Lincoln dinners February 12.

There has been an increase in supplies of practically all stock except Beauties and violets. The Beauty crops are going down at a date when they usually increase, and prices have stiffened. Violets evidently are being held back for the extra demand for Valentine's day. The wholesalers all report having booked a large number of orders, but say the retailers manifest a reluctance to leave orders at more than $7.50 per thousand. The sentiment is that the best violets will be worth $10 per thousand, and perhaps more, by February 13, although the supply is sure to be large.

The rose market continues excellent, although there was, at the beginning of the week, an inclination to shade prices. Maid and Bride are in better crop and long Richmond are equal to all requirements. Killarney is less plentiful than it was. The weather last week was unfavorable for quality and many of the roses are soft. Now we have winter again and its continuance a few days, as the weather-man predicts, will stiffen the rose market.

Carnations have become almost a glut and prices are at a lower point than at any time this winter. Much of the stock is of fancy quality and a large business is being done as a result of the liberal supplies and reasonable prices; but wholesalers and growers both would be glad to see some reduction in supply and advance in average prices. White now sells better than the colored varieties.

All bulbous stock is plentiful and selling at low prices. Callas, as well as Harrisii, are lower. Paper Whites and freesia are hard to move. A few fancy tulips bring fair prices, but their sale is limited.

Conditions remain normal in the green goods market, except that a shortening in the supply of Asparagus plumosus in bunches has caused an advance in price on this item.

Plans of Hoerber Bros.

Much interest was created by the announcement in the REVIEW, a few weeks ago, of the big new plant to be erected at Des Plaines. The plans of Hoerber Bros. are now sufficiently developed so that some further details can be given. Thirty-four acres of land were purchased, just west of the town, and a railroad switch will be the first thing put in. Most of the material has been purchased for ten houses 27x300. The Foley Mfg. Co. has the order and has begun running the millwork. A contract has been made for the erection of the structures with all possible speed. Frank Benthey, Jr., has been engaged as grower. He is the third son of Frank Benthey and has been at the Coatsworth greenhouses at New Castle ever since the plant was started, where he has had a good training under his uncle, Otto Benthey, who is recognized as a first-class rose grower. Seven of the new houses are to be planted to roses and three to carnations.

One of the proprietors will live on the place and, while not a florist, will give the business end his personal attention. It is the intention to add to the glass as rapidly as possible and, as soon as the production warrants, a wholesale store will be opened somewhere in the market district, though plans of this character, like cut flower prices, are always subject to change without notice.

The proprietors are the sons of J. L. Hoerber, of the Hoerber Brewing Co., on West Twenty-first street.

A New Maywood Plant.

Henry Wagner and a partner, Mr. Haltner, both of Milwaukee, have bought seven acres of land at Maywood and propose at once to erect 20,000 feet of glass for carnations and other stock for the Chicago market. The location is just across the street from the new range of the Albert Amling Co. and adjoining that of Wm. Amling. Neither Mr. Wagner nor Mr. Haltner is a florist, but each proposes to become one in the least possible time and both will give personal attention to the business and work in the greenhouses.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club's meeting February 4 was a grand finale for the administration of President Kill and a happy augury for the success of the administration of President Asmus, who took up the reins that evening. The other new officers, Recording Secretary J. H. Pepper and Financial Secretary Frank Johnson, also were installed. The retiring president was presented with a handsome watch fob as a souvenir of his term of office.

E. F. Winterson and George Asmus made a record by proposing ten new candidates for membership, as follows: Emil Maerz, 242 South Winchester avenue; Paul Kubish, 45 Wabash avenue; Frank Ayers, 396 Ontario street; F. Haage, 718 North Leavitt street; F. Krause, 62 Racine avenue; Chas. Zapfe, 753 Thorndale avenue; R. F. Simons, 848 West Harrison street; F. Merker, 1603 West Twenty-second street; Charles Bemish, 45 Wabash avenue, and George Armbrust, of Oak Park. Chas. S. McCauley, of Geneva, also was proposed. Robert Lange and H. A. Olson were elected to membership. Chas. F. Rohr resigned. Many pledges of efforts to increase the membership were made.

H. N. Bruns, for the finance committee, reported that the financial operations for the year were as follows:

Balance from 1907	$ 349.39
Receipts in 1908	1,079.07
Total	$1,428.46
Expenditures in 1908	989.88
Balance	$ 438.58

President Asmus announced his committee appointments, as follows:

Revision of by-laws—A. T. Hey, L. Coatsworth, H. B. Howard.

Finance—H. N. Bruns, J. F. Klimmer, Walter Scott.

Transportation—P. J. Foley, August Poehlmann, A. T. Pyfer.

Good of the Club—Ed Enders, Frank Pasternick, A. F. Longren.

Sports—D. Erickson.

A. T. Hey spoke of the work of the Illinois State Florists' Association and its meeting at Springfield February 16 and 17. He said the legislature will be asked to appropriate $35,000 for the work for florists recently started at the State University. On the morning of February 17 it is planned to put a bunch of carnations on the desk of every member of the legislature. At least 4,000 will be required. Those who would like to contribute flowers can ship in care of A. C. Brown, Springfield. A good trade display is expected at next week's meeting. Certificates will be awarded to worthy novelties. After the discussion A. F. Longren booked over a dozen new members for the state society.

Joseph Kohout and others commented on the Indianapolis carnation exhibition, and it was voted to make the discussion of a fall flower show a special order for next meeting.

Various Notes.

Word has been received that Herbert Heller, of Heller Bros., proprietors of the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind., is ill at St. Vincent's hospital, Indianapolis, where he was operated upon February 5 and an abdominal tumor removed.

After many years at the corner of Michigan avenue and Van Buren street, O. J. Friedman has received notice to vacate May 1—a skyscraper is to go up on the site. Mr. Beaumont said February 9 that Mr. Friedman had not yet decided on new quarters, a store on the Jackson boulevard side of the Wellington hotel and another on Michigan avenue being under consideration. Miss Nell M. Sisler, for many years with E. H. Hunt, is now bookkeeper for Friedman.

It is reported that Wendland & Keimel, at Elmhurst, are preparing to double their plant this season. They have made a first-class success with Killarney this winter.

town to see the auto show at the Coliseum.

Wm. Pfund recently sold his greenhouses at Oak Park to John Wayranch and Karl Schmidt, who are doing business as the Washington Boulevard Floral Co. The place contains about 5,000 feet of glass. Mr. Pfund plans to start in the nursery and landscape business.

Axel Aggerholm, formerly manager of the Mosbaek Greenhouse Co., at Onarga, Ill., is now with Swain Nelson & Sons Co., the nurserymen at Glenview.

The George Wittbold Co. put up a decoration at about $2,000 for the automobile show that is on at the Coliseum this week. The E. F. Winterson Co. made up a lot of special laurel wreathing for it. About 5,000 feet of window-boxes, almost a mile, were used.

The John Davis Co. says that in any representations made to the legislature as to the importance of the greenhouse industry of the state, emphasis should be laid on the value of the florists' patronage to other representative lines. For instance, the John Davis Co. estimates that in Chicago last year jobbers sold probably $500,000 worth of pipe and fittings that are now doing duty in greenhouse heating.

O. P. Bassett has postponed his trip south, in order to attend the automobile show this week. He now has only four automobiles, and feels some need of a new one.

Peter Haerens, who has for several years been counted one of the best growers on Peter Reinberg's staff, has, with a partner named Steinmetz, bought the Henry Phillip greenhouses in Rogers Park. The place is now under lease to a lettuce grower and possession is not to be given until August 1. The first season carnations are to be grown, but as rapidly as possible the place will be turned into roses. Mr. Haerens made his first success as a rose grower with Richmond the year that it came out.

E. ALLAN PEIRCE, Sec., Waltham, Mass.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports a remarkable sale for the heart-shaped, red Valentine boxes. More orders have been received than could be filled, for the factory only makes these up to order. This is a point worth remembering, so that next season the retailers can buy early and get all that they want.

John Kruchten says that his father, Nick Kruchten, is having better results with carnations this season than at any time in the last three or four years.

C. W. McKellar is again in the plant business, having some nice cyclamens.

Vaughan & Sperry reported February 8 that they already had booked more orders for violets for Valentine's use than they ever had for any one holiday before. And last Valentine's day was the best previous record.

N. J. Wietor spends the pleasant afternoons showing the north side owners of fast horses what it really is to have a thoroughbred. Mr. Wietor's carriage mare has a pacing record of 2:05, and is the fastest road horse on the north side. No automobile for him.

Peter Reinberg was out in the greenhouses last week within an hour of his return from the hospital, and as a result of overexertion has spent some of the following days in bed. He is getting along nicely, but is not yet strong.

E. E. Pieser says that average prices are now almost as good as a year ago. He says he thinks the difference at one time was as much as thirty per cent below last year, but that there has been a steady advance in average prices since about January 18.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

"It has been the best week of the year," said many in the wholesale section Saturday evening. Prices were firm and everything of value was sold in a way that indicated a healthful retail demand. Beauties were aggressive at 75 cents for the best, and all roses were held at an advance over values that have prevailed since Christmas. Carnations were especially strong. Valley and lilies were firmer and orchids are again nearer the pedestal where they belong. Even the modest violet has lifted up its drooping head. The best sold for 60 cents per hundred February 6 and this week a top of 75 cents may be confidently expected. The windows are now gay with daffodils.

Last week's cold wave was not of long duration. From 5 degrees the transition to 35 degrees was made in a day. The week ended with almost a spring temperature. Now another chilly snap is coming out of the west.

new crop and larger shipments. In fact, these have already begun and Monday, February 8, the tendency of values was slightly downward. A twenty-five per cent recession is predicted by some of the experts before the week is over.

Club Meeting.

The New York Florists' Club had a splendid meeting Monday evening, February 8, with the largest attendance thus far this winter, an excellent exhibition and sustained interest until a late hour. It was carnation night and the exhibits seldom have been more numerous and never of better quality. The prize for the best twenty-five blooms of any new carnation not yet disseminated was won by the Cottage Gardens Co., with Alma Ward. Harry Turner won the prize for the best 100 Enchantress and V. Hamonn, of Summit, won for 100 Lawson.

Dorothy Gordon, exhibited by Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., scored 90 points and received a preliminary certificate.

Juanita, exhibited by Fillow Flower Co., Westport, Conn., scored 85 points and received a preliminary certificate.

Pink seedling No. 30, from R. P. Jeffrey & Son, Bellmore, L. I., received the thanks of the club.

Mrs. Pfeuffer, exhibited by O. V. Zangen, was highly commended.

Ruby, from S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I., was highly commended.

Neptune, from Paul Thomson, West Hartford, Conn., was highly commended.

A white seedling from A. Wynne, gardener for W. W. Heroy, the committee asked to see again.

Lucille, from A. F. Longren, Des Plaines, Ill., had traveled poorly.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., sent Governor Deneen, Sangamo, Superba and other seedlings, but they did not arrive in good shape.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. was awarded a cultural certificate for Beacon and Afterglow.

Bay State scored 90 points and received a preliminary certificate.

W. A. Manda's Pink Pearl carnation received honorable mention.

V. Hamonn showed a superb vase of 100 Lawson.

S. J. Trepass, of Glen Cove, received a vote of thanks for his exhibit of seedlings.

E. A. Stroud showed vases of Winsor and Lady Bountiful that were among the finest on display.

A magnificent display of My Maryland rose won a cultural certificate for S. J. Reuter & Son.

Three ferns shown by George Geatrus received a vote of thanks and were judged to be Nephrolepis cordifolia, Presl.

A cibotium from Percy E. Hicks, Oceanic, N. J., was judged to be the variety Barometz.

A vote of thanks was given W. A. Manda for an exhibit of Asparagus elongatus and his begonia, East India, received honorable mention.

There were reports from the dinner committee and the outing committee. For also reported in this week's obituary column.

Saturday evening, February 6, a party of the old friends in the trade gathered at the home of W. W. Burnham, formerly manager of the flower department at Bloomingdale's, and presented him with an elegant silver tea service. Walter Sheridan made the speech of appreciation and good will.

Many prominent horticulturists have been invited to attend the New York Florists' Club annual banquet Saturday evening, February 27, J. A. Valentine, president of the S. A. F., and Mayor Breitmeyer, of Detroit, among them. Places at table may be secured by writing Chairman W. J. Elliott, Vesey street, or Secretary John Young, 51 West Twenty-eighth street. The tables will be allotted as rapidly as the demand is made. Already several tables and many seats have been sold. Many of the prominent retailers will be there. A splendid program is assured. This is the first time the club has had the honor of the ladies' attendance at the annual dinner.

The salesmen of the Lord & Burnham Co. had a gay and profitable banquet Saturday evening at the St. Denis, following an afternoon of business discussion.

Charles Millang says his new store is a wholesale cut flower store only.

Louis Aggelakos, a prominent Greek florist at Fourteenth street and Broadway, died February 7, following an operation for appendicitis. Many beautiful floral emblems were sent the bereaved family by his countrymen, especially by those in the trade.

Fred Smythe left on the Mauretania last week for a business and pleasure auto tour of the continent. Mr. Smythe has just added a $50,000 nursery farm to his possessions.

Charles Loechner, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., is on his western trip.

Miss Julia A. Dowling, daughter of Peter Dowling, of Thorley's, and J. R. Kennedy, cashier of the Long Island Express Co., were married February 7. The decorations were by Thorley and the wedding bouquet was the handiwork of the father of the bride.

J. H. Troy is now on a business trip in England. He has added a large nursery tract to his other enterprises and does a large landscape business.

J. H. Walter, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., returned on the Celtic February 7 from a month's business trip in Europe.

W. J. Elliott says the importations are arriving rapidly and the auctions will begin about March 15. Ambrose Cleary will open his auction department about the same date. No others are in the field, nor likely to be, in this special department of the business.

B. Rosens says the demand for wild smilax shows no lessening. During January he shipped out over 200 cases. All the great decorative events of the season have used it profusely. Last week, at the Gould musicale at the Plaza, Alex McConnell made this the background for the largest display of forsythia ever seen at one time in this city. Great masses of this spring flower were everywhere. Many palms and bay trees were used in the decoration. Green and yellow were the only colors seen.

Some good decoration orders are booked for the coming week. The Gude Bros. Co. have been awarded the contract for the floral decorations for the court of honor for the presidential inauguration. This will be the finest of its kind ever seen in the capital city. The total cost will be $15,000. Mr. Gude was over in Philadelphia this week looking up supplies for this decoration.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, candidates for the various offices were nominated, to be elected at the March meeting. An invitation was received to attend the tri-city contest between the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington bowling teams, in Baltimore, March 11.

At this writing we are having the heaviest snow storm of the season.

Mr. Green, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., was in town this week. O. O.

Niessen's News Column

RICHMOND

Some of our growers are coming in with a fine crop of this popular rose. We will have plenty of them for the next four weeks. The best of them are 36 inches long. We believe that no better stock is coming to Philadelphia in that line than you will find here. Not only the best in quality, but value as well.

ACACIA

If you want to include in your stock all the novelties in season, you cannot overlook Acacia. It is the finest flower in yellow to be had now. We always have some on hand, or can get it on a few hours' notice, or supply a quantity if ordered in advance.

The Rising Eastern Market.

"Stuff scarce." This terse, possibly inelegant expression exactly describes the conditions prevailing in the cut flower market. There are not enough flowers to fill all the orders. Personality, hustle, and even grabbing are requisite factors in securing enough stock to make a respectable showing where many flowers are required. The special features of the market are the advance in price of American Beauty roses meriting a position in the special class; the substitution of fancy Richmond where the medium grade of Beauty cannot be obtained; the increase in the supply of and demand for choice spring flowers, so called, of all varieties, and the dullness in the violet market. Carnations seem less plentiful than a week ago. Sweet peas are abundant, and selling remarkably well, soft pink or flesh color and the lavender being highly prized for special work. Daisies are a trifle more abundant. Acacia pubescens is arriving in excellent form. The conditions in the green market are unchanged. Wild smilax is in demand.

A Beneficial Association.

The employees of Henry A. Dreer at Riverton have organized a beneficial association with eighty-seven charter members. The following officers were elected: President, James J. Flynn; vice-president, William Hoyle; secretary, Harry Betz; treasurer, Atkinson Lloyd. The dues are 25 cents a month, the initiation fee $1, which is paid by the company for all charter members. The benefits are $5 a week after two months' membership in case of sickness. This amount may be drawn for thirteen weeks; $50 is paid to the family in case of death. All questions arising will be submitted to a board of nine directors. February 18 has been set as the last day of joining for those desiring to become charter members.

This seems like an excellent move, and the inception of like associations should be encouraged by all large firms and corporations throughout the country.

Alexander B. Scott has made the greenhouses of Robert Scott & Son a Mecca for florists. Mr. Scott has accomplished some things that make him famous today in the floral world, and one or two of these things will undoubtedly make him famous with posterity. The achievement of flowering gardenias in midwinter was not a solitary success; they have been flowered again, and even more successfully than a year ago, the gardenia houses alone being well worth the trip. Mr. Scott's second most notable achievement is his handling of the Dickson roses, which he tests each season in a special end of one of his large greenhouses. Here all the claimants for popular favor are tried. Some are rejected, some given further trial. The aim today is to secure a first-class yellow rose (Harry Kirk has been found wanting), and a red rose that will surpass Richmond during the warm weather. Mr. Scott's fame today is increased by his skill with Mrs. Jardine, Killarney, Richmond and more especially Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, of which the original plants are now in their eighth year. Mr. Scott is introducing this year White Killarney (pure white), which sported with him three years ago, and Duchess of Wellington, a Dickson rose of promise.

In summing up the achievements of Alexander B. Scott I must not fail to mention that he gets up a rose about as fast as anyone I know. As I write I can see Edward Schwartz holding up a grafted plant of My Maryland and giving the exact number of days (they were very few indeed) since that little piece of wood had been growing on the parent rose bush.

W. & Harry F. Evans, Rowlandville, Pa., are sending choice Acacia pubescens to the Leo Niessen Co. These delicate sprays are cut from a tree that, as REVIEW readers will recall, was favored with an enlarged greenhouse two years ago to cover its increasing stature.

Edward Reid is receiving choice Cattleya Trianæ and Dendrobium formosum, the latter a rarity in this market today. Mr. Reid is enthusiastic over the support given the Marie Louise violets, believing that they deserve every good word that can be said of them.

The window of Pennock Bros. this week is devoted to St. Valentine's day gifts. A specimen azalea, Prof. Wolters, trained into a heart shape, a soft blue ribbon gracefully twined in and out just below the rosy pink flowers, makes a charming centerpiece.

John W. McIntyre, Jr., son of the well-known wholesaler, has accepted a position with W. E. McKissick & Bros., commencing work February 6. Curiously enough, his father considers this day as the busiest in his career as a wholesaler.

Dr. Herman Burgen addressed the Germantown Horticultural Society February 8; subject, "Wild Flowers and Their Haunts."

Sydney Bayersdorfer says that his firm has experienced an unusual demand for heart-shaped boxes and tiny French handle baskets to be used for Valentine gifts. "By the way," he added, "Mr. Bayersdorfer has an Easter surprise up his sleeve."

A new decorator has come to town. The council of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society gave a dinner last week in honor of the society's new president, Clement B. Newbold. The secretary, David Rust, was instructed to look after the decorating. He did this in person, using American Beauty and Mrs. Jardine roses, lilies of the valley, daisies, etc.

The yellow variety of Cineraria stellata, described last week at the Florists' Club meeting, should have been credited to Samuel Batchelor, who has grown it for two years, and the stock, Beaute of Nice, to William Kleinheinz.

The Market.

Last week was clear and warm. At the wholesale houses everything in season appeared to be a glut; the market went all to pieces the last three days of the week. There was a fair amount of work going on among the retailers, but the supply was so great that the demand could not consume all the stock consigned to our four wholesalers. Even roses went begging. These have been scarce up to the last week. Now there are too many in all varieties.

Carnations sold as low as $10 per thousand in the fancy grades, and common as low as $5 in thousand lots. All varieties were still piling up Monday, February 8. Callas are in abundance and selling slowly. There are plenty of tulips, freesias, Romans and Paper Whites for all demands, and selling at a low price. Extra good, long sweet peas are selling well; in fact, there is a demand for them. California violets have been coming in heavily and are down to $3 per thousand for the best long-stemmed ones.

The green market is in keeping with the cut flowers—plenty of everything.

Various Notes.

Thomas Salverson, Petersburg, Ill., was a caller last week.

Fred H. Weber did jury duty last week. He says that during January he had a splendid business in all kinds of work.

The Gallagher Flower Shop has closed its downtown branch, at Eighth and Olive streets. The recent cold snap froze out a house of callas and azaleas.

William Ossic is again on duty with the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.; though on crutches, he makes the best of his recent mishap of a sprained foot.

George Schriefer, of C. A. Kuehn's, is now a member of the Newlyweds' Bowling Club and is the only bachelor on the team, but says it will not be long before he joins the other members.

Julius E. Schaefer opened his new store Monday, February 8, at 111 North Sixth street, with a grand opening and music, presenting each visitor with a handsome souvenir. A large crowd was in attendance all day.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., was a caller February 5. He went to Champaign, February 8, to attend the meeting of the advisory board. He reports a good trade at his Alton and Edwardsville places.

Henry Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., reports that they have the decorations for the big Cinderella ball, which takes place February 11 in the Coliseum. This will be one of the largest decorations of the year.

Otto Schubert, of Columbus, who has spent the last two weeks here looking for an opening, left last week for California and will locate in one of the cities of that state.

February 2 Prof. William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, lectured before the Washington University Association. His subject was "Henry Shaw and the Missouri Botanical Garden," with stereopticon views of the garden. The attendance was large.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held a meeting February 8, in Central High School building. The subject for the evening was "The Pruning of Trees and Shrubs," by George Ostertag, superintendent of city parks. This was followed by short talks on special phases of the same subject by Charles Fullgraf, of the city forestry department, and H. C. Irish, of the Missouri Botanical Garden. H. C. Irish presided over the meeting and the attendance was good.

Martin Reukauf, with Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, is a visitor.

FORCING EGGPLANT.

Need of Variety in Crops.

There are many vegetables which may be grown profitably under glass, other than those commonly known in the forcing class, and if growers of hothouse vegetables would indulge in more diversified gardening, instead of sticking to one or two kinds of vegetables, there would no doubt be better and steadier markets than we now have. Some seasons cucumbers are not very satisfactory in price and many growers plant tomatoes the next season; then tomatoes are low priced that year, and in a last hope they all put in lettuce, only to find that lettuce is a glut because every one has it. If a grower has several houses and grows several different crops, he may hit it nicely on one crop even if prices are lower on another, and if many growers would grow a variety they would find it easier to dispose of the product and there would be less chance of gluts on different vegetables from oversupply of any one kind. This is the only solution of the problem of close and increasing competition in the vegetable forcing industry.

Eggplant Easily Grown.

Eggplant is one vegetable which can be forced in greenhouses easily and profitably. It requires no tying or trimming, and very little labor after it is well started. The most serious drawback is the length of time it takes to get a crop to bearing. It requires four to four and one-half months from the time of planting the seed until the crop begins to yield marketable fruit, but the plants do not occupy full space all that time. They can be held in the pots half that time and in a comparatively small space.

The plants are handled much like tomatoes. The seed should be planted in flats, and transplanted to other flats or a space prepared on the bench as soon as they are sprouted and the seed leaves opened up. They should be spaced about two or two and one-half inches apart at this transplanting. When they have grown so as to seem pretty thick and are strong, healthy plants, they should be potted into 4-inch pots. When well established in these pots, which requires about three or four weeks, they are ready to plant out in the benches. Or, if it is desired to hold them a while longer, they may be potted into 6-inch pots. It is an advantage to space the pots about two inches apart, so as to give the leaves more room to spread as soon as they commence to get thick.

The Soil and the Temperature.

Raised benches or solid beds will grow eggplant equally well, if the soil is properly prepared. Eggplant requires a rich, loose, well-drained soil. About one-third manure, partly rotted, and two-thirds good, black loam or rotted sod, will suit it nicely. Even the soil which the plants are potted into should be quite rich.

The seed and young plants should be started in a night temperature of 65 to 68 degrees, and 5 degrees lower is better after the plants are well started. The day temperature should not be more than 15 or 20 degrees higher than the night temperature, and if the weather is dark and cloudy, split the difference. In other words, the temperature should vary according to the light, as with all crops.

No flower will suffer from mistreatment more than eggplant when it is young. It can be easily overwatered. Green aphis and red spider are fond of it, and no plant spoils more quickly if potbound.

In planting them out into the beds where they are to bear, they should not be placed closer than two feet in the row and the rows two and one-half to three feet apart, in soil about eight inches deep. An ordinary 5-foot greenhouse bench will accommodate two rows. Each plant will yield a great many fruits if properly cared for.

Pollinating.

The flowers are bisexual or perfect, each one making a fruit if pollinated, but indoors a swarm of bees should be kept to insure a good set. Or, if only a few plants are grown, they may be hand fertilized with a camel's hair brush.

A few plants may get too heavy on one side and require a stake to keep them from falling over. Systematic trimming has been tried, but with little benefit. Experience may develop a paying method of trimming each plant to two or three stems.

Extra Early Black Beauty has given excellent results. New York Improved is also good. Giant varieties are not suitable for forcing. H. G.

The Market.

For the last week the market has cleaned out in a way which has gladdened the hearts of everyone, business having been extremely good. One prominent grower said it was the best he had seen for a year. Flowers are now more abundant and do not move quite so well, but, on the whole, trade is satisfactory and promises to remain so until Lent, when the usual drop may be expected.

Roses are still somewhat scarce and bringing good prices. Carnations sell better than for a long time, even whites, such as Queen, moving satisfactorily at advanced prices. The quality of all carnations is splendid at present. Violets are arriving much more abundantly and have fallen in price, 50 cents to 60 cents per hundred now being top price. Quite a few English primroses and blue cornflowers are coming in. These are popular for boutonnieres. Lily of the valley sells steadily. Gardenias and cattleyas both sell better than for years, and neither are any too plentiful. Lilies are moving satisfactorily, as are callas. Sweet peas continue to improve in quality and increase in number. The better grades move quickly, the short-stemmed ones slowly.

Narcissi and tulips are so far selling well. A few Dutch hyacinths are seen, also poeticus and yellow jonquils. So far there is no glut of bulbous stock and prospects are good for its selling better than usual.

Various Notes.

At a special meeting of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, held February 5, an appropriation of $4,000 was voted for the great orchid exhibition to be held in Boston, May 26 to 30, 1910. Prizes will vary in value from $1,000 to $50 and there will be numerous gold, silver and bronze medals The schedule of prizes will be issued within a week. This will undoubtedly be by far the largest and most interesting orchid show ever held in America. There will be a number of foreign exhibitors.

Prof. William Stuart, of Burlington, Vt., spoke interestingly on "The Etherization of Plants for Forcing Purposes," at Horticultural hall, February 6. He stated that little experimental work on these lines has yet been done in America, although Denmark, Germany, France and Great Britain had accomplished a great deal.

Ex-President M. A. Patten, of the American Carnation Society, will speak on carnations before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 16. Exhibits of new carnations from Illinois, Indiana and other states will be made. An attendance of 250 is expected.

President William Downs, of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, received a handsome legacy under the will of his late employer, Mrs. Julia E. Dumaresq, who recently died in Italy.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. are busy perfecting plans for their model Japanese garden, which will be the star feature of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's spring show. They have imported a lot of material from Japan and have a frame of eighty sashes filled with plants to be used. The price of admission to the coming spring show will be doubled. It promises to be far the most interesting exhibition Boston has yet held.

Robert Laurie, at one time head gardener at The Breakers, Newport, R. I., and more recently of Providence, R. I., is now on the road for W. W. Rawson & Co.

E. A. Peirce anticipates a magnificent exhibition at Horticultural hall, February 27 and 28, when the Park Street market show is held there. Entries are coming in from all parts of New England and exhibits from many other states.

L. W. Ross, late of Knollwood cemetery, Canton, Mass., succeeds James H. Morton as superintendent of Mount Hope cemetery. The position has been vacant about six months and there has been considerable wire pulling by several candidates for the post. The new superintendent is able and thoroughly practical.

William C. Rust, head gardener to Dr. C. G. Weld, showed a superb scarlet seedling amaryllis at Horticultural hall, February 6. The bulb carried two spikes with six flowers each.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, are handling a fine lot of amaryllis at Park Street market at present.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are having a brisk call for flowers at present, and their trade in greenery of all kinds is first-class.

A number of local members of the craft attended the annual banquet of the North Shore Horticultural Society, February 10, and report an enjoyable time.

The trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have granted the free use of the halls for the great New England fruit show, to be held in October. Lectures will be delivered daily in connection with this exhibition.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

M. & S. L. DYSINGER, Albion, Mich., are just adding a full line of seeds to the stocks carried in the flower store.

J. H. WALTER, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, has reached home from a month's business trip in Europe.

THE German seeds are now coming in fast; the Graf Waldersee, from Hamburg, arriving at New York February 5, had unusually numerous consignments.

THE seed business of Wing Bros., Mechaniesburg, O., is spoken of as one of the important industries of the town. Recently 30,000 catalogues were sent out.

H. J. HAFENDORFER, Owensboro, Ky., is reported to have bought 4,700 pounds of garden seeds and 3,200 pounds of onion sets. His sales have increased largely the last three years.

THE lily of the valley pips still are coming along, almost every boat from Hamburg bringing a few. On the one arriving at New York February 5 H. F. Darrow had eighty-five cases and there were eighty-two cases in care of Lunham & Moore.

A CORRESPONDENT from Groningen, Holland, says: "The crops of radish seed for the wholesale trade are threshed and cleaned now. It yielded this year in medium average more than fourteen and a half hundredweight per acre of clean and dry seed in finest quality. The most prominent sort grown here is the Vivid Scarlet White Point."

in the Canary Islands from whom Bermuda onion seed is procured. The obituary column this week contains the announcement.

FROM Welland, Ont., comes the report that Vaughan & Son have bought a site and will erect a seed cleaning plant.

ONE canner is of the opinion that the canning industry uses more seeds in its special lines than do all the market gardeners.

THE canners' convention last week did a great deal to show up the exact situation on certain lines of seeds largely used by canners.

THE mail trade is gathering volume in spite of unfavorable weather, particularly in the southeast, where the cold last week was extreme.

FRANK L. LONGLEY is opening a new seed and feed store at First and Kent streets, Radford, Va. He formerly was with the Jordan Seed and Fertilizer Co.

THERE is considerable apprehension as to the results of the floods in California. There are few details available and the very meagerness of the news may give rise to the assumption that the seed crops are in a bad way. The produce trade hears of very high water and much loss of crops on the islands of the Sacramento.

AT the canners' convention at Louisville last week the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, showed over 150 samples of peas, tomatoes, corn, etc. Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Everett B. Clark Seed Co., and the Livingston Seed Co. each made attractive showings and everyone seemed to be talking business, even those who had no displays. It was generally considered the best convention the canners have yet had.

TEXAS business shows another good increase again this season.

VISITED CHICAGO:—C. P. Braslan, San Jose, Cal.; A. J. Pieters, Hollister, Cal.

THE high prices now prevailing in produce markets will have its effect on the season's seed demand.

THE seed advertising in February magazines was light and March issues will have even less. Most seedsmen are now putting most of their money into the farm papers and the gardening magazines.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending January 30 were as follows:

DREER'S SUPERB ASTERS

Dreer's Superb Late Branching Asters.

We offer below but a few of the more important Asters. For complete list see our current Wholesale Price List, which also contains everything in Seeds, Plants and Bulbs that a Florist needs. Copies free on application.

Dreer's Superb Late Branching

The finest Aster for late August and September blooming.

The plants form strong, branching bushes, 2 to 2½ feet high, bearing on long, strong stems their handsome Chrysanthemum-like flowers, which, under ordinary cultivation, average 5 inches across. The form of the flowers, together with the length of the stems, places them at the head of Asters for cutting. We offer eight beautiful and distinct colors, viz.:

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Azure Blue. A rich deep lavender	25c	$1.00
Pure White. Extra fine stock	25c	1.00
Shell Pink. An exquisite shade	25c	1.00
Rose Pink. A very desirable color	25c	1.00
Deep Rose. Rich and brilliant	25c	1.00
Deep Purple. Royal deep blue	25c	1.00
Lavender. A pale grayish-lavender	25c	1.00
Crimson. Very rich	25c	1.00
Finest Mixed. All the colors	25c	.75

Dreer's New Aster "Pink Beauty"

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
A magnificent cut-flower variety, in bloom from early August until well on in September; 24 to 30 inches high; flowers average 4 inches across, on long, strong stems. Color a delicate blush pink, and pronounced by experts to be the finest pink mid-season sort yet introduced	50c	$4.00

Dreer's New Late Aster "Crimson King"

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
A superb new late-branching variety, with perfectly double flowers of rich, rosy crimson, full of fire. Fine for cutting, showing up well under artificial light	50c	$4.00

Crego's Giant Comet Asters

Magnificent fluffy flowers, averaging over 5 inches across, with long, strong stems; the finest of this type. Comes into bloom in August, continuing well into September, and, unlike most of the Comet sorts, stands when cut and is a good flower to ship. We offer two colors, our own saving from stock received from the originator.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Shell Pink	50c	$4.00
Snow White	50c	4.00

Early Wonder Asters

This is the earliest Aster in cultivation, being in full bloom when Queen of the Market is only in bud, frequently coming into bloom in late June. Flowers larger than Queen of the Market, borne on long, strong stems. Very valuable for cutting.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Early Wonder White. Pure glistening white	40c	$2.00
Early Wonder Pink. A good, clear pink	40c	2.00

Late Aster "Violet King"

A new and distinct color in the Late Branching class, fine large double flowers of a pleasing shade of violet, a strong, free grower and very free flowering	40c	2.00 with deep bronze veins; petals, two and one-quarter inches wide; color, light pink, veined and mottled like Cattleya Hardyana; sepals, one inch broad, also light pink in color.

Hybrid, Cattleya Eureka, a cattleya hybrid raised from Cattleya crispa x Cattleya Hardyana alba; habit of growth is much after the style of Cattleya crispa; flowers, of good size and fine substance; petals and sepals are broad and pure white, with quite a little of the Cattleya crispa curl to them; lip, broad and of a very bright, deep color, with yellow in throat.

Hybrid, Lælio-cattleya Magenta, a lælio-cattleya hybrid raised from Lælia tenebrosa x Cattleya maxima; habit, smooth; bulb, fifteen inches long; single leaved; very like Cattleya maxima, but much stronger; flowers, large, the same shape as Lælia tenebrosa flowers, but having a rich magenta color throughout.

WHEELING, W. VA.

Receptions, parties and other social events have been numerous here during the last few weeks, and some of them have been of such a character as to provide considerable work for the florists.

Arthur Langhans furnished extensive decorations at the Arion January 28, for the reception and dancing party given by Henry G. Stifel and his sister. Throughout the anteroom, parlors, ball room and balcony the color scheme of green and pink was carried out, principally with smilax, ivy, Killarneys and other pink roses. In the ball room a network ceiling was improvised, which was interwoven with southern smilax and ivy. At intervals were clusters of pink roses, lending a most artistic effect. The large electrolier was entwined with the ivy, and the incandescents were shaded with pink muffs.

Max Hess supplied the decorations for the Marshall-Rowan wedding at the Dewey home in Echo Point January 27, and his work was sufficiently artistic to accord well with the rare paintings and

Gladiolus Bulbs

For forcing, and planting during the spring. By ordering bulbs now, you receive not only the best selection, but the advantage of the following low prices:

Gladiolus America

A few points of merit

COLOR: A beautiful, soft, flesh pink, very light and much like Enchantress Carnation, except slightly tinged with lavender, which gives it the delicate coloring of the most beautiful Lælias. Words fail to do justice in describing this grand and glorious color; it must be seen to be appreciated. PURPOSES: For florists' use, its color makes it everything to be desired; delicate, attractive and absolutely new; no other color in Gladiolus like it or one-half so beautiful. It has created a sensation in the cut flower markets, selling for more than five times the price of other varieties.

America. The best commercial pink in existence. 1st size bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000; $165.00 per 5000.

Augusta. Lovely, pure white with blue anthers. 1½ to 2½ in., $2.00 per 100; $15 per 1000; $70 per 5000.

Blue Jay (Baron Hulot). Finest blue Gladiolus yet seen. It is a rich, deep color of indigo shade. The only real blue Gladiolus on the market. $10 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis. Extra fine red variety. 1½ to 2½ in., $1.50 per 100; $12 per 1000; $50.50 per 5000.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

elegant furnishings of the rooms. The east and west drawing rooms were done in green and white, the combining colors. Easter lilies were the flowers used, and in great profusion. In the east parlor a pyramid of palms marked the spot where the bridal party was to stand.

AMHERST, MASS.

As reported in last week's REVIEW, the new instruction building and greenhouse range for the departments of floriculture and market gardening, at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, have been nearly completed, and February 22 was chosen as the date for the dedication of the buildings. It has been decided, however, to postpone the dedication, in consideration of the fact that it would be difficult for florists to attend the exercises on a holiday that is so generally observed as is Washington's birthday. The date finally selected will be announced later.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

We are having some warm days and the snow has disappeared, making this an unusually mild winter. Trade is fair. The pink Killarney is getting to be the most popular rose here, with Rhea Reid a close second. Maids are in good color. Azaleas in all colors are seen in fine specimen plants at present and add much to the beauty of the floral stores.

Various Notes.

J. T. Cokly, of Scranton Florists' Supply Co.; Julius Dilloff, of Schloss Bros., New York, and George F. Struck, of Knight & Struck, were visitors in the city last week.

The Baur Floral Co.'s window is very attractive with pink Porto Rican mats and variegated azaleas.

Mr. Wells, rose grower for the Erie Floral Co., will leave for the west in the near future.

A brother of Arthur Nyberg has come to the front and offers to reimburse all who were recently victimized by the young man while in charge of Mr. Schluraff's store. B. P.

PLATTEVILLE, WIS.

W. A. Schaefer, of the Platteville Floral Co., says that it would be impossible to give anything but a good report for the month of January in this vicinity. There was an unusual amount of funeral work and wedding decorations. Carnation day was especially good, in spite of the fierce blizzard which raged here. Stock is always well cleaned up and a considerable number of orders have been booked for Valentine's day, which promise to be good this year, on both potted plants and cut flowers. The month, as a whole, was seventy-five per cent better than a year ago.

Prospects for spring are also much brighter this year.

BALTIMORE, MD.—John Cook, the originator of My Maryland rose, has been under the care of the doctor for four weeks, suffering with a bad sore throat.

ALBION, N. Y.—On Tuesday morning, February 2, the main greenhouse plant, potting shed and office, and a portion of a new cement house of Julian T. Duquette were burned to the ground. A high southwest wind prevailed at the time. The stock in the cement house was ruined. There was no insurance and the loss foots up into the thousands. The fire started in an unused part of the potting shed and there was every indication of its being the work of tramps.

LA GRANGE, ILL.

The La Grange Floral & Seed Co. opened a store in the new Pillinger building, at the corner of Fifth and Harris avenue, February 15. They will handle cut flowers, plants, seeds, etc. The firm is composed of Mrs. A. Scott as president, A. W. Baker, secretary, and Walter Scott, manager.

Mr. Scott, the manager, has been in business in La Grange for several years as a landscape gardener, and his services are in great demand by Hinsdale, La Grange and Riverside citizens.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The general business conditions in this city are not improving as rapidly as was expected or hoped for, and the cut flower business is no exception. During December things seemed to brighten considerably and it was thought the worst was over, but January did not come up to expectations by any means. While the cut of flowers was short almost all the month, it was no great hardship, as had there been even a fair cut there would have been little use for them. However, the trade generally are hopeful and predict better things later.

The four wholesale houses here continue to get rid of what stock is coming in without much trouble, but they are cautious about asking fancy prices, and there is still plenty of stock for the street stands.

Lilies, valley, tulips, Trumpet narcissi and violets are the most plentiful flowers. There are just about enough Beauties and roses to go around, with orchids, lilacs and carnations about right. Everyone is taking things easy and hoping for an improvement.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, with a good crowd of enthusiastic members present. President Burki and W. A. Clarke, the only members who attended the carnation convention, reported the convention a success in every way, the arrangements perfect in every detail, the courtesies shown the visitors more than was expected, and a mark set which, if this city would maintain it, would give the florists something to do. It was believed, however, that this city, owing to its central location, would get more exhibitors both from the east and west. This kind of a report stirred up considerable enthusiasm and some desired to have committees appointed at once, but President Burki held them off until March, to allow him time to select committees of men who expected to work, as they proposed to see Indianapolis and go them some in the next convention.

The flowers of the evening, carnations, were taken up and discussed. The Finleyville Floral Co. showed four vases, and also their white seedling, which will be watched, as something is hoped from it. Hatch, of Allison Park, had four vases. The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. had seven large vases of handsome flowers. All of these carnations were fine and a credit to the various growers, who were all willing to tell all they knew about growing them.

Frank Cooks, gardener for J. H. Parks, had six pots of freesia. Mr. Madsen, gardener for R. H. Boggs, had a vase of carnations; also one plant each of Primula verticillata, P. floribunda and P. Kewensis. Two of these varieties had never been shown here before and were so fine and well grown that, by way of encouragement to private gardeners, a motion was made to give a gratuity of $5 to Mr. Madsen.

Various Notes.

Nearly all of the firms who decorate met at one of the retail stores last Friday evening and took up the matter of cutting prices on decorations, which has been quite prevalent, owing to the strong competition for that kind of work. While not much could be accomplished, it was agreed that all solicitation should be by letter and no one would call on anyone except by appointment, which would cut out what one man calls "camping on people's doorsteps." Regarding prices, that is left to the judgment of the individual, each hoping that the other will at least make his bid more than cover the cost of the work and not, as has been done, do the decorating for the privilege of supplying the flowers and the honor of having the job. To an outsider it looks as if these meetings, with the honest confessions there made, must certainly be productive of some good.

There is a rumor going the rounds that a former retailer is considering opening an auction cut flower house, with sales at a regular hour every day.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

NATHAN MOORE, for a long time engaged in the nursery business at Sidney, O., celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday anniversary February 1.

AFTER heavy falls of wet snow it will pay to go through the evergreens and give a shake to any badly weighted down. The pines suffer badly from these storms, but even the Norway and other spruces will suffer.

THE present is an opportune time to look over lilacs and other shrubs for oyster shell or scurfy scale. When any is discovered, wash with strong whale-oil soap. Where the pests are very thick, use a brush and lather on the soap freely.

THE planting of apple orchards is only at a beginning, but nurserymen should urge their customers to plant only the best varieties and to grow and pack them well, else the Pacific northwest, where they pay attention to the details which give uniform high quality, will get a long lead over the apple sections elsewhere.

LARGE evergreens, especially spruce, can be moved in the winter with safety if, before the ground freezes too hard, a trench is dug around the ball intended to accompany the tree. Then, when the ground freezes hard, there will not be any trouble in getting the tree and ball undermined, the planks, rollers, etc., in place, and the tree in motion and on the road to its new destination. After planting, it will be well to cover the ball, and the ground out from it for a foot or more, with leaves or coarse manure.

IT is all very well to say that anybody can prune a gooseberry bush, but the fact is that anybody cannot. In pruning gooseberry bushes, last year's growth on wood that fruited last year should be cut back to one or two eyes. Enough young, straight shoots should be allowed to remain, distributed over the bush so as to insure a continuation of vigorous material for future bearing, but the tips of the shoots should be cut off. The flowering buds of gooseberries are on last season's growth as well as on older wood, but as the wood gets old it becomes less fruitful; hence the necessity of keeping up young growth.

IT is reported that the Park Bois de Boulogne cost the city of Paris last year $142,000 for maintenance, but in the same time produced a revenue of $154,950 from concessions. It is possibly the only park in the world that is self-supporting. The Bois is kept in almost perfect condition. All Paris drinks tea in its pavilions in summer.

YEARS ago some people despised the hemlock when in search of evergreens for private grounds. There is a different disposition on the part of the great majority nowadays, and this cannot be better evidenced than by noticing the large numbers seen growing in various parts of the country where they have been recently planted. Nurserymen also are noting the increase in the demand for hemlock with satisfaction, not because it is more profitable than many other evergreens, but because it invariably gives more satisfaction.

THE Irish yews, golden arbor-vitæ, and a few of the retinosporas are especially liable to be winter-killed. One may wonder to see these subjects show sudden signs of collapse, not in mid-winter, but well on towards spring and sometimes in early summer. Among the various causes of this, one of the most common is the too early and complete removal of the winter protection. If shading or protection has been used, the removal should be gradual and not too soon. Retinospora squarrosa is often scorched in early spring.

THE forest area of the United States is estimated at 550,000,000 acres, about one-fourth being government reservations. It is estimated that the annual amount taken from forests, including waste in logging, is 23,000,000,000 cubic feet, or thrice the annual production. We use annually 100,000,000 cords of firewood; 40,000,000,000 feet of lumber; 1,000,000,000 posts, poles and fence rails; 118,000,000 hewn ties; 1,500,000,000 staves; 133,000,000 sets of heading; 500,000,000 barrel hoops; 3,000,000 cords of native pulp wood; 165,000,000 cubic feet of round mine timbers, and 1,250,000 cords for distillation. It is estimated that an average of 50,000,000 acres is burned annually, entailing a loss of $50,000,000.

PACIFIC COAST.

CALIFORNIA'S HEAVY RAINFALL.

The tremendous downpour of rain in the central and northern parts of California and the abundance of snow in Oregon and Washington, coupled with a great excess of moisture in every form, has had a depressing effect on the nursery trade during the month of January.

This time of the year should be a harvest for the grower and seller of nursery stock, but planting of every kind has been interfered with so much that at the best we can expect but a short season. In the last week of January the coast papers were still filled with accounts of washouts and overflows, and it will be some few weeks at least, even should we be favored with drier weather, before planters can get on their ground to put it in shape for cultivation.

Our season in California is at least three months ahead of that of the eastern states, and when they commence to plant we are usually finished for the season. The weather in California after the first part of March commences to get warm, and in a few days the leaves commence to sprout on deciduous stock, and then handling to advantage is over until the following season.

That there would be a good trade in nursery stock this winter goes without saying. All the larger dealers are well supplied with orders, and the only difficulty seems to be the inability to deliver them, because of the excessive rainfall throughout the coast. This does not apply so particularly to the southern part of California, as here the rainfall is rarely in excess of the demand, but in every other section of the coast we have had more than enough.

With evergreens and other kinds of ornamental stock that can be handled until the middle of April, there is time enough to yet give a fair season; but with the fruit tree problem there is bound to be considerable loss to both growers and planters, as with this class of stock it is usually impractical to keep them another year, in an effort to have desirable planting stock. They quickly outlive their usefulness in the nursery, and planters justly demand younger trees.

G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

It is now the fourth day of February and the rain keeps merrily descending. We have had but six dry days since the first of the year and the chances are that the weather man has gone asleep at the switch. It is to be hoped that he will soon attend sufficiently to business to allow the florists at least an opportunity to make a few sales.

Notwithstanding the prevalence of dark weather, there is an abundance of flowers of all kinds, with the possible exception of long-stemmed roses. Short-stemmed Brides and Maids are in oversupply. Carnations show some signs of a lessened supply, but the prices continue low, with no prospect of anything better in the near future. Violets can be purchased as low as 25 cents per dozen bunches, each bunch containing about 100 flowers.

Never in the history of California have daffodils and narcissi been so plentiful and worth so little money. The finest single daffodils can be bought for $3 to $5 per thousand and Paper Whites at even a lower price. This has been brought about by the continued warm rains and the shortage in the demand, as well. Still, they are the best selling flowers at present and the retailers have been able to sell them so cheaply that the

WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, ready for delivery beginning February 15, 1909, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready for delivery March 1, 1909, $5 per 100 additional.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000 flower-buying public has taken a strong fancy to the huge bouquets which the retailers have been able to furnish them for a very small charge.

A few fruit blossoms have made their appearance in the stores, but there is but little beauty to them yet, as the excess of moisture has given them a washed out appearance.

There seems to be a shortage of freesias this season. Those shown by the growers are not up to the standard of one year ago, either in size or color. Roman hyacinths have been a drug, but are getting scarcer and the same can be said of valley, which at present is in some demand. Outside mums are over for the season and it will be quite a while before there is anything to take their places. There is quite a scarcity of tame maidenhair and asparagus, but wild maidenhair is plentiful.

Various Notes.

Lorenzo G. Yates, one of the best known horticulturists on the Pacific coast, died at Santa Barbara, Cal., January 31. He was a native of England and 77 years of age. Dr. Yates made a specialty of the ferns of the Pacific coast and his reputation was world-wide on this subject.

N. Rolleri has opened a floral establishment on Seventh street, near Clay street, in Oakland.

J. Heatherington, after an absence of over a year in various eastern states, has returned to California and is located at San Anselmo.

A. Garibaldi and several other green goods men will shortly organize another company to supply the retailers with ferns and like commodities. G.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Condition of Business.

A gradual increase of business is most noticeable, and our tradesmen feel much encouraged with the present outlook. There is not one who complained of last week's business. A number of prominent citizens have died in the last ten days, and therefore considerable stock has been consumed in funeral work. Stock of all kinds has been in good demand. Carnations are plentiful, but roses have been scarce and the supply in the last month has at no time met the demand. Bulbous stock, while plentiful, sells well. While calla and longiflorum lilies are plentiful, the demand for them is good. Warm weather has prevailed throughout the week.

Various Notes.

Warren G. Matthews has a fine display of fancy violet baskets at his store, which are selling rapidly for St. Valentine's day.

H. H. Ritter reports last week's business far better than that of the week previous and says flowers of all kinds sold remarkably well.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs is among those who were well satisfied with last week's business.

Mrs. E. Young reports an abundance of funeral work last week.

Among our visitors of last week were Israel Rosnosky, of Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; D. Rusconi, Cincinnati, O.; Gustav Schneider, Springfield, O.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

With milder weather prevailing and more activity in social circles, trade has shown a decided improvement. Tulips and daffodils are becoming more plentiful. The bright weather has improved the quality, as well as the quantity, of roses, carnations and violets.

There has been an increased demand for funeral flowers. Shipping trade, also, has improved.

Various Notes.

The florists of the Twin Cities are looking forward with interest to the great social event of the season, the dance and card party, to be held Monday evening, February 15, at U. C. T. hall, this city. This is given under the auspices of the Minnesota State Florists' Association and should be attended by everyone in the trade. Florists from outside the Twin Cities are especially urged to be present. The next meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association will be held at 510 Snelling avenue, St. Paul, on Tuesday evening, February 16. All in the trade are invited to attend.

Visitors during the week were B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; W. G. Schutt, representing C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee.

NEW WHITE CARNATION GEORGIA THE BEST WHITE

Best for quality — Come and See it — Best for quantity

This variety is bound to supplant other whites, as it not only produces as many, or more flowers, but every one of them comes with a perfect calyx, borne on a long stem, supporting the bloom in perfect shape. This fact makes it greatly superior to other varieties as a money maker. We have 20,000 cuttings in the sand for January delivery.

Rooted Cuttings, $2.00 per dozen, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Single Chrysanthemums
From Seed

I am offering seed of Wells' new early flowering singles, in original sealed packets, at 25c and $1.00 each. These can be sown any time and, planted outside in the spring, will give you bushels of flowers in early fall, or plants can be lifted and potted when in flower.

ALSO

Wells' New Hybrid Pentstemons

This is a new race that shows the most glorious combinations of colors in scarlet, crimson, pink and white. The plants grow 2½ feet high and the flower spike is 18 inches long. No one who has not seen it can form any idea of the brilliant display a bed of these plants presents. No trouble to grow. Simply prick off the seedlings, like asters, and plant outside in May.

Trade packets, 25c and $1.00 each. Hundreds of seeds in a packet.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The shortage in flowers of the last two weeks is about over. Roses, heretofore scarce, are now coming into crop. Carnations are also coming in more freely and, from appearances, there will soon be more than plenty of stock.

Tulips and daffodils are to be had in quantity. Callas and longiflorum are received daily and sell fairly well. Valley, Romans and sweet peas are exceptionally fine, but the demand is limited. Eastern double violets, received daily, are moving well for this season of the year.

Various Notes.

Albrecht & Smith report a decided increase in transit trade at their new location, on Prospect avenue.

The J. M. Gasser Co. has been showing some good windows of late. One of orchids was especially attractive.

Frank Friedley, of Gasser's, visited friends in Akron last week. The party took dinner at Portage Lakes and all spent a most enjoyable day.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. is receiving a fine cut of carnations from Chappell & Son, of Garrettsville, O.

G. P. Braund is cutting some of the best valley seen in these parts.

C. A. Bramley reports that trade is picking up in his branch store at Glenville.

Knoble Bros. had a heavy run of funeral work last week. B.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J.—Three of J. J. Brozat's greenhouses have been destroyed by fire. The loss was $2,000.

JUST ONCE MORE

We want to call your attention to GOLDEN GLOW, PACIFIC SUPREME and WHITE CLOUD, which are our products of last season and will be the best selling

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business continues to be rather quiet. Now and then there is a little ripple that encourages us to hope for better things, but we are doomed to disappointment in most cases. There is not the snap that there ought to be. The buyers come around and do not seem to care whether they buy anything or not. Of course, the main reason for this attitude is that they do not have any trouble in getting just about what they want, so it is not necessary for them to hurry in their search.

The supply of stock continues about the same, also. Roses and carnations are good and there is no oversupply. But the fact that these flowers are being sold at considerably lower prices than have ever been known for the time of year must be taken into consideration. Lilies are in fair supply and demand. Violets and sweet peas are doing well.

Bulbous flowers are now coming in pretty strong. Fine tulips are seen, and also daffodils and Von Sion. Dutch hyacinths are on hand, as well as plenty of Romans and narcissi. This class of stock is selling well, all things considered.

Various Notes.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held Saturday evening, February 13, at 8 p. m., at the salesrooms of Weiland & Olinger. A preliminary report from all of the recently appointed committees will be heard. The meeting will develop many points of interest and will doubtless be largely attended.

Tom Windrane is away on his annual visit to his ranch in Florida.

Eugene Dailledouze, Paul Berkowitz and Dr. Reiss, of Terre Haute, were callers.

The Market.

The sales during January were much better than those of the same month last year. Some of the florists say they doubled those of January, 1908.

Business conditions last week were rather slow. Roses and carnations of good quality are coming in. Violets are not so plentiful as they have been. There is a fairly good trade in Roman hyacinths, Paper Whites, tulips and other bulbous flowers. Sweet peas are good and plentiful and meet with ready sales. Lilium longiflorum, Harrisii and giganteum are in good supply. Freesias are coming in and are of fairly good quality. There is also a satisfactory business in green goods, such as asparagus, smilax, fern leaves, galax, etc. Quite a few pots and pans of hyacinths, tulips and Paper Whites are arriving.

Azaleas, cyclamens, primulas and cinerarias are the plants mostly called for. The weather man reports bad weather for this month, but it has been favorable so far.

Various Notes.

Wilson M. Tiplady, gardener to J. B. Haggin, on the Maysville road, attended the Indianapolis carnation convention.

The Michler Bros. Co. has been cutting some good Lilium giganteum and callas.

Honaker has some good hyacinths, tulips and other bulbous flowers at the store.

Lucien Leclerc is marketing a good crop of lettuce. His spring stock is looking well.

J. Ferdinand Keller is cutting and sending lilies of good quality to the downtown store.

Mr. Moore, the florist at the State University, has a large banana tree bearing fruit.

Leonard Knight, the vegetable grower, is bringing in lettuce of good quality.

Anderson & White are busy with Easter and spring stock at the greenhouses.

G. L. Myerhoff, of Ludlow, Ky., was a visitor last week. BLUE GRASS.

BAR HARBOR, ME.—The Bar Harbor Horticultural Society, recently instituted, has issued a schedule for the flower show to be held in the Building of Arts, August 14, 1909. There are 120 competitive classes and the exhibition is expected to be a notable one.

HORTICULTURAL BOOKS

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price.

Pronouncing Dictionary.
A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 35 cents

The Dahlia.
By LAWRENCE K. PEACOCK. A practical treatise on the habits, characteristics, cultivation and history of the dahlia with a descriptive list of all the best varieties. Copiously and elegantly illustrated. 30 cents

Handy Manual.
By J. W. JOHNSON. Illustrated with plans for greenhouse heating and ventilating, by a practical steam and hot water engineer of long experience. 125 pages. $1.00

The Rose—Its Cultivation, Varieties, etc.
By H. B. ELLWANGER. Directions for cultivation—for planting, pruning, propagation, the treatment of diseases and insect enemies—particularly valuable for its classification. Alphabetical and descriptive list of nine hundred and fifty-six varieties. Cloth. $1.25

Mushrooms—How to Grow Them.
By WM. FALCONER. This is the most practical work on the subject ever written, and the only book on growing mushrooms published in America. The author describes how he grows mushrooms and how they are grown for profit by the leading market gardeners, and for home use by the most successful private growers. Engravings drawn from nature expressly for this work. Cloth. $1.00

The Nursery Book.
By L. H. BAILEY. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalog of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.25

The Propagation of Plants.
By ANDREW S. FULLER. Illustrated with numerous engravings. Describing the process of hybridizing and crossing and also the many different modes by which cultivated plants may be propagated and multiplied. Cloth. 359 pages. $1.50

Greenhouse Management.
By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

The Pruning Book.
By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.
By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Commercial Violet Culture.
By B. T. GALLOWAY. An illustrated, comprehensive and complete treatise on the commercial culture, growing and marketing of violets for profit. Of interest to the amateur as well as the commercial grower. Cloth. 224 pages. $1.50

Handbook of Practical Landscape Gardening.
By F. R. ELLIOTT. Designed for city and suburban residences and country schoolhouses, containing designs for lots and grounds, from a lot 30x100 feet to a 40-acre plant. Cloth. $1.50

Practical Floriculture.
By PETER HENDERSON. An illustrated guide to the successful propagation of florists' plants. A detailed account of the requisites to success and a clear explanation of improved methods. For the amateur and professional florist. 325 pages. Cloth. Postpaid. $1.50

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.
By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Greenhouse Construction.
By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

Gardening for Profit.
By PETER HENDERSON. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.
By L. H. BAILEY. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

The Chrysanthemum.
By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.
By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 35 cents

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.
By CHARLES HENDERSON. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth with gold. $2.50

Greenhouse Heating.

SIZE OF BOILER NEEDED.

Please tell me what size of boiler, Ideal make, would be ample for a house 48x110. The house runs north and south and has 3-foot cement walls, with three feet of glass above and glass in the south gable. It is protected on the north by a house running east and west. I am located in northeastern Kansas. A carnation temperature is desired.

S. M.

The boiler to satisfactorily heat the greenhouse in question should have a rated capacity of 2,000 square feet of radiation. The house will require about 1,500 square feet of radiation, but the boiler should have at least 500 square feet of reserve power, to be economical.

L. C. C.

GREENHOUSE AND DWELLING.

I want to heat a greenhouse 20x27 feet and ten feet to the ridge. The walls will be four feet high and will contain two thicknesses of boards, with lining paper between. The house will run east and west. I shall heat with hot water and I want to put the boiler in the cellar under my dwelling, which is six feet from the greenhouse, so I will have to run the flow and return six feet underground to get to the greenhouse. I also want to heat my dwelling with this same boiler. The dwelling contains three rooms on the first floor—one 15x15, one 12x15 and one 10x15—and one room on the second floor, 12x15.

Will you tell me how many 2-inch pipes it will take to heat the greenhouse to 52 degrees, the pipes to run under both side benches and the flows and returns to be 2-inch pipe? What size of radiators will be needed for the rooms in the dwelling? I wish to heat the dwelling to 70 degrees. Where shall I place the tank and what size of boiler will I want to do the work? Will this plan work satisfactorily? I am located in New Jersey.

G. W. H.

The greenhouse in question can be heated by installing 240 square feet of radiation. A 2-inch riser should be carried from the boiler into the greenhouse, then under the ridge of the house to the far end, there to supply seven lines of 2-inch pipe under each side bench, or fourteen returns in all. The dwelling will require about seventy-five feet of radiation in the room 15x15, sixty feet in each of the rooms 12x15, and fifty feet in the room 10x15.

SASH HOUSE FOR MUMS.

We wish to build a house 14x36 feet, running north and south and located twenty feet east of a house now containing the boiler, from which heat must be obtained for the new house. We intend to use hotbed sashes, 3x7, as glass for both top and sides. The house is intended for late mums, of such varieties as White and Yellow Jones and White and Yellow Chadwick. We wish to have ground benches. Plenty of water can be given the plants and they will have good drainage. We wish to heat with hot water, in 2-inch pipes.

How deep should these beds be? We will plant May 1. How far apart should the plants be placed, single stems, to produce good bread and butter blooms?

Should the house be covered with these sashes right after planting or in early fall, before frost? Should the sides as well as the top be covered, or should the sides be left open?

How many lines of 2-inch pipe will be required to heat this house? It will only be used until all the mums are cut out, and the sashes will then be used for cold-frames. At what end should the flow pipe be run into the new house from the house now containing the boiler? Should the line of pipe be run in overhead or underground? The boiler is four feet below the level of the ground and is at the north end of the house. How high should the sides of this house be? I am located in Pennsylvania.

gest can probably be heated by using one 2-inch flow under the ridge and four 2-inch pipes on each side wall—five 2-inch pipes in all. You may run the flow pipe either underground or overhead, according to convenience.

If the mums are to be planted in the soil, I should prefer that at least eight inches of the surface be prepared for the reception of the plants. This should be treated the same as potting soil. If the location is a well protected one, I think it will be as well to leave the plants without protection until the stems are well formed and the buds begin to appear. At about this stage I should provide roof protection and, if the nights are cool, side glass as well. Most growers prefer to bring the plants on in a protected place in the open, rather than in the house, as somewhat less care and attention are required. L. C. C.

A HOUSE IN SOUTHERN TEXAS.

We are going to build a hothouse, 50x100 feet, and want to grow flowers in it. What kind would you advise planting? We know very little about the business, but have a ready sale for nearly any kind of flower in the fall and winter. We should like to know if it is best to put in carnations only, or to have roses, sweet peas and carnations.

We already have a small house, full of ferns and pot plants. We are new at the business and make a good many mistakes. We fumigated with sulphur and killed more than half of our stock.

We want to raise something which is easy to grow and will be pretty. We did finely with chrysanthemums last year, but we grow them outside.

The climate is warm here and we do not need a fire in the hothouse more than two weeks during the whole winter. Will you please advise us how to heat it? We have used coal oil stoves, but could not heat the large house that way. We want something cheap, and do not want to stay up all night to build fires.

Any information you can give us will be gladly received. H. C. G.

It is seldom advisable to grow more than one sort of plants in a house; yet, under your conditions, I am not sure but that you can succeed with carnations and roses in the same house. Chrysanthemums can be grown practically without protection, unless it should prove a benefit to protect them with plant cloth, to modify the sun and keep off insects. For this purpose I would suggest the use of "aerial tent cloth," the same as used for tobacco.

The roses and carnations may be planted in the soil and the house may consist merely of a light frame built on posts, to cover the area occupied by the plants. About four or five lines of 2-inch pipe carried along each side wall, to act as radiators, and heated by a hot water boiler, with an independent 2-inch flow carried along the purlin supports on each side to the far end of the house, should supply sufficient protection from cold. This heating plant will not be required except during periods when a "norther" is on. You may also find that sweet peas can be grown in such a house to advantage, but I should use them sparingly until their value has been fully demonstrated.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Stock is plentiful on the market, and good. Business was mildly good last week, and stock moved evenly. American Beauties are in demand, and scarce. Dutch hyacinths, azaleas and all the spring plants are making a showing everywhere. The weather is propitious for good blooms, and easy on the coal pile, with the sun shining every day, and no cold.

Various Notes.

The death of one of the most notable residents of Minnesota, Thomas Lowry, at his home here in the city, was the occasion of the largest display of funeral flowers ever seen here. Orders poured in from all parts of the United States and Canada, and every florist had a share of the display. The demand was for the higher grade of flowers and for original pieces, with carte blanche as to price. Orchids, valley and violets seemed to be the general choice. Branches of the city government, and clerks in other departments of business, sent large designs in token of their sympathy, and the beautiful home on Lowry Hill was filled with the gorgeous blooms.

The wedding of Miss Caro Chamberlain was another good item in florists' circles. R. A. Latham had charge of the decoration, and care and artistic drapery of greens turned out a handsome piece of work. Miss Whitted had the bouquets, fourteen of Miss Chamberlain's classmates each carrying a different combination of flowers, while the maid of honor had white lilacs and pink roses, and the bride's bouquet was made up with orchids, valley and maidenhair ferns.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has some good azaleas and Dutch hyacinths.

W. G. Schutt, representing C. C. Pollworth Co., of Milwaukee, was here; also B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia.

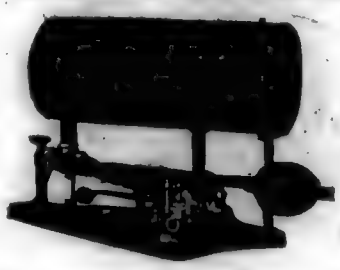
DETROIT.

The Market.

Business remains about the same as it has been for some time. There is considerable stock coming in daily and little is going to waste, and no better indication can be had.

One of the scarce articles is carnations. With all the spring stock to fill out, this seems queer; still it is a fact. Perhaps the growers are all saving their stock for exhibition at the next meeting of the club, when a show is to be the main feature.



Various Notes.

On the evening of February 15 the Detroit Florists' Club will hold another of its exhibitions in connection with the meeting. The stock will be staged at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, and introducers of novelties or anyone desiring to show standard varieties of carnations, roses or anything of interest will please send stock in care of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. Many visitors from the neighboring cities are expected to view the exhibits.

Andrew Ferguson is on the ticket for school inspector in the thirteenth ward.

William Hagemann passed through this city February 8, and reports an increase

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY

MANUFACTURERS OF

Reducing Valves, Back Pressure Valves, Steam Traps, Steam Goods

This is what one of our customers thinks of our valves:

LINCOLN, ILL., January 8, 1906.

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY, Chicago, Ill.

GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two, purchased of you last year. We would not have them out for double their cost, and find them as sensitive as a watch. We will be in Chicago soon to take up the vacuum system with you.

Yours truly,

W. H. GUILLETT & SONS, FLORISTS.

HUNT'S GUARANTEED FERTILIZERS

OUR FERTILIZERS ARE PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR FLORISTS' USE and are analyzed by an expert chemist to see that they are free from all acids. You can depend upon their being just what you want, AND SAFE. You ought to have these on hand at all times, ready for use.

PURE BONE MEAL

The brand we are selling has no superior. It is an absolutely uniform grade of pure bone, guaranteed free from acids, and is sold at as low rates as many inferior brands, which cannot be used with safety in greenhouse work.

Guaranteed Analysis. Per ct.

Ammonia	4 to 5
Phosphoric acid	23 to 26
Equal to bone phosphate	50 to 60

12 per cent immediately available and soluble in water.

Price

50 lb. bag	$ 1.25
100 lb. bag	2.00
200 lb. bag	3.50
1000 lbs., ½ ton	15.00

HUNT'S PURE BONE FLOUR

This is identical with our Pure Bone Meal, except it is ground to a very fine dust or flour, making it especially valuable for use in liquid form or for mixing with other fertilizers when quick action is required.

17 per cent immediately available and soluble in water.

Price

50 lb. bag	$1.35	500 lb. bag	$ 9.00
100 lb. bag	2.50	1000 lbs., ½ ton	16.00
200 lb. bag	4.00	2000 lbs., 1 ton	30.00

BLOOD AND BONE

Preferred by many of our best and largest growers owing to its great percentage of ammonia and available phosphate, which makes it quick acting. It is a mixture of pure tankage or blood and the best grade of Bone Meal in proportions to stimulate root action and bring out the best color in the blooms.

Guaranteed Analysis Per cent

Ammonia	6½ to 7½
Bone phosphate	25 to 35

Price

50 lb. bag	$1.35	500 lb. bag	$ 9.00
100 lb. bag	2.50	1000 lb. bag, ½ ton	16.00
200 lb. bag	4.00	2000 lb. bag, 1 ton	30.00

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE

One of the most effective of fertilizers and largely used by the best growers, both as a top dressing and in the manure tanks. The raw material for Hunt's Sheep Manure is the droppings taken from solid floor sheep corrals. Ordinary manures are largely shoveled up from the ground and contain a large proportion of soil for which you pay, but from which you get nothing except possibly weed seed. A trial order will convince the most skeptical of the superiority of our brand.

Guaranteed Analysis. Per ct.

Ammonia	3¼ to 4
Available phos. acid	1½ to 2
Actual potash	1¾ to 2½

Price

100 lb. bag	$1.50	1000 lbs., ½ ton	$ 9.00
500 lb. bag	5.00	2000 lbs., 1 ton	16.50

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The weather in January was unusually mild. With the exception of a few days, it was the mildest January in years. Business so far this month was better than expected. Stock remained scarce all through and continues to be so. Bulb stock and carnations still bring a good price, with none too many on the market. Sweet peas, valley and violets are none too plentiful, especially violets, which we always need.

Various Notes.

The club meeting, which was held the first Tuesday of the month, brought out the new candidates, to be elected later. The following were nominated: For president, Charles Sandiford and Ed. Slattery; vice-president, Charles Guenther; secretary, J. R. Cloudsley, William Legg and L. H. Neubeck; financial secretary, E. C. Brucker and D. B. Long; treasurer, W. Eiss. The meeting was well attended and much important business was transacted.

A. Adams has been on the sick list for a few days, but expects to be about again soon.

W. H. Grever, maker of the Ever Ready pot cover, has arranged a new effect for decorating, or, rather, a box for plants. The work is done in mission style and arranged in different shapes. He has it finished in brass nails and has met with good success in selling it.

Business keeps moving along in the same old way. Flowers are plentiful, so much so, in fact, that John Gratopp started throwing out roses and carnations, and replants with lettuce as soon as the plants are large enough. He says he shall not make a cutting this season and expects to grow nothing but lettuce, radishes, tomatoes and cucumbers.

Albert Witterstaetter went out of business last summer and took a position with E. A. Kuhnke.

Krueger Bros. have their city place in fine shape.

Cyclamens and Boston ferns seem to have gone out of fashion. They do not sell nearly so well as they used to a couple of years ago. E. A. K.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Trade has kept up well for the last two weeks. There has been a good demand for decorative material and stock for table decorations, and this, with a lot of funeral work between times, has kept all the florists busy. There have been more receptions lately than in a long time before, and business, as a whole, is better than it was before the holidays. The North Side Chamber of Commerce gave a charity ball, which proved a great success and which used many cut flowers in its decorations.

Roses are coming in well, especially Brides and Maids. Killarney, however, has been off crop for a week or so. Carnations are fine and meet with ready sales at good prices. Tulips are now coming in such quantities as to make one take notice, and all bulb stock is fine.

Violets are coming more plentifully and sales have been heavy on them. The single seems to be the favorite here.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a regular meeting at the store of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co. This was the first meeting since the holidays. There was a good attendance and it was decided to give another dance in the near future. O. Munk gave a nice talk on his trip to Indianapolis and it was enjoyed by all the club.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has a lot of azaleas that are just right, and they are finding ready sales.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports business as unusually active.

C. A. Roth reports business as good, and says he is cutting a nice lot of carnations and roses.

William Graff has been running a special sale on carnations at 35 cents per dozen for the last few days.

The Livingston Seed Co. has been having a special sale on Boston and other ferns.

S. S. Skidelsky was a visitor here last week, with his line of novelties. Mr. Pennock also was a visitor last week, and Israel Rosnosky, of H. F. Michell Co., was calling on the trade. J. M.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

We have had a week of wintry weather, the mercury coquetting with the zero mark for several mornings. This is in marked contrast with the most of the preceding weeks. But so far there has been little sunshine, and the poor quality of the flowers offered shows the effect of these untoward conditions. Trade has been fairly maintained and the only drawback has been the impossibility of supplying the cut flowers.

Roses are improving in quality all around. So, also, are violets, which find ready sale, especially those offered by the street fakers, who handle large consignments on each Saturday. Carnations seem to be off crop with a number of the growers. Daffodils are improving and some good Golden Spur are to be seen, but not in large quantities. Freesias are arriving in fine shape. Sweet peas seem to be overdone; everybody has a bench in bloom and they are only bringing 40 cents to 50 cents per hundred.

McKinley day seemed to have no influence here on carnation sales. One or two of the street fakers invested in a few hundred blooms, but this was about the only evidence of the advent of the day, except that the heroic bronze bust of McKinley, in the lobby of the city postoffice, was decorated with some handsome garlands of his favorite flower.

Various Notes.

The coming season seems to promise to be an active one in building operations, and in every direction there are preparations for new houses or extensions of existing plants.

Halliday Bros. are propagating carnations by the thousands and expect to plant more houses the coming season. Some of the finest blooms seen anywhere were cut at their place.

J. Bolgiano & Son report business far above last season's trade, especially in seed orders in both the flower and vegetable departments, and they are making preparations for a large spring trade in potted plants. Q.

Cheapest Sash Made

Don't think because our sash are made with 1½-inch frames, and the other concerns' from 1¾-inch, that theirs are the strongest. It is not so! They are weaker! They have to be that thick with their way of making joints. That extra thickness only adds to their weight and not to their strength. If they are heavier, there is just that much more strain on the joints, and they simply rack themselves out the sooner.

Sash that Last

weigh only 40 lbs. when all glazed. They have blind mortise, weather tight joints, and ⅝-inch round steel bracing bar through the center.

On all orders of ten or more sash, we make a freight allowance that will put them into Chicago, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Portland, Louisville, etc., at a price that will certainly interest any sash user. Furthermore, we don't ask you to keep them if they are not absolutely as good as we claim. Ship them back at our expense. And that isn't all; we will suggest three rigid tests for you to give them, after you have glazed one up. That shows how sure we are that our Sash That Last will stand the racket. You can't possibly go wrong on them—and you will certainly save money in the end.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

After the unusual activity of the previous week, the business of last week appeared especially dull. It was, however, a fair average for the season. There were few social functions and few funerals, so that the demand was largely curtailed. There was a slight improvement in the supply of about everything and the prices sagged a little under those of the week before. The dealers are complaining that the week end sales on violets have been badly cut into by the action of one of the large drug stores, making special Saturday bargain sales of violets at 19 cents for bunches of twenty-five, while a large department store has entered the competition by offering similar bunches for 15 cents.

Various Notes.

John Hay, caretaker for Mrs. William Goddard at her summer estate at Potowomet Neck, Warwick, lost all of his household effects by the recent fire. Mr. Hay was for several years florist and gardener for several of the large private estates in this vicinity. His brothers, William and John, are in the greenhouse business in this city and East Providence.

Miss M. A. Cutler, for many years in the retail florists' business in this city and Woonsocket, is considering an offer to enter the business in the latter city.

The Newport Horticultural Society, Monday evening, gave its eleventh annual ball in Masonic hall, Newport, and, as usual, the event was largely attended. The ball room had been made into a floral bower by the gardeners and decorators, who are members of the society. The floor was in charge of John T. Allen, who was assisted by Daniel J. Coughlin, Herbert Bliss, P. F. Reynolds, Andrew S. Meikle and John Urquhart. The committee of arrangements consisted of James Robertson, Andrew S. Meikle, John Urquhart, William F. Smith, John T. Allen, Bruce Butterton, P. F. Reynolds and Oscar Schultz.

President Frank O. Field, of the Providence Board of Trade, has announced the appointment of a committee of 200 of the leading business men of the city to arrange for a mass meeting of business men, which is to be held later this month for the purpose of organizing a movement to boom the trade and industries of Providence. The florists' trade is honored by the selection of a number of those identified with the trade as members of this committee. They are as follows: William Appleton, James B. Canning, William Hazard, Edmund J. Johnston, George Johnson & Son, Robert Johnston, George Kelley, Matthew Macnair, Alexander and Walter S. Macrae, Eugene McCarron, Timothy O'Connor, Michael Sweeney, Olney Williams and James A. Budlong 2d, of J. A. Budlong & Sons Co.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

WIZARD BRAND TRADE MARK MANURES

Dried, screened and packed in bags of 100 lbs. each.

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE
PURE - UNIFORM - RELIABLE

A strong and quick acting manure, highly recommended for carnations and chrysanthemums.

SHREDDED CATTLE MANURE
Easy to Handle and Apply

Stronger and better in every way than rough manure. Lasts much longer on the benches. Unequaled for mulching and feeding roses, liquid manuring and mixing with bench and potting soil. Used by all the largest growers.

Talks on Cypress

If you read our talk last week you know that "Tank" is the name of the cypress from which greenhouse material should be made.

Some of the makers of greenhouse material use this grade, but some do not. You want to be sure that this is the only kind of lumber used in making your material if you want a house that will last.

In the sash, door and blind business or in a planing mill the "first and second" grade of cypress is used in making interior finish, sash and doors for residences, etc., and firms making this class of work use the same lumber generally for making greenhouse material.

Their plan is to sort out the best and use it for making sash, bars, gutters, purlins, etc. Some of them must buy some of the "Tank" grade to get enough for the greenhouse work, but be careful and get only "Tank" grade.

We buy and use only "Tank" grade—we make nothing but greenhouse material. And our lumber is inspected three times by an expert before you get it. You are guaranteed sap-free cypress.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

STAR AND CRESCENT.

Those who make the star and crescent with a solid groundwork of white carnations or other flowers should be especially interested in the accompanying illustration, showing the design as made by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. The arrangement is as graceful, Mr. Fox thinks, as such a design will permit. White flowers were used, but with plenty of green, and made up loosely. Both the star and the crescent are made up lying flat on the counter and afterwards attached in their proper positions. In this way work can be done much more readily and exactly than were they placed in position first.

COLORS IN FUNERAL WORK.

White Flowers Not Essential.

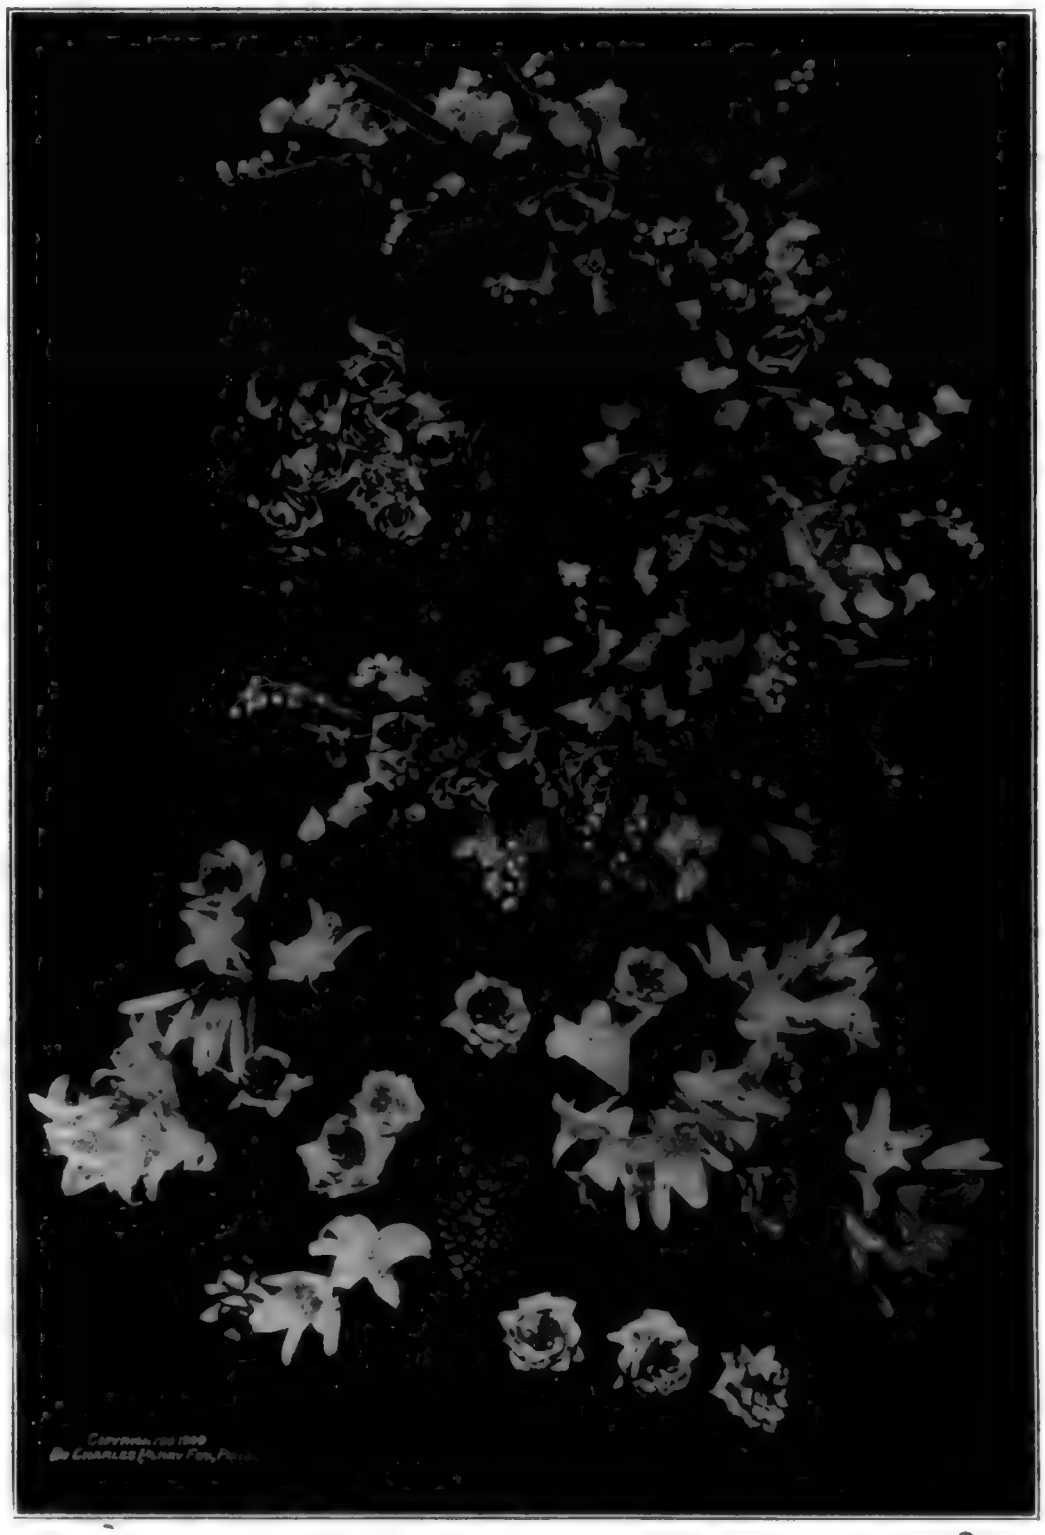
It was only a few years ago that nothing but white flowers were used in funeral work, and even at this date there are people who almost insist that white flowers only be used in making up their designs. These latter are mainly the country orders, or perhaps from people who, fortunately for them, have little occasion to buy or see funeral flowers.

With the growth of the florists' business the use in funeral work of most of the various colors in which flowers are available is steadily becoming more popular. Bright colors are not barred. Indeed, there is no finer funeral flower than the Beauty, peerless for presentation to the living, made up in bunches differing only in form. The casket cover, most expensive of all funeral arrangements, can in no way be more effectively made than of blue—the violet. And the less costly designs may, most of them, be made up with more or less color and remain in perfectly good taste. All florists should be duly appreciative of the many advantages the trade gains from this use of colored stock and everyone should do his part to help the tendency along.

Boon to the Country Florist.

Florists in the large cities, who have a variety of stock at their disposal and have the commission houses to fall back upon, hardly know what difficulties confront the retail florist in the small town, or the growers in the rural districts who receive occasional calls for funeral pieces. Even in the large cities there come times when a florist is at his wits' end, not knowing where to obtain stock for a design of specified colors or flowers. So you can easily imagine the predicament in which a florist of limited resources will find himself at times.

No doubt necessity, the mother of invention, is in a large measure responsible for the use of colored flowers in funeral work; still those of our profession who are continually endeavoring to make something just a little different from the ordinary should receive a share of the credit for the recognition of the suitability of colored stock for this use.



A design or spray of flowers in all-white is beautiful and always proper or appropriate, that is true; still with a little study and care we can so blend colors that the most artistic effects can be procured. In fact, it is mostly in the arrangement that the art lies.

White's the Thing in the Country.

One would think that the buyers of flowers in the smaller places would not be so particular as the people in the big centers, who see and use more flowers, but I really believe it is just the opposite. The country people stick to old-fashioned customs and the minute the florist tries to deviate from the rut, by which they also will benefit, they become suspicious — and then the real trouble commences. If possible, never let your prospective customer know that you have not or cannot get certain flowers called for. Few buyers really know what they want in the way of funeral flowers—except that it is human nature to want anything they can't get—and it is only the exceptional one that is not open to suggestion.

A Pillow in Pink.

Say, for instance, a customer comes into a store in a small town, wishing a funeral design for a departed relative. Perhaps she has thought of a pillow of all white flowers, with the inscription "Our Dear Brother" across it. All the flowers available are a few lilies, some white roses, Enchantress carnations, a few Romans and perhaps some forget-me-nots. Probably there also is a light pink azalea nearly through bloom. The first thing to do is to get the customer out of the notion that she must have all white. Tell her that while white is pretty, it is customary to use a little color to take away that solemn aspect; then, as the design in question happens to be for a young person, suggest the combination of pale blue and white on a light pink background. Take a few sprays of forget-me-not and some Enchantress carnations and show how well they look together. When you gain the customer's confidence, you get your order to go ahead and make up the pillow as you see fit.

The Star and Crescent.

When the order has been landed, it is up to you to turn out a design that will be a credit to yourself and will also make a decided hit with the purchaser, who will thereafter always have a good word for your establishment.

Making the Pillow.

When the frame has been mossed and covered with fern leaves, fasten some smilax, galax or ivy leaves around the edge and then commence with the flowers. First of all I would make a border of Roman hyacinths and azalea blossoms, wiring the latter to toothpicks the same as you would carnations. Next, place a lily near each corner. Then I would lay out the place the lettering is to occupy. If you have been wise you have cut the inscription down to just plain "Brother," for too much lettering spoils many an otherwise nicely made piece. Fill in the remaining space sparingly with the Enchantress carnations, making thereby a background of light pink. Arrange the forget-me-nots in a pretty border around the space in which the lettering is to be, and fill in the open space with the white roses stemmed about two to three inches long. A few sprays of some dainty green will make the white roses stand out.

Other Arrangements With Colors.

After you have made a few designs using light colors, and the people of your town have become a little accustomed to them, you can gradually work into the use of brighter colors, but at first it is well to remember that a design containing colored stock will appear all the brighter by contrast with the all-white designs by which it is likely to be surrounded.

In making sprays you can use flowers of brighter color than in designs. Only one kind of flowers will be used, so the colors cannot clash, and the brightness will be toned down by the liberal use of green. Colored flowers are specially appropriate for the funerals of elderly people.

The use of galax, magnolia or ivy leaves will give many opportunities for using colored flowers to good advantage. Red or lavender with bronze galax or the bronze or brown magnolia leaves is in good taste. On green galax, ivy or green magnolia leaves, pink or pale blue looks well. This latter combination is well to use for young people.

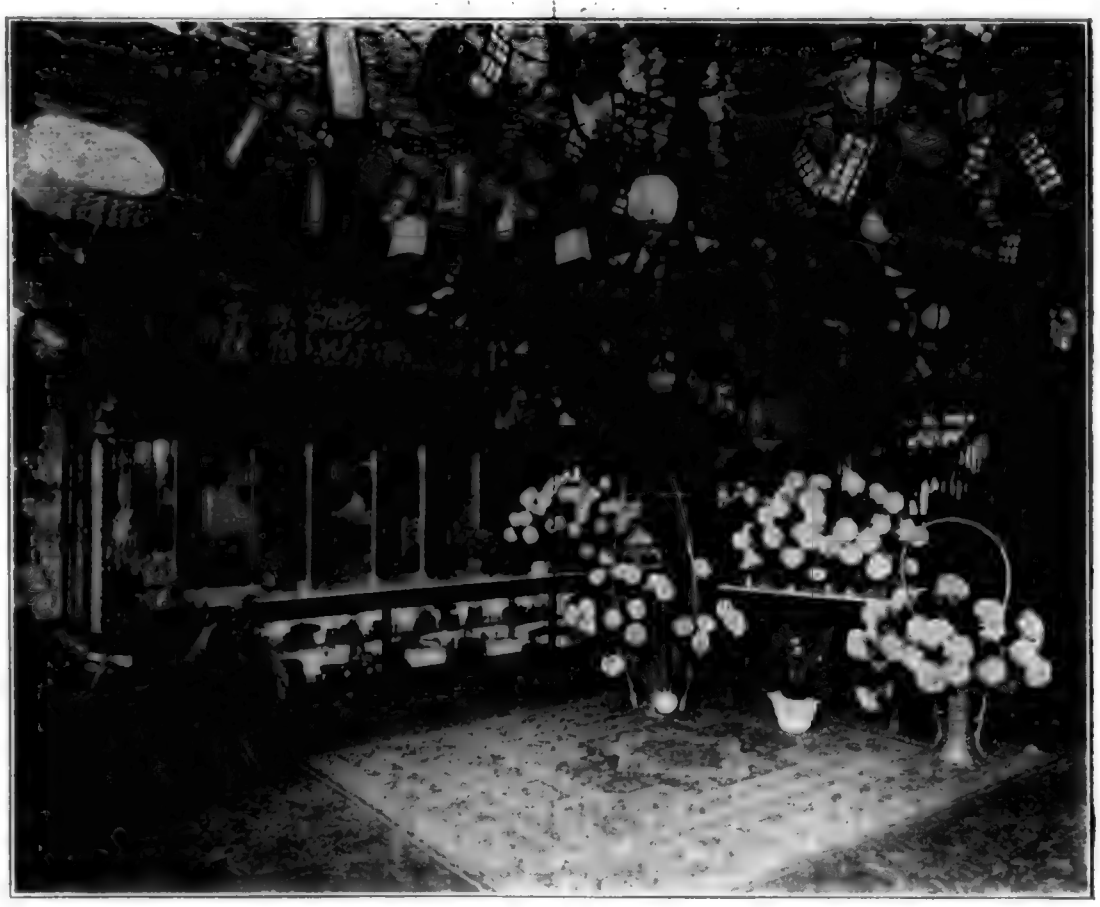
Using yellow as a suggestion of gold will many times aid you in disposing of jonquils, daffodils, yellow mums, etc.

Thousands of red roses are used daily in the large cities in funeral work. The beautiful red of the Richmond rose in sprays with valley, and tied with some ribbon to match either the roses or the green, is very effective and can be used especially well for old people. Purple is also used more for the funeral of old people and this color, combined with white, is very good.

The Lodge Insignia.

The various lodge pieces usually call for colored flowers and, while they are often just what you want to clean up your stock, still at times it is impossible to get the colors wanted. To guard against such an emergency, I would advise you to always carry in stock some immortelles in different colors.

In the different pieces on a base you can use colored stock. The base can be considered as a separate piece. For instance, you have just completed a standing anchor in white and pink. In the base you can use almost any color you have at your disposal, dark red, purple, etc.



As soon as you mix the colors you will have trouble unless the correct colors or shades are used, but as long as you keep them apart, as I said before, many colors can be used in the same design. Many times you can beautify what would otherwise have been a too severe contrast with a fine spray of adiantum or asparagus.

Hugo Schroeter.

THE ZIEGER STORE.

Pittsburg, the Manchester of America, is recognized as one of the best flower cities in the country; Pittsburg millionaires cannot be so bad as they sometimes are painted in the divorce court news if there is anything in the elevating influence of flowers, about which we all have heard so much of late. The city has a number of flower stores which will rank with the finest in the country, among them being that of the Zieger Co., shown in the accompanying illustrations.

The picture of the exterior shows what a splendid appearance is made from the street and will serve as an example of the modern idea of what is necessary to attract the patronage of discriminating persons who have the power to purchase that which most forcefully appeals to their fancy. An ornate establishment is not all that is needed to insure a good business, but it goes a long way in attracting the best buyers. The interior of the store is trimmed in silver birch, even the ceiling being covered with it. Not everyone will approve the way the baskets, hampers, zinc-lined plant receptacles and other fancy articles are displayed upon wall and ceiling—especially ceiling—for their presence there might produce an unpleasant sense of something impending, and the ladies wearing headgear of 1909 proportions might not care to risk the upward glance, if actual inspection is intended, but the effect is novel. The display case for cut flowers is located at one side of the store and can be entered from three sides. It was specially designed and built for the store by the McCray Refrigerator Co. A conservatory was long ago recognized as an important adjunct of an up-to-date establishment and now the modern stores are being fitted up with hardly less useful demonstrating rooms. The stairway at the center leads to such rooms on the second floor of the Zieger building.

Store of the Zieger Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

A Unique Decoration for an Unusually Large Round Table.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

New York is the city to which one looks for the unique in the decorator's art. In no other city of the United States are there so many calls upon the florists for something out of the ordinary. And nothing so tries the skill of the decorator as the demand for novelty, for the untried and the unconventional, especially if the idea is conceived by another and the florist only called upon to execute the details. The more unique a decoration is, the more likely it is to lack in the essential elements of artistic perception and in the accompanying illustration, reproducing a photograph showing a decoration by Charles Thorley, the part of the work to be commended is not that closest to the diners. The feature of the decoration most striking at first glance was the use of fruits upon the table in place of flowers. This certainly was not the idea of a leading artist in the arrangement of flowers, but may have had a special significance, not apparent in the mere statement that the decoration was for a dinner tendered to Lady Paget, by Townsend Mantin, at the Hotel Plaza, New York, January 31.

The round table is remarkable for its size, seating fifty-five persons, and the floral features of the decoration are excellent. Wild smilax was used to break the whiteness of the ornate walls and the palms and ferns employed in banking the corners were specimen plants, but the cherry tree in the center of the table was the best part of the decoration. The tree was twenty feet in height and had a spread of twenty-five feet. The tree itself was made by Reed & Keller, leaving the cherries and cherry blossoms to be attached by the decorator. Beneath the table a base five feet in diameter gave a solid footing for the tree, the trunk being made of heavy iron piping wound with cane and covered with electric tape. A special point was the natural way in which the branches of heavy wire were attached to the trunk. The tape used for winding was subsequently colored to represent the natural appearance of the bark of a cherry tree. Ripe cherries and cherry blossoms are not usually found on the same tree, but in this case poetic license permitted the decorator to heighten the effect of his piece de resistance by the use of both.

Taken altogether, this is undoubtedly one of the most unique of the many notable decorations which have been put on by the leading New York retailers at the Plaza hotel, the gathering place of New York's wealthiest people.

WHITE FLY.

In reply to the inquiry by C. T. O., in the REVIEW of January 21, with reference to white fly on his ageratums, I would suggest that he get some Whale Oil Caustic Potash Soap, dissolve it at the rate of two ounces to the gallon of water (to be used before it gets cold), and spray any plants that have eggs on their leaves, also giving the plants in pots or beds enough of the mixture to wet down at least half an inch. I find the best way to do this is to use a sprinkler on the watering pot.

I had tomatoes next to the greenhouse last summer and they were just covered with white fly. When the cool weather came they got inside, and I had what I might call a glorious supply of them early this winter. I tried several remedies. I did not want to use hydrocyanic acid gas, and having had complete success with this soap upon trees and shrubs for San Jose scale, I thought I would try it also for the white fly. The result is that today there is not a white fly to be seen. Where I found no eggs on the leaves I did not spray, but I watered everything —adiantums, orchids, etc.—and saw no bad effect. The mixture will kill the fly grub in the earth and the eggs on the leaves, and if used two or three times, two weeks apart, there will be no more white fly to be seen.

As near as I can judge, the life of the fly is about six weeks.

If C. T. O. tries this mixture and has the success that I had, I hope he will report in the REVIEW. I have not seen this Whale Oil Caustic Potash Soap advertised in any of the seed catalogues, but found it in one of the Boston seed houses.

URBANA SELECTED FOR THE MEETING OF 1910.

The Springfield Meeting.

Having successfully exercised its blandishments upon the legislature and become the youngest member of the large family of interests endowed by the state through its appropriation for the Agricultural College, the Illinois State Florists' Association should turn its efforts toward the propitiation of Old Boreas. In 1908 the opening day of its convention was made memorable by the biggest blizzard of the year, and again this week high winds and piled-up snowdrifts deterred many from attending the meeting. The effect upon the attendance this year was all the more severe that the storm came the day before the convention, rather than after the members had started for Springfield. However, the storm abated about the opening hour of the meeting and no pleasanter days could have been desired. There were three conventions in Springfield on the same days, and the legislature is in session. The crowd may have added something to the gaiety of the occasion, but it was not conducive to comfortable hotel accommodations and it is said some beds contained three sleepers, even though some, upon such occasions, are said not to sleep at all.

The Springfield florists repeated the hospitable entertainment of last year, and with the experience gained from the 1908 meeting were able to conduct the convention absolutely without friction. One of the interesting features was that on the morning of February 18 a box of carnations was placed upon the desk of every member of the state legislature. The convention adopted the following resolution, bearing upon the work of the legislature:

Resolved, that this association endorses the bill for University appropriation and respectfully urges upon both senators and representatives that it be passed as introduced.

This bill carries $35,000 for floricultural work. Having once broken into the charmed circle, the florists' appropriation now comes up as a part of the general University bill and does not have to make its own way as it did in the first instance.

Business Sessions.

The business sessions of the society began Tuesday afternoon, February 16, with some introductory remarks by Hon. Charles E. Hay, one of Springfield's leading citizens. He was followed by Mr. Murray, the spokesman for the mayor. Mr. Murray performed the same duty a year ago, so that he said it was like greeting old friends. The mayor probably delegates this part of his duty to Mr. Murray because of that gentleman's fluent tongue, and he did not neglect to mention the elevating influence which comes from the association with flowers—and florists. George Asmus, president of the Chicago Florists' Club, responded in his usual happy vein.

President Albert T. Hey, upon taking the chair, read his annual address, which made a number of recommendations with regard to the routine work of the society, and was in part as follows:

President's Address.

"Since we last met, the Experiment Station, of which we are so justly proud, has been completed and we have at the University of Illinois as fine and complete a plant in every detail for experimental work as can be found in the country. I only wish that each member of this society could see it for himself, for then only can he appreciate the work of this association. This initial movement has been watched with great interest from other states and under the management of Prof. H. B. Dorner, who is an enthusiastic worker in the cause, we expect to get results that will be of utmost importance to our association and the trade in general.

"Now, I wish to impress on the members here, and on the trade in general, that just because we have this station established we can not fall back and rest upon our oars. This year we are going before the legislature for an annual appropriation of $17,500 to carry on the work. We need to increase the plant to carry on other experiments. Many of you may think that this is a large sum of money to spend, but if you could only realize that in organizing an Experimental Station there is a vast amount of detail in connection with the getting up of records, compiling literature on the subjects to be treated, references, etc., and getting a thorough groundwork to build on, you would think it small in proportion. Remember that we had nothing of this kind in the country before.

"Now this has all been done and we can truthfully say that in this work Illinois takes first place. Let every member put his shoulder to the wheel and help get this appropriation. I have appointed J. F. Ammann on the legislative committee and any help you can give him will be duly appreciated.

"We fully intended to give you complete statistics of glass in Illinois at this meeting, but in order to complete this it will be necessary for someone to canvass certain sections of the state and I cannot recommend anyone better than our present secretary. As this involves time and money, I recommend that his expenses be paid. When these statistics are completed they will prove valuable, and as this work has cost the association some little money, I would recommend that they be kept as its property. We have already had several inquiries from the trade for these and I would suggest that copies be made and sold for a small sum to cover the actual expense involved, as they will be the first and only accurate record of those engaged in the trade in this state.

"I am of the opinion that this association, representing the floral industry of the state, should take some action in the matter of a state flower. Several of the states have by legislative enactment recognized some flower as its floral emblem and I believe that this society should go on record and recommend to our legislature some flower that is indigenous and appropriate for Illinois."

The president's address was referred for consideration to a committee consisting of W. N. Rudd, George Asmus and E. W. Guy.

The report of Secretary J. F. Ammann covered the work of the year. In part, the secretary said:

Secretary's Report.

"Our membership at present writing is eleven life and 155 annual members. The matter of life membership should appeal to many who are, and who should, become members of our organization. Every proprietor of any medium size establishment should become a life member. This is not only a benefit to the society but is a good business proposition, at least for every young or middle-aged man.

"The secretary takes this opportunity to thank all those who responded so promptly to the call for data on the amount of glass in their respective counties. While the work is not nearly completed, reports from thirty counties complete, and four incomplete, show an aggregate of over 6,000,000 square feet under glass, with sixty-eight counties complete and four in part to hear from."

Treasurer's Report.

Treasurer F. L. Washburn presented a report as follows:

Receipts	$196.90
Disbursements	58.89
Balance	$138.01

The president appointed P. J. Foley, A. C. Brown and A. G. Fehr as an auditing committee. At the same time he appointed as judges of the trade exhibits, F. L. Washburn, Peter Olsem and George A. Kuhl.

The association's advisory board appointed in connection with the work of the State Experiment Station consists of J. C. Vaughan, W. N. Rudd, F. J. Heinl, C. E. Gallantine and J. F. Ammann. W. N. Rudd is secretary and made a report for the board.

Report of Advisory Committee.

On behalf of the Advisory Committee Mr. Rudd stated that the experiment greenhouses at Urbana had cost $13,500, of which $7,500 had been provided from the general fund of the station and only $6,000 from the special appropriation for floriculture. Continuing, he said:

"It was unanimously agreed to ask the state legislature at the present session for an appropriation as follows:

For buildings	$18,000.00
For publications	4,000.00
For research work	13,000.00
Total	$35,000.00

"The committee wishes to make known to the association the extent of the obligations of the florists of this state to Eugene Davenport, director of the Experiment Station, and to J. C. Blair, chief of the Department of Horticulture. These gentlemen have shown a most enthusiastic interest in our project and have forwarded our plans in every possible way. The committee also wishes to signify its high commendation of the work done by H. B. Dorner. Having been in close touch with him at all times and having made frequent and careful examination, we have found nothing to criticise, much to commend and believe that the station as well as this association is to be congratulated in securing his valuable services.

"We wish to urge upon every member of the association the desirability of visiting the University as often as possible and of inspecting the work being done for us there. We believe that all will concede that the greenhouse plant is a model commercial plant and well worth the study of all florists as regards construction details and heating apparatus. The committee feels sure that every florist will be made welcome by Mr. Dorner and that the educational value to each one coming from an examination of the work can hardly be overestimated. It should be noted that while we have now two 100-foot houses, if we get the appropriation asked for we shall be able at once to erect four more houses, thus giving us three times the present capacity for doing good work for the florist."

Mr. Rudd presented a supplemental report on his own account. The official report was accepted and the supplemental one referred to a committee, which subsequently reported it had been withdrawn.

The committee on state fair made a report which was accepted and the committee continued. It consists of J. F. Ammann, George Asmus and A. T. Pyfer. A letter was read from W. O'Dwyer relative to space for floriculture at the fair and urging the members of the association to help in getting suitable accommodations.

Papers and Addresses.

One of the most interesting addresses to which any florists' body has had the pleasure of listening was that by Eugene Davenport, dean at the College of Agriculture. He talked for half an hour or more on the reasons why it is good public policy for the legislature to appropriate public funds for the teaching of professions, and for research work in the special callings, at the State University, and every one of his hearers would have been glad to have had him go on indefinitely. He brought out the fact that what the florists ask of the legislature is trifling in comparison to the sums expended in the care of unproductive citizens.

Prof. J. H. Collins, superintendent of the public schools of Springfield, made an address on "School Gardens," a phase of education which has been especially successful at the state capital.

Prof. H. B. Dorner spoke on "Our Experiment Stations," describing the work that has been thus far done for floriculture.

W. N. Rudd was on the program for a talk on "A Few Carnations I Have Seen," and gave a characteristic address.

The Banquet.

The Springfield Florists' Club tendered a banquet to the visitors at St. Nicholas hotel on the evening of February 16. The menu was elaborate and the service excellent, which put everyone in a mood to enjoy the speaking which followed. Charles E. Hay was toastmaster. The invocation was asked by Ven. F. A. De Rosset. The toasts were as follows:

Beacons—On the Carnation Horizon, by W. N. Rudd.
Current Topics—From a Professional Viewpoint, by Prof. H. B. Dorner.
Inspirations of a Flower Show, by George Asmus.
Springfield—Past, Present and Future, by N. R. Roberts.
The Western Fad—Is It a Perennial? by Albert T. Hey.
Snowbound—In a Friendly Community, by George H. Angermueller.
Afterglow—Of the American Carnation Society Meeting, by J. F. Ammann.

All the talks were brief, and many of them witty, so that the affair was voted by all an even greater success than the similar one a year ago.

Those Present.

All the Springfield florists were on hand every minute.

Among those present from outside were the following:

Ammann, J. F., Edwardsville, Ill.
Angermueller, George H., St. Louis, Mo.
Asmus, George, Chicago, Ill.

Judges' Report.

The judges made a report Wednesday morning, mentioning each exhibit and recommending certificates for the following:

Chicago Carnation Co., on Carnation Conquest, scored 86 points.

Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, on Carnation Greenwood, scored 86 points.

Baur & Smith, on Carnation Shasta, scored 89 points.

Bassett & Washburn, on O. P. Bassett, scored 86 points.

A. C. Brown, on Carnation Sangamo, scored 87 points, and on Carnation Superba, scored 90 points.

Fritz Bahr, on Carnation Lucille, scored 85 points.

Bertermann Bros. Co., on Carnation James Whitcomb Riley, scored 87 points.

Honorable mention was made of White Enchantress, exhibited by the Chicago Carnation Co.; Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, exhibited by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association; carnations, exhibited by Bell Miller; roses, exhibited by J. F. Ammann, and roses, exhibited by W. H. Gullett & Sons.

The Trade Exhibits.

The trade exhibition, while not as large as that of a year ago, was nevertheless an attractive display and pleasing to the members as well as the general public, the latter being admitted each afternoon. The exhibitors were:

A. C. Brown, Springfield, made a large display. Superba and Sangamo, pink seedlings, were especially good. Gov. Deneen, royal purple, was strikingly in contrast to the standard colors. He also showed Rose-pink Enchantress, pink seedling Clara Mae, Enchantress, Mrs. Patten and a vase of mixed seedlings. His roses were Mrs. Ames, Perle, Killarney, Uncle John and Richmond. He showed some profusely-flowered azaleas, a rhododendron, pans of tulips, asparagus, some boxwood, well flowered cinerarias and a batch of stocky geraniums flowered in 5-inch pots.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, had an exceptionally large display, including five vases of the following varieties: Aristocrat, Melody, White Perfection, Beacon, White Enchantress, Winsor, Sarah Hill, Splendor, Enchantress, Andrew Carnegie, Lawson-Enchantress and, last but not least, Conquest, the pink with white edging the petals.

Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, Chicago, had a splendid vase of Greenwood, light pink, of large size and good form. Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, white, also was well shown. A dark red seedling, No. 1104 C, also looked good.

Bell Miller, Springfield, put up seven vases of carnations, including Variegated Lawson, White Perfection, Mrs. Lawson, Rose-pink Enchantress, Lady Bountiful, Winsor and Enchantress, all well grown.

Carl Rauth, Springfield, had a table of pandanus, Phœnix Roebelenii, azaleas, araucarias and pans of tulips. He also had vases of Enchantress, White Perfection, White Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress carnations.

Wirth & Gaupp, Springfield, Boston ferns, azaleas, araucarias, begonias. They also had five vases of well-grown carnations, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Lawson, Enchantress, Lady Bountiful and White Enchantress.

Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, showed a vase of their new white, Shasta, of good size, fine form and glistening purity of color.

A. F. Longren, Des Plaines, and Fritz Bahr, Highland Park, Ill., exhibited twenty-five blooms of Lucille, with fine color markings on the Prosperity order.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, showed some splendid roses, the varieties being Chatenay, Alice Roosevelt, Richmond, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Rhea Reid and Killarney.

Charles Knopf Floral Co., Richmond,

Ind., Ruby and Mrs. Charles Knopf carnations, but these had traveled badly.

Bassett & Wasburn, Chicago, staged a splendid vase of their now well-known red carnation, O. P. Bassett.

Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, sent twenty-five blooms of their new yellow carnation, James Whitcomb Riley.

St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, exhibited a vase of its dark pink seedling carnation designated as No. 20.

W. H. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, well-grown Maid and Bride roses.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, had a long table of palms, ferns, ficus, asparagus, pandanus, rose plants and some fifteen varieties of bulbs.

Wertheimer Bros., New York, Sparkling Dewdrop chiffon, other chiffons, ribbons, corsage shields, violet ties, etc.

I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg, staple for mending bursted carnation calyxes.

Geo. M. Garland Co., Des Plaines, section of greenhouse embodying iron gutter and truss construction.

John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, section of greenhouse roof embodying new ventilator hinge, gutter, bar splice, etc.

American Blower Co., Detroit, model of the Detroit steam trap for returning the condensation to greenhouse boilers.

Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago., model of greenhouse boiler, heat generator, pipe tongs, etc.

Springfield Boiler & Mfg. Co., Springfield, boilers and shaking grates.

Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich., standard pots, lawn vases, wire work.

Among those represented by signs were: A. Dietsch Co., Chicago, greenhouse material; Laib Co., Louisville, pipe, fittings and boilers; E. H. Hunt, Chicago, cut flowers and supplies; Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, seeds and supplies; Wm. Hagemann & Co., New York, bulbs; C. A. Kuehn, St. Louis, cut flowers and supplies; Chas. F. Meyer & Co., New York, bulbs and nursery stock; Pulverized Manure Co., Chicago, Wizard brand manure; Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, greenhouse material; Geo. H. Angermueller, St. Louis, cut flowers and supplies; Peterson Nursery, Chicago, nursery stock; W. J. Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., wired toothpicks; D. S. Crum, Pine Apple, La., wild smilax.

The Sleigh Ride.

Wednesday afternoon the annual sleigh ride took place, all visitors who remained being taken on a tour of inspection of the greenhouse establishments of Springfield. Special interest was felt in A. C. Brown's benches of Sangamo and Superba, new pink carnations.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Notice to Members.

Inasmuch as I will not enter upon the duties of secretary of the A. C. S. until about April 1, you will kindly send all matters pertaining to that society to Mr. Herr, who is still doing business at the old stand. A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y-elect.

PROPAGATION.

The Main Crop of Cuttings.

It is none too soon for those who grow for exhibition to put in their main crop of cuttings, particularly of the dwarf varieties. The tall growers, such as General Hutton, do not need to be propagated for a month or more yet, but I like to see all the average growers in the sand box by March 1. These will give fine stock to plant out in May and, as a general rule, plants set out in May will produce larger flowers than those set out in June.

Some of the varieties that are grown for exhibition may not be suitable for commercial growing, but with many kinds it is simply a matter of early or late propagating. Take Appleton, for instance. There is no yellow that will beat it for all-round good qualities as a show variety, and as grown in our vicinity it is equally good as a commercial yellow; yet some growers say the stem is weak and the flower flops over. Many varieties are the same way when improperly grown and, as I have often said, the difference between a commercial variety and an exhibition variety is often merely the difference between a good grower and a poor one. Polly Rose, as sent into the New York market by some growers, with 3-foot to 4-foot stems, will bring from $4 to $6 a dozen, and the same variety will be selling as low as 3 cents at the same time.

Exhibition Varieties.

To return to the exhibition varieties, I do not think that the list which I gave in these columns after the shows could be much improved on, and the grower who has to buy in stock should get in his order at once, as all catalogue men report an exceptional demand this year. This can be accounted for in several ways. The big show at Chicago helped to introduce a large circle of growers to many new kinds that they had not seen before, and in addition several shows are scheduled to be held that have not been held in some time. New York will have two shows, I understand, and several smaller towns are getting into line. With the return of prosperity, the future of the mum is bright.

The questions of propagation I have talked over so often in these notes that I am almost ashamed to even mention them any more. Some growers trim up the leaves much, others little. Some make a clean cut at a joint; others just snap off the cutting, and both root an equally large percentage of the cuttings. So, as Dooley would remark, "What's the use iv worryin'?"

A Caution as to Spraying.

Keep the stock from wilting and it roots better and much more quickly, but do not spray your cuttings every day, unless you want to have a good percentage rot. February and May are two very different months to propagate in, and the spraying necessary in May means trouble at this season of the year. In our own case, operating in a lean-to house with a north aspect, the cuttings are well watered when first put in and seldom get any more till they are taken out and potted. Growers using a high temperature, with bottom heat, could not root their plants with so little moisture, but the mum is a cool growing plant and does not need such treatment as stove plants require.

Keep the draughts away from the cuttings, but, on the other hand, avoid a stuffy atmosphere, as this will breed fungi in the benches.

Common sense is the only thing necessary at this season in order to get a good start with the plants, and anything well begun is half done, as the old proverb has it. Chas. H. Totty.

NONIN ON TWO STEMS.

The accompanying illustration shows a good marketable grade of chrysanthemums. The variety is Jeanne Nonin and these blooms were grown by Ernest L. Johnson, at Palmer, Mass. He propagated his stock in February and benched the young plants in June. He carried up two stems to the plant, for, like a good many growers who cater to a local demand, it better suits his need to have a quantity of good, clean stock of moderate size, rather than to make special effort for fancy stuff, such as must bring good prices to be profitable; the local growers haven't the special demand that will pay the price. Mr. Johnson's plants were fed only with liquid cow manure and the blooms could be cut with extra long stems by the time the flowers were finished.

Nonin has proved to be one of the best of the commercial varieties. It finishes evenly and a house can be cut out clean within a very few days, making way for another crop.

RAILROAD GARDENERS.

The executive committee of the American Association of Railroad Gardeners met in the Illinois Central offices, Chicago, February 12, and selected Philadelphia for the next annual convention, to be held in August. The day was not fixed, but it will immediately follow the meeting of the S. A. F. at Cincinnati, in order to give any of the members who desire an opportunity to visit the florists' convention. After the Philadelphia meeting, the annual inspection trip of railroad gardens will occupy about a week, on the principal roads leading into Philadelphia, New York and Boston. The exact itinerary has not yet been completed.

All bona fide railroad employees connected with the gardening department of North American railroads are entitled to membership. The annual dues are $1.

The association is young, but very promising. It has not been extensively advertised and consequently a great many eligible to membership have never heard of it. Any publicity that the REVIEW can give it will therefore be greatly appreciated. GEO. B. MOULDER, Sec'y.

INSIDE CROPS FOR SUMMER.

Will you tell me what I can grow in a small greenhouse in the summer months, after my pansies and geraniums are sold? C. M. H.

There are quite a number of crops which you could profitably grow. If there is a market where tomatoes could be sold, they would make a profitable crop, provided, of course, that you have the necessary beds or benches and head room for them. If you decide to grow these, start them early in March and have good stock in 4-inch pots ready to plant as soon as your pansies and geraniums are out of the way. Good varieties are Stone, Comet and Early Jewel. Cucumbers are another summer crop you can grow if your house has sufficient head room.

In the way of flowers, chrysanthemums benched in June or the early part of July, of such early varieties as Polly Rose, Pacific, Golden Glow and Halliday, could be cleared off by the middle of October and would probably be as good as anything you could grow. If you have a call for summer flowers, you can plant asters in the benches. Use such varieties as Victoria, Queen of the Market and Comet. These will prove useful and profitable, if you have a local retail trade, and will also ship well.

Nonin Chrysanthemums Grown Two to the Plant.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Asters.

The two most important annuals for florists are sweet peas and asters. The latter are more easily grown than the former, and flowering, as they do, satisfactorily over a long season, shipping well, lasting finely when cut, and being indispensable in funeral work, it is not to be wondered at that their successful culture means much to many commercial growers. If a selection of seed has not yet been secured, no time should be lost in ordering the needed supplies for the coming season. A really bewildering list of varieties of this popular annual are offered by the many advertisers in the REVIEW. Whatever kinds you purchase, be sure you get the best quality. Cheap seed of any flowers always proves dear in the end. Unless your trade calls for mixtures, rely on packets of separate colors, such as pure white, pink, lavender, blue and scarlet. The two first named are always the most in demand.

Seed sown three weeks ago for culture inside is now giving us little plants, nearly ready for transplanting. A first sowing for outdoor planting is now timely. Use shallow flats of light, sandy soil, cover lightly, water with a fine rose can, and in a temperature of 60 degrees the seedlings will appear within a week. Remove to a house kept 5 to 10 degrees cooler when they are nicely germinated. Keep well up to the light and water carefully to prevent damping off.

For the earliest sowing, we use Queen of the Market, also called Queen of the Earliest. For successional batches, Giant Comet, Victoria, Vick's Branching, Semple's and Chrysanthemum are used. Seed can be sown as late as early July. For the last sowings such varieties as Mignon Dwarf Chrysanthemum and Victoria are good. Of the newer asters, Debutante, pure white; General Jacqueminot, rich crimson; Enchantress, flesh pink, and Daybreak, shrimp pink, are especially good.

Unless you are growing aster plants for spring sales, do not make the mistake of sowing much seed yet. One variety now is sufficient. Make a sowing every second or third week until July 1 and you will have a constant supply of asters from late July until frost. The proper ground to be used for asters and its preparation will be treated fully in a future issue.

Seed Sowing.

The time has now arrived to make first sowings of quite a number of bedding out and greenhouse plants. There are advantages in sowing some seeds in February, rather than a month later, especially if the plants are not too rampant growers. There is a good, steady bottom heat in the steam or hot water pipes. A month hence on some days they will be cool, as the increasing power of the sun will necessitate shutting off most of the heat for a few hours daily. An even, moist temperature and shade from the sun's rays are what seeds require. The bulk will germinate nicely in a night temperature of 60 degrees. A few will start better in 5 to 10 degrees more heat. Those preferring cool treatment should be moved to a lower temperature soon after germination, to prevent their becoming drawn.

The ideal soil for all flower seeds should be largely of leaf-mold. Loam should not compose even half the compost for any of the seeds. Fine sand should be freely used. Be sure to drain all receptacles well. Place some moss or rough portions of the loam over the drainage. After adding finer material, pass the top portion through a fine mesh screen, and level it evenly before sowing any seeds. Use care in covering the seeds. The old rule was to cover each seed its own depth. This holds good in most cases now. Fine seeds, such as gloxinia, begonia, mimulus, etc., are better not covered at all, unless it be with a little fine sand. All flats or pans should be covered with paper for a few days, gradually removing it as the seedlings begin to appear.

A few varieties of seeds which may be sown now are: Verbena, Torenias Bailloni and Fournieri, petunia, datura, asters (a first batch for outdoors), stocks, ricinus, Vinca alba and rosea, lobelia, begonia (all varieties overlooked should be sown at once), gloxinia, cannas, browallia, antirrhinum, heliotropes, berried solanums, musa, amaryllis, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri and hibiscus.

Among hardier plants are: Aquilegia (all varieties), single annual hollyhock, Canterbury bells, campanula in variety, pentstemons (desirable plants treated as annuals), antirrhinum, hardy asters, pyrethrum, kochia and trichopilia. Quick growing annuals, like balsams, zinnias, cosmos, Cobœa scandens, moonflower and marigolds, need not be sown for a few weeks yet. Salvia splendens and its varieties, Zurich, Bonfire, compacta, etc., may be started now, but will make sufficiently large plants if left until the middle of March.

Perennial seeds sown now and transplanted to nursery rows in early May will make quite heavy plants by fall. A few good sorts to sow are: Aquilegias, campanulas of all sorts, Lupinus polyphyllus, veronicas, delphiniums, pyrethrums, aubrietias, Alyssum saxatile, kniphofias and hibiscus. Pentstemons of a first-class strain make desirable plants for massing effects. They should be sown during February.

Bedding Geraniums.

The increasing power of the sun is sending the geranium plants along much faster now. Never allow them to become crowded, or you seriously injure them. It should be the aim of the grower to have the plants as bushy and stocky as possible. To achieve these ends, each plant must be kept from crowding its neighbors. The strongest plants will now be in 4-inch pots, the second size in 3-inch pots, and late cuttings should be rooted in a size smaller. It is now rather late to put in cuttings to make suitable plants for bedding out. Do not give the bedding geraniums any shade. Allow them abundant ventilation. Let them dry out well between waterings. Remove all decaying foliage and spread them out a little every few days. The foliage should never be damp at nightfall. This has a tendency to promote leaf blight.

Shamrocks.

It is just a month until shamrocks will be wanted. Where they are still growing in flats they should be potted off at once. Pots from 1-inch up to 4-inch, as well as small pans, are commonly used for shamrocks. A light soil, containing sand and a little well decayed manure, grows good stock. Mildew is liable to attack the plants if exposed to cold draughts. This renders them unsalable. Shamrocks do best in a cool house; 45 degrees at night is about right.

Lorraine Begonias.

The earliest batch of Lorraine leaves are now well rooted and quite a few little plants starting from the stalks. These are being placed in 2-inch pots of leaf-mold and sand. The old leaves can be dispensed with. The newly potted little plants should be kept warm and moist until established, when a rather cooler, sunnier and airy house will do them better. Cuttings of soft wood from the base of the old plants, when obtainable, should be inserted. These root much more quickly than the leaves and will develop into floriferous plants. Those raised from leaf cuttings make more open heads and the flowers are produced rather less freely, which is a decided advantage. The great objection constantly urged against Gloire de Lorraine is that it carries too much bloom and too few leaves. This is undeniably true. There is still ample time to get in more leaf cuttings and, of course, shoots may be rooted for several months yet.

Genistas.

To be in season for Easter, genistas may now be brought into a cool house. Genistas resent forcing and go to pieces quickly in a store if they have been grown warm. They require abundant supplies of water. One thorough drying out will destroy the flowers after they have begun to open. See that young stock, rooted last fall, is not allowed to become too potbound. Keep them pinched into shape. Standard genistas are occasionally seen. They are easily produced by running up a single shoot to any required height, keeping all side growths removed, and pinching the main shoot when it has reached the desired height. The shoot should be securely staked to keep it straight.

Acacias.

The various acacias, such as armata, Drummondii, Riceana, Baileyana and heterophylla, are all desirable Easter plants. They naturally flower in spring and may require some retarding to have them in good shape for Easter. It is a great mistake to have these fully opened before they are sold. Some varieties, notably armata, which is most in evidence commercially, when in full flower will have a considerable percentage of their little circular flowers brown instead of yellow. Customers naturally fight shy of any plant carrying faded-looking flowers. It is, therefore, a good plan not to attempt to have all the flowers open at Easter. If your plants are being held in a cold house or pit, in a semi-dormant condition, you can easily get them into flower in four or five weeks in a temperature of 50 degrees.

Nephrolepis.

If you do not grow any stock plants of nephrolepis in benches, it will pay you to reserve a small portion for them. They grow much more vigorously and make an abundance of runners when given a free root run. Any old plants you have standing around will probably be carrying a number of runners now. Cut these off and place in flats in a warm, moist, shaded house, where they will soon establish themselves, and later, when some of the violets or carnations can be dispensed with, plant them out to get good plants for next fall's trade. Nephrolepis are not fastidious as to soil; loam, sand and a little well-spent manure suits them. A mulch of well-decayed manure over those being utilized as stock plants in benches will be found helpful.

PFEIFER'S CULTURE.

Mention of the large crop cut last spring, by William P. Pfeifer, of Utica, N. Y., has brought a number of inquiries as to how it was done. Mr. Pfeifer is a modest man, and just a little reluctant to bring his light out from under its bushel, but makes the following statement to accompany the illustration, showing one of his benches of Enchantress photographed last spring:

"I do not consider myself an expert carnation grower, by any means, but I always manage to have as good as the other fellow and last spring had a really phenomenal cut. The house shown in the illustration was planted August 14. It is 30x124 feet and can house about 3,600 plants. I had two benches of Enchantress, one of Rose-pink Enchantress and Winsor, and one of Boston Market. I commenced cutting about September 15 and cut heavily until along in December, when the cut commenced to get light, although the crop never was entirely off.

"About December 15 I gave them a good top-dressing of sheep manure, and three weeks later a dressing of wood ashes. After that you ought to have seen them grow! Along in March there were at least 40,000 buds showing up at one time; anyone who saw them will say this was a low estimate. Peter Crowe, the originator of Adiantum Croweanum, was up to see the house in April and he said that in all his travels he never had seen a house to equal it. I commenced to cut in March and I never got through cutting until I threw them out in July. I did not keep count of how many I cut, but I know many a day I cut a thousand or more.

"Now, in regard to the soil, I used sod one year old, chopped fine. I filled my benches first without using any fertilizer and after I had them filled I gave them first a coat of bone meal and then one of cow manure and mixed them thoroughly on the bench. This was all the fertilizer my plants got until the top-dressings I spoke of giving them in December and January."

CUTTINGS ROT IN THE SAND.

What is the cause of my carnation cuttings rotting in the sand? I give them little bottom heat, sometimes none at all.

R. A. E.

You are asking for a good deal of information on the strength of very little data. It would be difficult to tell what makes your cuttings rot, since I do not know what you do to them.

If you started with good, clean sand, you have perhaps been overdoing the spraying in the cloudy weather which has prevailed during the last six weeks. We sometimes see it recommended that cuttings be sprayed every day or oftener, etc. Perhaps you have followed that sort of advice. In our experience in propagating, we find that no such rule can be followed safely. We find that during the first week, if the weather be cloudy, carnation cuttings may need a very light spraying once each day or second day. After that, little spraying is needed. It is far better to lay newspapers over them, to keep them fresh during the day. This is more effective in keeping them fresh, and there is not the danger of causing rotting, etc.

House of Enchantress from which Wm. P. Pfeifer, Utica, N. Y., Harvested a Remarkable Crop Last Spring.

In writing of the care of cuttings while in the sand, I have always made it a point to warn my readers against two dangers. The first and primary one is wilting, and in guarding against it one is apt to run up against the second one, which is too much water on the cuttings in the form of spraying, etc. Water is, as a general thing, such an effective medium for freshening up any drooping, living object that it is usually the first thing thought of and the most commonly applied, in preventing or dispelling wilting of vegetation. There are cases, however, where the shutting out of the cause of the wilting is possible, and far preferable to any other means of reviving, and this is one of them. In rooting carnation cuttings the main thing to bear in mind is to keep them in a fresh condition. And the next thing to bear in mind is to keep them fresh with as little overhead spraying as possible. It may not be possible to get along without some spraying, but the less the better, as long as other means will answer the same purpose. And in no case should the cuttings stand wet overnight.

You will possibly find your remedy in the foregoing facts. A. F. J. B.

VARIETIES IN SAME HOUSE.

Would you kindly inform us which of the following carnations will do best planted in the same house? We have three houses which we use for carnations, and would like to know how to distribute among them the different varieties we have in stock, which are Winsor, White Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Pink Lawson, White Perfection, Bountiful, Victory, Bassett, Beacon, Harlowarden and Afterglow. W. F. C.

The following temperatures suit the varieties you mention best in this locality: Winsor, 52 to 54 degrees; Enchantress and its sports, 50 degrees; Mrs. T. W. Lawson, 52 to 54 degrees; White Perfection, 52 degrees; Lady Bountiful, 52 to 54 degrees; Victory, 52 degrees; Beacon, 52 degrees; Harlowarden, 52 degrees; Afterglow, 52 to 54 degrees. I cannot advise you about O. P. Bassett, as we have it for trial the first time next season. These temperatures are for the Indiana climate and soil. Your conditions in Oregon may demand some variation from the above.

I would classify your varieties as follows: Plant Lawson, Winsor, Lady Bountiful and Afterglow in one house, giving the latter two the cooler end, and run it at 52 to 54 degrees. Plant all the Enchantress varieties together and run the house at 50 degrees. All the others will go nicely together in one house, running it at 52 degrees. Bassett will likely do well in this lot, too. A. F. J. B.

RUST AND LEAF-SPOT.

Please tell me what is the trouble with my carnations. They seem to have been drying up from the bottom for the last four or five weeks. Is there anything I can do to save them? I am enclosing a few specimens for you to examine. I have a small house, 15x20. C. B.

The specimens forwarded were badly dried up, but showed at least partly what ails your plants. They had the appearance of plants which have never taken hold of the soil properly. There was a good deal of rust on the leaves and some leaf-spot.

If all the plants look like the specimens forwarded, there will be little use of doing anything to try to save them, as they will never amount to a great deal. However, if you consider them worth an effort to save them, I would advise you to pick off all the leaves showing the rust pustules and also those with leaf-spot on them. Then spray the plants with Bordeaux mixture, and dust around some air-slaked lime mixed with sulphur in equal parts. Also dust it on the plants. Give plenty of ventilation and stop syringing until you have them under control. A. F. J. B.

LET ANYBODY ANSWER.

Can the growers of carnations tell the cause of carnations going to sleep in transit? I am told that they are packed in first-class shape for shipping to destination, they are in the box thirty-six to forty hours, and when they arrive are all asleep. Is it because the houses are too hot at night, or what is the cause? I would like to hear through your paper the reasons. H. E. P.

The REVIEW will be glad to have any reader suggest a way in which carnations may be shipped in order to avoid the loss which sometimes results from flowers going to sleep.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower market was quite active last week and prices stiffened up considerably, especially on Saturday, February 13. There was a great scramble for stock of all kinds for St. Valentine's day. The chief call was for California violets and red roses. From reports of most of the retailers, St. Valentine's day business was much better than last year and this day bids fair to become one of the big days for the florists.

Stock at the wholesale houses is not nearly as plentiful as last reported, and is at present cleaning up on almost everything except bulbous stock, which has been coming in heavily of late. Roses and carnations are at present having a good call and the price is up a cent or two on them. Callas are more than enough. Light colors in sweet peas sell well and violets are cleaning up daily now. Smilax and other greens are plentiful and the demand is good.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, February 11, and the attendance was as large as the club has had in many months, owing to the fact that it was a carnation meeting. There was a fairly good exhibition of carnations. Among those who exhibited were John Steidle, of Central, who showed twenty-five in each one of his six vases of Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress, Harlowarden, Beacon, Mrs. Patten and White Perfection. A. F. Longren, of Des Plaines, Ill., staged a fine vase of his new carnation, Lucille. The Charles Knopf Floral Co., of Richmond, staged a vase each of Ruby and Mrs. Charles Knopf. A. C. Brown, of Springfield, Ill., exhibited three fine vases of twenty-five blooms each of Governor Deneen, Superba and Sangamo. J. F. Ammann showed a fine vase of mixed carnations. E. W. Guy, of Belleville, had a vase of White Enchantress, and W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, a vase each of Beacon and White Enchantress.

At 2 o'clock, promptly, President Young called the meeting to order, with fifty members in attendance, which later increased to sixty. The trustees stated that they would report on a new meeting place at the next meeting. A good, lively discussion was started on different subjects pertaining to the florists' business. The question box, too, brought out some good discussions.

At 3 o'clock the president called a recess and appointed a committee to judge the carnation blooms. The committee consisted of P. Schneider, Edwin Denker and E. Lombard. Their report was as follows: Best red, W. J. Pilcher first, John Steidle second on Beacon. Light pink, J. Steidle first on Rose-pink Enchantress. Variegated, J. Steidle first with Mrs. Patten. J. F. Ammann took first on mixed vase. Dark red, John Steidle first on Harlowarden. White, W. J. Pilcher first with White Enchantress, J. Steidle second with White Perfection, E. W. Guy third with White Enchantress. Of the new varieties on exhibition the judges reported on points: Mrs. Charles Knopf, 90; Lucille, 89; Ruby, 89; Sangamo, 88; Superba, 87, and Governor Deneen, 80. The five first named received the club's certificate of merit.

The meeting then came to order and the president called on several of the visitors for remarks. Henry Ostertag acted as auctioneer and sold the prize winners at a good price. The March meeting will be the club's annual rose meeting.

After adjournment, the members were taken in charge of the entertainment committee and were escorted to the Bismarck cafe, where sixty sat down to a fine supper. After cigars, President Young called on J. J. Beneke to act as toastmaster, who in turn called upon the following speakers: J. F. Ammann, A. C. Brown, J. J. Karins, Frank Weber, E. W. Guy, Frank Fillmore, Jr. and Sr., Walter Retzer, W. C. Smith and Henry Ostertag. All responded with more or less humorous talks. At 6 o'clock the party broke up and all voted it the best time the members of the club have ever had.

Various Notes.

During the last week we had a large array of traveling salesmen calling on the different branches of the trade. They were J. J. Karins, of Henry Dreer's, Philadelphia; F. W. Creighton, of Boddington's, New York; I. Rosnosky, of Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; D. Augspurger, of Peoria, Ill., and Mr. Tiny, of Hagemann & Co., of New York. All report good business during their stay.

Fred Ostertag has taken the position vacated by Julius Schaefer at Grimm & Gorley's.

Prof. William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, delivered a free lecture at Kleekamp's hall, Thursday night, February 11, on "How to Make St. Louis More Beautiful," using stereopticon views. This lecture was under the auspices of the Tower Grove Heights Improvement Association. The attendance was large.

Mrs. William Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., who is visiting her daughter, is expected home the latter part of the week from Cleveland, O.

F. W. Brockmann is this year chairman of the executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society. Mr. Brockmann is a commission man on Third street.

Julius Peterson, seedsman at 709 Carroll street, is making big preparations to handle a large spring seed trade.

A. G. Greiner, the cactus specialist, reports that he has in preparation his new catalogue, which will contain illustrations of his large and rare collection of cacti. He will also add more glass this summer.

C. Young & Sons Co. is displaying a fine lot of blooming plants in the big show windows this week. They expect a busy spring season.

A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, was reported sick at the club meeting last week.

George Windler, on Delore avenue, is making preparations for extra fine spring blooming plants for the spring flower show, which takes place next month.

The following suburban florists were in the city last Thursday, February 11, and attended the Florists' Club meeting in the afternoon: A. G. Fehr and E.

The Lord & Burnham Selling Force at Its Annual Dinner.

W. Guy, of Belleville; Henry Johann, of Collinsville; William Winter, W. J. Pilcher and Frank Vennemann, of Kirkwood; John Steidle, of Central; J. F. Ammann and Henry Blixen, of Edwardsville; Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., and A. C. Brown, of Springfield, Ill.

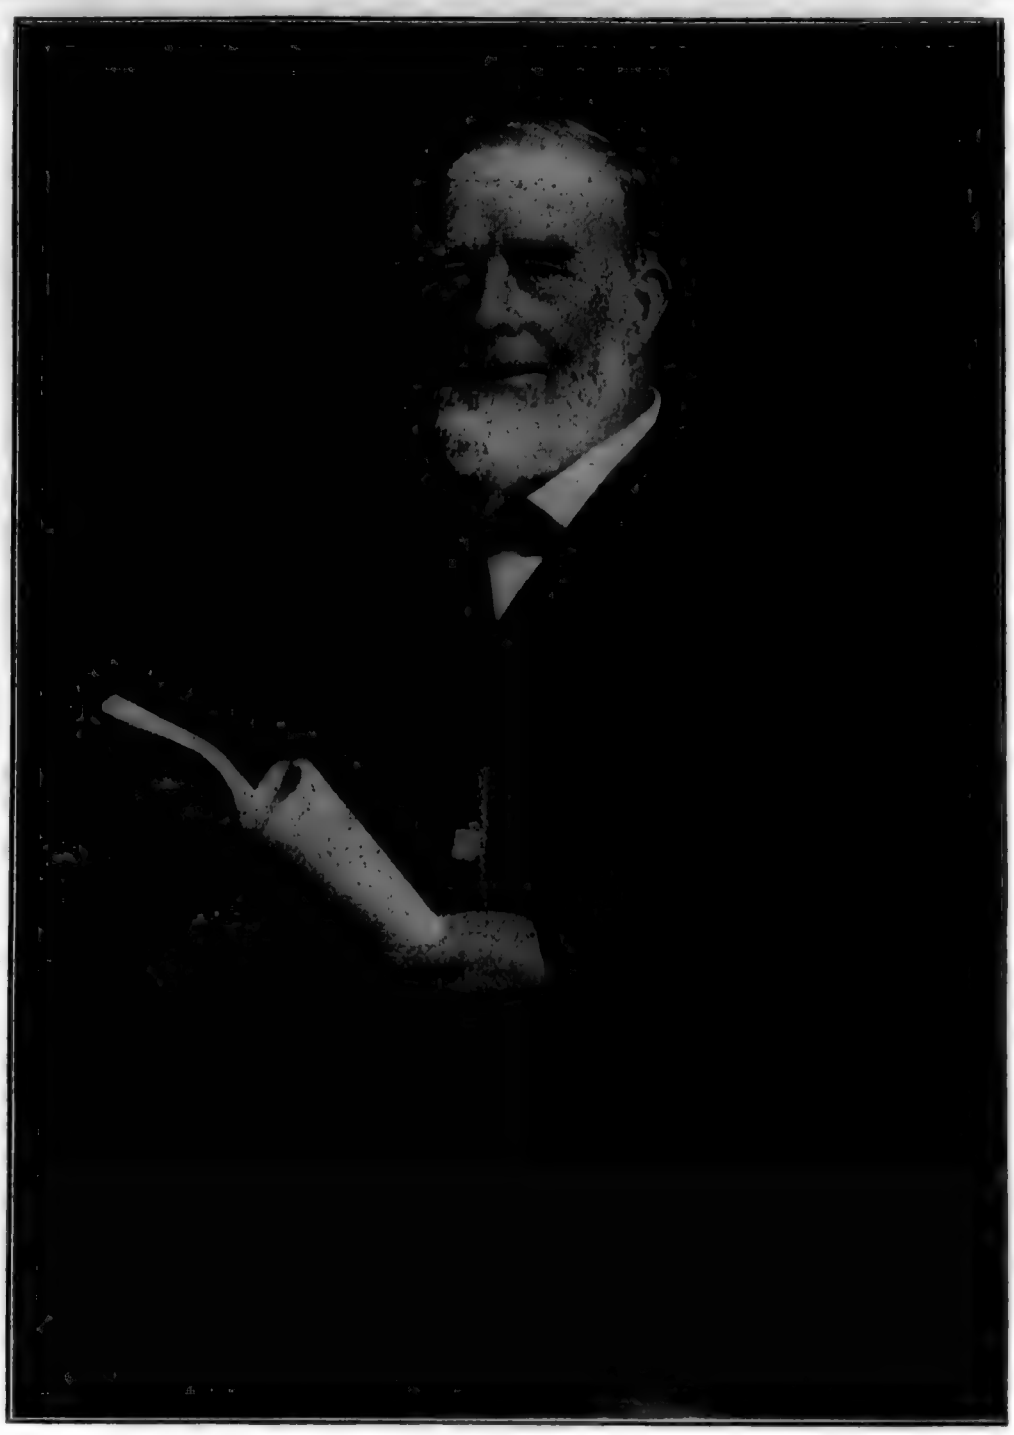
GERANIUM MRS. GLOEDE.

R. F. Gloede, of Evanston, Ill., has a new geranium, rose-pink in color, which he thinks so well of that he has named it Mrs. Richard F. Gloede. The illustration opposite shows his house of it in bloom last season. The habit is described as strong but dwarf, the flowers semi-double and the blooming qualities excellent, as can be seen in the picture, the plants being in 3½-inch pots. Mr. Gloede says it is his intention to put the geranium on the market during the approaching season, but it is stated no offer will be made including the specimen in the center of the view. He is only 6 months old, but is destined, unless the old saying about "the best laid plans" comes true, to follow his father in his profession.

OBITUARY.

John H. Small.

John H. Small, pioneer florist of Washington, D. C., died at his country place, in the Brentwood road, February 14, at the age of 82 years.



Mr. Small was born in Watford, England, in 1826. His horticultural taste came by inheritance through both lines of ancestry. His paternal grandfather owned a nursery in Colnbrook, England, and for years leased Cliveden, present estate of W. W. Astor, on part of which he conducted a nursery, in connection with his Colnbrook business. His maternal grandfather, Roberts, was a Welsh landscape gardener, an authority on the subject. It was to him the first Duchess of Marlborough, while planning Blenheim, went for advice.

Mr. Small received his early training at the hand of his grandfather, later finishing his course at Frogmore, Windsor and Kew Gardens. He came to America in 1848, with the intention of making landscape gardening—for which he had been trained—his life work. In Philadelphia he learned that a Mr. Linthicum, of Georgetown, D. C., wished to procure the services of a landscape gardener. He obtained this position and remained in Mr. Linthicum's employ until 1854, when he went into business for himself. His handiwork was manifested in the shaping of the landscape architecture of many of the estates in and about Washington in his early career.

Mr. Small not only had the distinction of being the pioneer decorator of Washington, but to him belongs the honor of having brought about the use of natural flowers for table decorations in this country. When Lord Lyon was British minister to this country, he was a social leader and a lavish entertainer. He used for table decoration feather flowers and wax fruits. At Mr. Small's solicitation he abolished the feather flowers and wax fruits, substituting the natural, a return to the old English fashion.

In Mr. Small's early career his business was located in Georgetown. In the year 1867 a more central location became urgent, and he removed to Fourteenth and G streets. In the last forty years he was brought into contact with most of the celebrities who have visited or made the national capital their home. As his sons reached maturity, they became associated with Mr. Small in his business enterprises. Some ten years ago he withdrew from active participation in business, directing his energies to horticultural pursuits at his country place in the Brentwood road. Nine years ago he had a mild stroke of apoplexy, which, for a time, incapacitated him for active pursuits. From this date he had been more or less an invalid.

Mr. Small was a genial man, of sunny disposition, kind to all, and readily extended a helping hand. He leaves a wife and nine children.

John H. Small, Sr.

Paul Thomson.

Paul Thomson, one of the best known residents of West Hartford, Conn., died February 10, after a brief illness of pneumonia.

Mr. Thomson was born in Perthshire, Scotland, April 15, 1846. He got his education in Scotland, where he followed the occupation of farming until 1871, when he came to this country. After living in Hartford for a short time he removed to West Hartford and in 1872 bought the farm at "Thomson's Corners," South Main street, where he had since lived. Mr. Thomson developed his farm and soon became known as a progressive market gardener. About ten years ago he rented the larger part of his land and had since been successfully engaged in the growing of carnations and violets on a large scale. Last season he introduced the new yellow carnation, Neptune.

For many years he was deeply interested in the West Hartford Grange and had served as its master. He was also a member of the State Grange. He was a member and constant attendant of the Congregational church in West Hartford and had served upon the committee of the Ecclesiastical Society. He was a member of the Connecticut Pomological Society and of the Veteran Association of Company K, First Regiment, C. N. G.

Mr. Thomson was enthusiastic over the introduction in this country of the Scotch game of curling, and was president of the West Hartford Curling Club.

Mr. Thomson is survived by his wife and three sons: W. Wallace Thomson and R. Roy Thomson, of West Hartford, and Carlyle C. Thomson, of Hartford.

Mrs. Minnie Unglaub.

Mrs. Minnie Unglaub, wife of Charles Unglaub, died at her home in Springfield, O., February 9. Death was due to tuberculosis. Mrs. Unglaub had been ill about five years and her death was not unexpected. She is survived by her husband and two young children.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

IRWIN BERTERMANN, treasurer of the national flower show, mailed checks February 13 to all guarantors for a ten per cent dividend on the sums paid in.

A SCHEDULE has been issued by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for its special exhibition of orchids to be held in May, 1910. It is expected this will be by far the largest display of these flowers ever seen in America. Copies of the schedule may be had by addressing Wm. P. Rich, secretary, Boston.

ONE INSERTION DID IT.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time:

Kindly discontinue my advertisement in the Review. I had only a few thousand cuttings and the one insertion cleaned me out.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Prizes for Traveling Men.

The following offering is made by President Valentine: For the purpose of enlisting the traveling men in securing new members of the S. A. F., I hereby offer a first prize of $50 and a second prize of $25 to the traveling men securing the two largest numbers of new members to the S. A. F. between now and August 10, 1909.

The conditions of the contest shall be that the winner shall be a traveling representative of some concern dealing in horticultural products or supplies, and he shall forward to the secretary, as soon as received, the money received for new memberships. No member shall be accounted a new one whose name appears in the published report for last year.

Before any man can win either of these prizes the membership fees sent to the secretary by him, under this contest, must have been double the amount of the prize claimed. For the purpose of determining whether new memberships have been secured before August 10, the secretary shall include all memberships mailed to him bearing a post mark not later than August 10.

Should any difference of opinion arise regarding the award under this offer, the matter shall be decided by the members of the executive committee present at the next annual convention of the society in Cincinnati, and their decision shall be final.

The writer will be glad to forward a supply of application blanks and addressed envelopes to any traveling man wishing to enter this competition.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Abraham Lincoln did much in his lifetime for the interests of florists, among others, and in a business way the centenary celebration of his birth gave everyone in this market cause for special reverence for his memory. The Lincoln celebrations far and wide centered in the Chicago market, where there was last week an exceptionally good business, especially in the call for red roses. Beauties and Richmonds enjoyed a heavy demand, but all roses moved so well that, in spite of increased supplies, the market was bare on the afternoon of Friday, February 12. Carnations also enjoyed a good market, the best in some weeks, so that business on the whole was excellent. Beauties held strong all the week. Even bulb stock found fair sale.

At the end of the week the St. Valentine's day special call took the place of the waning Lincoln demand and the market had two days of fine business on violets, sweet peas and the flowers most suitable for Valentine's purposes. Each year lately there has been a pronounced increase in the Valentine's business and violets have had the large share of the special demand. This year there was another fine gain; it was the best Valentine's day yet. The supply of violets was large, so that a big business could be done without boosting the prices beyond where they are an inducement to the retailers to take hold strong. There is some difference, of course, in the reports, some houses having all the stock they needed, while others were unable to fill orders in full. The bulk of the violets sold at $7.50 per thousand, but some special fancy stock brought $1 per hundred. There were, of course, many poor violets to be sold below the prevailing price of $7.50, but the only serious falldown was on the shipments that arrived Sunday, in the blizzard. Many of them were left unsold.

The present week opened with three days of wintry weather. This always has a double effect upon the market. While cuts are reduced, the local transient trade is reduced to an even greater extent and the market stagnates so long as the blizzards prevail. Under such conditions violets suffer more than any other flower. There is practically no sale for violets in extremely cold weather. Carnations also suffer, because the carnation is the flower principally handled by the gentlemen who operate the street stands and whose show cases are empty these days. Roses hold their own better than anything else under such conditions, because the supply of roses is more quickly influenced than many other flowers; in fact, roses were decidedly hard to find Monday, February 15, and have con-

Carnations

We are doing a large business on these, and at first-class prices

Although our supply of Carnations is very great, we find no difficulty in clearing them—because they're good. No need of sacrifice sales on our grade of stock—the buyers prefer our Carnations to what others urge upon them at a fourth less money. No order too large for us to fill with good stock and no order too small to receive our careful attention. We want to hear from all carnation buyers, for we've got THE goods.

Bulb Stock

Tulips in all colors—long-stemmed, fancy stock. Fine Golden Spur and Daffodils. This is the stock that makes the biggest show for the money at the present time. Plenty of Easter Lilies and Callas. Fancy Valley ALWAYS on hand.

Violets

When we say, "We handle the cream of the stock," we mean just that. We do; we handle the cream of the New York Doubles, and home-grown Singles, and the buyers who ordered of more than one house for Valentine's day know by experience that in this department, again, we've got THE goods. A large supply.

Sweet Peas

We also have the best Sweet Peas in this market. Fine, long-stemmed stock in pink, white and lavender, in quantity. For all shipping orders received before noon each day, stock will be specially cut and shipped at once.

Beauties—Roses

Dark weather has shortened up Beauties and Roses. Supply not large, but we can certainly do as well on any order as can be done in this market. Quality the very best. Order as early in the day as possible.

Green Goods

We have a large supply of Smilax, fine, long, heavy strings. Can furnish Asparagus Sprays in bunches. Also, the best Hardy cut Ferns in this market. All other Greens of highest quality.

tinued scarce ever since, Beauties and Killarney particularly so.

Business this week has been as good as could be expected under the weather conditions which prevailed from Saturday to Tuesday. The local demand has not been large, but shipping has been good.

Reinberg for Senator.

Perhaps it was because the florists were in town, but at Springfield Tuesday, in the senatorial deadlock, Peter Reinberg received twenty votes for United States senator to succeed Albert J. Hopkins. The galleries were full of members of the State Florists' Association, but fear of the sergeant-at-arms prevented any demonstration of approval, other than broad grins, as one member announced, in stentorian tones, his vote for Peter Carnation Reinberg.

Kidwell Burned Out.

William Kidwell was burned out, at his home, 4453 Ellis avenue, at 2 a. m. February 14. The family escaped from the house in night attire and were taken in and clothed temporarily by B. F. Rubel, president of the Fleischman Floral Co., 3 Jackson boulevard, who lives just across the street from Mr. Kidwell. The Kidwell residence was not destroyed, but was rendered uninhabitable and the family are at the Hotel Warner until repairs can be made.

Lord & Burnham to Open Branch.

The Lord & Burnham Co., New York, will open a branch office in Chicago April 1. George Sykes, one of the firm's oldest salesmen, will have charge. He was here last week, in company with L. W. C. Tuthill, who prepares the firm's advertising matter, and engaged an office in the Rookery, on La Salle street. February 16 Mr. Sykes sailed from New York for a brief vacation in Europe, but about April 1 will remove his family to Chicago from Passaic, N. J.

Lord & Burnham Co. has long been considering entering the western field. Branch offices are maintained in Boston and Philadelphia, and the recent rapid development of private estates in the west seems to justify an office in Chicago. Although in the east the firm gets the bulk of its business from commercial growers, Mr. Sykes says the Chicago office is being established for the single purpose of getting in closer touch with those who, within the next few years, will build fine ranges of private conservatories. Still, it is a fair presumption that no commercial grower will be compelled to insist that his order be taken, especially when he wants an iron-frame greenhouse.

Various Notes.

The superintendent of schools has resigned. The trade will receive the announcement with fortitude. With Cooley gone there may not be flowers at the June school closings, but there always were flowers there before Cooley came.

J. A. Budlong estate will plant 2,000 O. P. Bassett carnations this season.

Bassett & Washburn are preparing to rebuild several of their older houses this year and to turn them into rose houses. They will plant 2,000 of the White Killarney and 2,000 My Maryland.

The retailers all say they were pleased with the St. Valentine's business. It is growing every year. Fancy boxes of violets are the best seller, but all sorts of mixed boxes went well. Lincoln dinners were numerous and each called for flowers.

The Chicago party had a special parlor car to go down to Springfield Monday evening to the meeting of the State Florists' Association, but only a half dozen went on that train.

E. C. Amling says the Albert Amling Co., Maywood, has begun to cut sweet peas. The growers at Maywood send in so many each spring that some people refer to the town as Sweetpeaville.

Mrs. Leonard Kill. Quite a number of north end florists participated in the festivities.

Jens Jensen is no longer general superintendent of the west park system; he is consulting landscape architect and his salary has been reduced from $6,000 to $2,400 a year. It is reported the change was made at his own request, to permit his doing outside landscape work, but another story is that a letter of recommendation from a politician had become a positive disqualification in an applicant for a park job, with the result that harmony was long since fled. However, none can fail to accord Mr. Jensen praise for the work done in the west parks during his administration.

Weiland & Risch say that last week was easily the best of the season with them.

George Reinberg has already begun the sale of Beauty bench plants, preparatory to early replanting.

Leonard Kill says Valentine's day was far ahead of Thanksgiving, and he thinks it will stay ahead even when Thanksgiving is normally good.

At E. H. Hunt's the supply department makes the report that there was a falling off in the sales of the cheaper grades of Valentine's boxes, but a splendid increase in the calls for the better grades of hampers and boxes, from which they figure the trade is on a fairly prosperous footing.

C. W. McKellar reports the annual call for orange blossoms as begun. It takes two days' notice to get them at present.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has its seed store windows full of robust chickens, as an advertisement for the poultry food department.

Certain inquisitive gentlemen have unearthed the fact that Peter Reinberg not only pays taxes on more personal property than any other member of the city council—indeed, four and a half times as much as any other—but that his assessment is two-fifths as great as the combined assessments of the other sixty-eight members.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is receiving purple lilac and southern jonquils.

Otto Benthey was up from New Castle this week for a few days' visit.

Florists' feet have worn out one flight of stairs on the Wabash avenue side of the Atlas block and that entrance was closed for a couple of days this week while a new and heavier stairs was being put in.

Peter Reinberg still finds his strength not as great as before his sojourn in the hospital.

N. J. Rupp has just returned from a trip to Cleveland, during which he took eight orders for greenhouse material.

George Asmus lost his grip, with clothing and papers, at the St. Nicholas hotel, Springfield, February 15.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with foggy weather, after two days of rain and almost a summer temperature. There has been little change from the quotations of a week ago, and if these will hold until Easter there will be little complaining. The tendency is slightly downward, if any change is noticeable, especially on violets. Gardenias have moved the other way, and good stock brings readily $6 per dozen. The supply of roses is now increasing daily. Last week the market absorbed easily everything of value that reached it in the rose line. Beauties are again abundant. Killarney and Richmond are in popularity. Plenty of carnations in all grades are now arriving. Never has the New York market seen finer stock. Prices range from 1 cent to 6 cents. The novelties still are in favor at the bon ton stores. Spring flowers are coming in rapidly. Tulips, daffodils, sweet peas, hyacinths and daisies—plenty of them and to spare.

In many of the wholesale windows now appears the announcement, "No flowers sold at retail." In response, the retail florist will doubtless announce, "No flowers bought from the grower direct." And so, working in harmony, and on a mutually protective plan, there seems to be no good reason why the pleasant relations now existing between these two great sections of the flower trade should not be perpetual.

Various Notes.

A gentleman by the name of Boliavsky has been trying to touch some of our wealthy florists lately. W. J. Elliott and William Gunther were both honored last week. The police call it the "Spanish prison" confidence game. It is proposed by letter and is a weak attempt at swindling that will have to be worked on some less long-headed profession than the wholesale florists or the seedsmen.

Mengham & Westwood had the decorations last week at the Metropolitan Opera House in honor of Mme. Sembrich's farewell. Red and white flowers, in token of the Polish national colors, were used exclusively, with palms in abundance.

March 2 the Greek Florists' Association will have its annual entertainment and dance at the Lexington Opera House. Last year this event was a big success, and George Cotsonas says this one will far outshine it in size and interest.

the Museum of Natural History, where the carnation exhibition was held last week, and where the great flower shows of New York are likely to be held in the future.

The officers of the Greater New York Florists' Association, of Brooklyn, are: President, D. Y. Mellis; vice-president, H. Jahn; treasurer, R. G. Wilson; secretary, W. A. Phillips; manager, George W. Crawbuck, and Messrs. J. V. Phillips, Dowlan, Van Mater, Ross and McKee, directors. After an existence of only six months it has been found possible to declare a seven per cent dividend, a most gratifying showing.

The Horticultural Society of New York held a meeting Wednesday, February 10, that was fairly attended. President Wood was in the chair. In connection with this meeting, an exhibit of carnations was made by the Cottage Gardens Co. and the F. R. Pierson Co. The society awarded a silver medal for Alma Ward, a bronze medal to Mrs. Ward, and a bronze medal to the F. R. Pierson Co. for an exhibit of ten new seedling varieties, including several shown at the Indianapolis convention. Interesting addresses and papers were given by John Birnie, F. R. Pierson, Henry Siebrecht, James Bell and others. Eugene Dailledouze and John Birnie acted as judges. Mr. Birnie's paper was especially interesting.

The annual dinner season is drawing to a close, a sure sign of spring in the east. Last week the Elberon and Orange societies celebrated, and great successes are reported at both reunions.

The twenty-second annual banquet of the New York Florists' Club promises now to be "the noblest Roman of them all." Before the committee had sent out the usual tickets to the club's members, over 100 seats had been spoken for. The date is Saturday, February 27, and the place Shanley's Roman banquet hall, Forty-second street and Broadway. Over a dozen tables have been engaged and only twenty-seven tables are available. Before another week there will not be a seat left. W. J. Elliott is chairman of the dinner committee, and the program of music and speeches will be worthy of the occasion.

President Hallock's reception begins at 6 p. m. There will be fine decorations. One wholesale florist purchased twelve seats, and many others have secured a table of the plantsmen and wholesale and retail interests. Professor Van Vleet's famous orchestra will play all the popular melodies. It will be a popular dinner and for the first time in twenty-two years the ladies will grace the annual banquet with their presence. If you intend to go, better let Mr. Elliott or Secretary Young know immediately. There is quite a possibility of a crowd, and the seats will be allotted as fast as the money is received by the committee.

The Geller Supply Co. says it will have some fine Easter novelties, and it is already getting ready for the rush. Russin & Hanfling also are busy with fancy Easter baskets, their own construction.

Ford Bros. are proud of their daily carnation exhibit. Just now quality is at the topmost notch. "Couldn't be better," the firm says, and Hession's growing ranks with the best.

Ex-president Traendly was rejoicing last week in the intellectual supremacy of one of his daughters, who graduated from her school with the highest honors, though the youngest and smallest of all competitors.

Kessler Bros. have a fine plant exhibit neatly arranged at their new store on West Twenty-eighth street.

Rickards Bros., who have not only attended to their growing bulb trade, but attended and sung at every dinner of the horticultural societies within a radius of fifty miles this winter, say the outlook for the spring trade was never brighter. This seems to be the opinion of every seed house in the city. With an early spring there is no doubt the coming season will surpass all its predecessors in general prosperity.

John Lewis Childs and Mrs. Childs, of Floral Park, are enjoying a California trip that began this week and will continue until April.

Harry Bunyard, with Arthur T. Boddington, is expected back from his western trip shortly, and as chairman of the outing committee of the New York Florists' Club has considerable summer work cut out for him. Mr. Bunyard has been asked to fill the position of sergeant-at-arms at the club's dinner, February 27. Miss S. A. Hill, of Richmond, has been requested to attend and respond to the toast of the gentlemen. If duty prevents, some eastern lady will tackle the question.

The plantsmen are busy on Easter stock and optimistic in preparation. Evidently they anticipate a record demand. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Dupuy in his loss by fire by the other members of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

State of Trade.

Violets were never in more active demand in this market than they were last week, and fortunately those who grow them hereabouts are picking enough to meet the draft. There has been a noticeable improvement in the quality, also, of these flowers and some excellent blooms are seen. One of the developments of this particular feature of the business has been in the demand for bunches of fifty and 100 instead of for twenty-five and fifty, as has heretofore been the custom. Prices hold well, too.

Bulb stock in pans in good quality, quantity and selection holds a prominent place in the market and finds ready sale at fair prices. One of the new features for this market is being supplied by John Macrae and has caught on well with those who are looking for something out of the ordinary for bouquet and table decorations. This is the acacia that he is cutting in good quantity and he receives a good price.

Various Notes.

The florists have taken to the business boom that the Providence Board of Trade is working up and all are enthusiastic regarding the approaching banquet that is to be given in the new State Armory February 23 to the business men of Providence. The florists have agreed to contribute all the flowers necessary for the table decorations and also the potted stock for decorations. The committee that was invited by the mayor to assume charge of this part of the arrangements met last week at the store of Johnston

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

St. Valentine's day proved more of a floral holiday than ever before. It was largely advertised, and the demand thus created proved beneficial to violets, enormous quantities of these sweet scented flowers being sold February 13. As frequently happens, the growers had more than discounted the demand, the held-up supply being fully equal to all requirements. In fact, prices weakened a little late in the day. No better illustration of the situation can be given than to say that one bright retailer sized up the market so well that he advertised a special violet sale for that day, securing all the stock he required at moderate prices.

The ordinary demands of this active pre-Lenten season have been sufficient to keep the market bare of flowers, there being no need for a floral festival to absorb any other stock than violets. Beauties continue scarce and high in the fancy grades. Other roses are increasing in supply, but they are not yet equal to the demand. Carnations are falling off a little, with really choice stock bringing excellent prices. Cattleya Schrœderiana has replaced Cattleya Trianæ. It is in limited supply, the pink phalænopsis helping it somewhat to fill the demands for orchids. Lily of the valley is in better demand than for some weeks past. The price has stiffened under the influence of thousand lot orders. Sweet peas are selling well. While prices average lower than in past seasons, it is evident that the new winter-blooming varieties are sufficiently productive to make well grown stock profitable at market quotations. The range of color adds to their popularity. Gardenias have enjoyed a broadening market, the price being steadily maintained. Asparagus plumosus is selling wonderfully well, but smilax continues in poor demand.

There is much shipping to outside cities. The only changes in the spring flower situation are the lower price of daffodils, the poor demand for the lower grade of freesia, and the advent of double tulips, both Murillo and Couronne d'Or being in fine form. Pansies are in increased demand.

Branch of the Tree.

It is officially announced this week that the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of this city, will open a branch in Washington, D. C., on or about March 1. Negotiations have not yet been completed for the company's Washington headquarters. Suffice it to say that the location will be central. Albert Schnell has been selected for the responsible position of manager. Mr. Schnell, who has had business experience in Buffalo and in Washington, is believed by competent judges to be well fitted for the exacting requirements of his position. Samuel S. Pennock, president of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., said that a large stock of cut flowers, both from Philadelphia and from Washington, would be offered in the new store and also a complete line of florists' supplies. The street views this move favorably, believing that the time has come when the business of the national capital will support a first-class wholesale florists' establishment.

Rose Harry Kirk.

A friend has called my attention to the following paragraph that appeared in the Sharon Hill notes in this column last week: "The aim today is to secure a first-class yellow rose (Harry Kirk has been found wanting)." My friend states that, while I am writing about forcing roses, the reader may naturally suppose that I mean Harry Kirk is useless as an outdoor rose as well. This is not the case. Dr. Huey considers Harry Kirk as the finest yellow outdoor rose and his opinion is supported by other rose experts, who believe that the sterling good qualities of this really beautiful variety will bring it rapidly to the front among our bedding sorts.

The Effect of the Storm.

A storm of cyclonic proportions broke over this city shortly after one o'clock on the afternoon of February 10. The greenhouses of Ferdinand Le Gierse and

HENRY F. MICHELL CO., Market Street above 10th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Mention The Review when you write.

Henry Engler were damaged. The greatest loss was suffered by William K. Harris, where the ends of nine greenhouses were blown in, the fury of the gale twisting the iron pipe purlins and rafters for from six to twenty feet. The roof on the residence of Mark B. Mills, nearby, was blown off and deposited in a vacant lot a square and a half away. All the damage reported was done in West Philadelphia. The brotherly florists' spirit came out strongly. Robert A. Craig, J. William Colflesh and John Burton sent men to Mr. Harris' assistance. By nightfall the houses were securely boarded in at the damaged end, and by February 16 they had been rebuilt and reglazed, the weather, fortunately, being favorable.

Various Notes.

Henry Rajsik, well known as a wire dealer in this city, was married a few days ago.

Miss Zeller M. Bayersdorfer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Bayersdorfer, was married to Simon H. Casper in Mercantile hall February 16.

Mr. Perkins, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., was a visitor in this city last week.

A representative of Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y., has been calling on the growers lately.

When J. Liddon Pennock went to Florida last month, Raymond Kester was advanced to the position of buyer for Pennock Bros. So well was the firm pleased with his work that the arrangement has been continued since Mr. Pennock's return, leaving the latter free to devote more time to other departments of the business.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., returned February 13 from his western trip. Mr. Eschner reports greater confidence among the florists in the middle west.

Frank Gaul has managed successful special sales of daffodils, February 6, and violets, February 13, for the Century Flower Shop. The courage required in the latter move evoked the admiration of the street.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., returned from his western trip a few days ago. Mr. Berkowitz displayed beautiful new French creations in artificial flowers, many varieties of roses and carnations, as well as gardenias, being reproduced with marvelous fidelity. Iridescent glass vases, of unique design, are another feature.

William J. Muth, manager, and George Auegle, assistant manager, of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., who have been ill, are happily recovering and should be about ere these notes appear.

Eugene Bernheimer has been making a specialty of select pussy-willows, not the ordinary kind, but something a little better than three feet long.

Robert A. Craig has received a letter from his father in the Isle of Pines, describing getting up at 4 a. m. and taking a delightful bath in the famous waters. Rather strenuous, don't you think?

The Leo Niessen Co. is experiencing a lively demand for Acacia pubescens, which it is only able to fill by frequent telephoning.

Lilley & Upton have been making a specialty of pansies the past week, St. Valentine's bringing a good demand for this pretty flower.

Ernest F. Hoehl, formerly of Madison, N. J., now of West Philadelphia, has been sending extra fine sweet peas to Edward Reid.

Thaddeus N. Yates & Co., of Mt. Airy, have commenced shipping choice single daffodils to Berger Bros.

The Robert Craig Co. has planted two more houses with Ficus pandurata since Christmas.

The Henry F. Michell Co. had a St. Valentine's day window of gayly colored pockets of flower seeds, arranged in Philip Freud's best style. PHIL.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Supplies are now much more abundant, and trade is not so good as it has been. Lent will soon be here and, with the consequent cessation of social activities, quiet business may be expected for some weeks. Violets are now abundant and prices have fallen accordingly; 50 cents per hundred is now about top price. Carnations are off crop with many growers, but are more than sufficient for the market's needs. For whites the demand continues quite good. Sweet peas are getting quite plentiful. The best grades are remarkably fine and sell at $1 per hundred, while poorer samples will only bring 25 cents. Mont Blanc and Earliest of All, or Christmas Pink, are the sorts mostly seen. Roses continue to meet with quite satisfactory sales, and prices on these hold up well, particularly in the case of long-stemmed Beauties, Killarneys and Richmonds.

Bulbous stock is much more plentiful and drags more than it did. Von Sion, double, princeps and Golden Spur are the narcissi mostly seen. La Reine is still the premier tulip. Callas, lilies, valley, mignonette, snapdragon and marguerites are all selling moderately well. Of pansies, forget-me-nots, candytuft, stocks, cornflowers, English primroses and freesias there are moderate supplies, for which the demand fluctuates considerably.

Club Meeting.

As usual, carnation night attracted a large number of members to the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 16. Delegations from the Providence Gardeners' and Florists' Club and the North Shore Horticultural Society were on hand and the gathering was one of the best the club has ever held. The exhibition table presented an attractive appearance, quite a number of carnation novelties being included.

M. A. Patten was the speaker of the evening and gave an interesting and practical talk, which started a good discussion. It was voted to hold the annual banquet as usual, details being left to the executive committee. The committee appointed to consider the Grace Hospital bed fund proposition, through their chairman, James Wheeler, reported adversely.

Various Notes.

The members of the Music Hall Flower market will hold a trade exhibition of their own in March, for which they are preparing an attractive schedule. It is a pity the two wholesale markets could not have come together and made one big, impressive show in Horticultural hall, rather than run separate exhibitions.

At Horticultural hall, February 13, Prof. H. J. Webber, Ithaca, N. Y., lectured on "Plant Breeding." A number of stereopticon views rendered it more interesting. February 20, Prof. F. A. Waugh, of Amherst, will give a stereopticon lecture on "American Landscape Architecture." Two-thirds of this year's lectures are by professors, rather too big a proportion. Only one lecture is by a practical grower.

Eber Holmes is sending in an extra fine grade of Killarneys and Richmonds at present from Montrose Greenhouses.

William Sim is having many visitors these days to see his magnificent sweet peas. His violets are also of splendid quality, the new Boston particularly so.

Among those attending the banquet of the North Shore Horticultural Society, February 10, were: T. J. Grey, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, J. F. M. Farquhar, P. J. Van Baarda, Edward Rose, A. Leuthy, J. P. A. Guerineau, Julius Heurlin, J. L. Miller, E. O. Orpet and W. N. Craig. The two last named were among the speechmakers. The attendance at the banquet was 260 and the decorations superb; everyone present enjoyed the occasion.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Growers' Association show, February 27 and 28, at Horticultural hall, is going to tax the resources of the main exhibition hall. From all over New England and beyond it, advices are being received from prospective visitors and exhibitors.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, are handling some fine bulbous stock at present in the Park Street market.

Littlefield & Wyman are shipping some fine carnations to Music Hall market, White Perfection and Enchantress in several colors being unusually good.

The best mignonette coming to the Boston market is from William Nicholson, Framingham. The same grower has also fine lots of marguerites.

The various seed stores report January business as much ahead of a year ago. The winter has been a comparatively open one, and both mail and counter trade is coming earlier than usual.

HOUSES FOR LETTUCE.

I am about to build glass for the growing of lettuce. Which is the better—one wide house or two narrow houses?

W. A.

This is a hard question to answer, not knowing what length or width of houses is being considered, but I should prefer one long house to two short ones, whatever the width, and I never advocate narrow houses. If W. A. will state further particulars, I may be able to help him decide which is the best for his purpose.

H. G.

GRUBS IN GREENHOUSE SOIL.

Will you kindly tell me what to do for grubs in the greenhouse? They are the common outdoor grub, white with a black head. They eat the roots of lettuce and destroy the crop.

S. W.

A liberal dusting with air-slaked lime or a watering with lime water will be about the best you can do. To make a barrel of lime water, take about ten pounds of fresh lime and slake it in water, as for whitewash; then put it in a barrel of water and stir well. If the lime is liable to daub up the leaves, wait until it settles and use just the clear water. It is more efficient, however, if stirred up before using.

Very old air-slaked lime loses much of its value for dusting on the soil. It is better to get some new lime and just sprinkle it and let it slake dry, which it will do in a few hours. The lumps can be raked out and given a second sprinkling, but do not get them too wet. Dust the ground until it is white, scratch it into the soil and water it afterward. Lime is very beneficial to the soil and the plants, and no pests in the soil can stand much of it.

H. G.

CAULIFLOWER FROM SEED.

Please give me a little advice on the planting and care of cauliflower seed. Last season my plants came up nicely, but after a while about half the plants seemed to wither and drop out. The roots did not seem to take hold of the soil. I planted in boxes of good soil and gave plenty of water.

S. G.

Get some clean, fresh soil from outdoors, which has not been used inside previously. Thaw it out, and get it warmed up and pretty well dried out before handling it much. Then sift it through a fine sieve, mixing in nearly as much sand as you have soil. Mix it thoroughly and you will then have a good soil for seed flats. A mixture of one-third clean, new soil, one-third leaf-mold and the other third sand is better. The most important point is to get clean, fresh material, not old soil, etc., that has been lying around the houses and is full of all kinds of fungi and disease germs.

Take some good, solid flats, about three inches deep, and fill them heaping full of this fine soil. Then take a lath and lay it across the box or flat and slide it the full length of the box, scraping the soil off level with the top of the box. Then press the soil down gently with a plastering trowel or a small piece of board.

Now sow the cauliflower seed carefully. It is expensive and should not be planted too thickly. Press the seed into the soil gently with the trowel; then barely cover the seed with finely sifted soil. Sprinkle lightly and set the flats in the warmest end of the house until sprouted. After they are sprouted, a temperature of 50 degrees at night will suit them best. Keep them where they will get full, unobstructed light and proper ventilation. Water sparingly. They do not want much water—just enough to keep them from drying out.

The second or third day after they are up they will be ready to transplant, and this should be done without delay, or they are likely to be attacked by a fungus that rots them off quickly.

Transplant them into other boxes or into a bed, placing them about two inches apart and deep enough so that the seed leaves are just above the soil. Look after them several times a day, but give them only light sprinklings and not until needed. The boxes must stand level, or the plants will not grow evenly. After they take hold and commence to grow well, more water can be given. They can be rushed along or held back by the amount of water given them.

Deep boxes are not good for seed flats. The soil should be almost level with the sides of the box, so that the air can pass freely over the soil and under the tiny plants. This will do much to prevent fungous diseases and will also make the plants shorter and stockier than if down an inch or two in a deeper box. In filling the boxes with soil, punch it down gently along the edges and into the corners before leveling.

It is a great mistake to water seed heavily just after planting it. If the soil is not moist enough, it should be sprinkled and let alone for several hours and then worked over again, so that it will be moist and loose when planted and will not be packed down so hard by heavy waterings, which make it difficult to lift the seedlings in transplanting them.

These directions might well be applied to other kinds of seed sowing.

ERIE, PA.

Trade was good on St. Valentine's day. Violets were in great demand and other choice cut flowers and potted plants sold well. Pink roses with white lilacs were a favorite combination in large bouquets presented as valentines. Bulbous stock is getting more plentiful.

Allen Langhans, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., and G. Hampton, representing Joseph G. Neidinger, of Philadelphia, were in the city on business last week.

Erie's beautiful trees are weighted with ice. Many of them have broken down under the strain. Rain, sleet and hail are holding sway. B. P.

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

Winter one week and summer the next is what we had for the last month.

Business has been fair at the markets, if only some florists would take into consideration the fact that the cutting down of prices does no good to anybody. Many newly built places are in need of plants, and their owners are willing to pay a fair price to stock them. Grow less stock, hold your prices and you will certainly realize more money.

The planting of the continuation of the Audubon boulevard, one mile long from St. Charles avenue toward Canal street, has been a big job and has just been finished by the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. Many large palms have been set out. Lots are selling fast and it will be one of the great sights of New Orleans.

The florists handling flowers and decorations are certainly busy at this time. Flowers and plants for receptions and balls, given during this season, are used in greater quantity than in 1907 or 1908, and the prospects are for a satisfactory ending of the season.

Several weddings and receptions on a great scale have recently taken place. The greatest of the latter was the banquet given in honor of President-elect W. H. Taft, at the New Grunewald hotel. The floral decoration was intrusted to U. J. Virgin, who did not have exactly carte blanche, but he made a splendid display to suit the wishes of the committee of arrangement. The walls were decorated with large Areca lutescens, cocos and plumosus, with southern wild smilax. The latter was also used to form a grand canopy over the entire hall, interspersed with thousands of lights in the national colors. Behind the president-elect were placed two vases, six feet high, each containing 150 American Beauties. The speakers' table and the other twelve tables were decorated with thirty-six plateaus filled with Richmond roses, mixed with asparagus and maidenhair ferns. National flags and bunting were used in abundance to add to the general effect, which was indeed an imposing one.

C. W. Eichling, of the Avenue Floral Co., reports also a great increase in business over last year. M. M. L.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day proved a grand success for the florists of this vicinity. Nearly all claim to have done far more business than a year ago. The demand was heavy on all kinds of small flowers, such as valley, sweet peas, etc., but violets were in the lead, the quantity used being far in excess of any amount ever sold in this city before. All kinds of bulb stock sold better than heretofore, and on Sunday morning the counters were well cleaned of everything.

Various Notes.

Peter Nichols, of the Arcade, reports good business, having handled 16,000 violets for St. Valentine's day, as well as large quantities of carnations and other stock.

Albrecht & Smith report that on Valentine's day they had one of the best days' trade so far in their new store, having done a great deal more than was expected.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. handled over 90,000 double violets for St. Valentine week.

Knoble Bros. are more than satisfied with St. Valentine trade; they report a grand clean-up.

Carl Hagenburger, of West Mentor, is cutting some fine Princess of Wales violets and sweet peas.

H. R. Carlton sent in some good sweet peas for St. Valentine trade.

H. Heepe's Sons, of Akron, were heavy buyers here last week. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heepe spent Friday in town. B.

DETROIT.

The Market.

With the exception of a few days, trade conditions have been pretty lively. The local commission houses are receiving about the usual amount of stock, and it is well cleaned up.

St. Valentine's day sums up considerably ahead of last year. In fact, a number of the stores were obliged to put on extra help Saturday, February 13. The demand for violets far exceeded anticipation, and on Monday morning there was hardly one to be had, but flowers of all kinds sold well, though red stock naturally met with the most call. An increase in the call for plants was also noticed.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held Monday evening, February 15, at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, instead of at the club's rooms. A display of carnations, roses, etc., was one feature of the evening, another being an address on "Carnations," by William Gammage, of London, Ont.

Among the exhibitors were the following:

Gus. Taepke, with some Brides and Maids, fine vases of Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Beacon and Lady Bountiful; also some of the once popular red, Wm. Crane.

John Dinser showed a nice assortment of ferns; also some bulbous stock.

Charles Plumb staged some well done Brides and Maids and several vases of unusually fine carnations. Of course, Mr. Plumb also was on hand with a variety of bulbous stock.

Peter Kahl, who has just branched out into carnation growing, brought down Lawson, White Lawson, Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress, all of which were good.

Thos. Browne and Albert Stahelin were also on the stand with a variety of carnations. A deep pink seedling shown by the latter looked promising.

August Von Boeselager again showed his seedling carnation, Clara, which attracted so much attention at a recent meeting.

B. Schroeter displayed a small vase of Winsor and Afterglow.

Other exhibitors were R. Klagge and Ferd. Kolbe.

In all, the quantity of stock shown, while good, was not enough to repay the hustling exhibition committee for its trouble. The present scarcity of stock and a blizzard which is sweeping the city kept away many who would have participated.

A vase of White Killarney attracted an unusual amount of attention.

After adjournment of the meeting, lunch was served.

Various Notes.

Miss Flammer, of the Lorraine Flower Shop, has been on the sick list for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Breitmeyer left hurriedly for Philadelphia the first part of this week, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Breitmeyer's mother.

Mrs. Sullivan has been quite ill for some time, but the writer is pleased to be able to state that she will soon be on duty again. This firm sent out some very attractive St. Valentine greetings.

Recent visitors were T. McGee, H. Heinl and George Bayer, all of Toledo; A. M. Miller, of Chicago; B. Eschner, of Philadelphia. H. S.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

THE mail trade is keeping right up to the best February records.

CANNERS are again inquiring for peas, but none seem interested in corn.

THE mail-order houses report a considerable increase in the southern business, especially with truckers.

CALIFORNIA growers are now pretty well cleaned up on surpluses and are bending all energies to the next crop.

WHOLESALE seedsmen are on the jump. If a buyer calls for stock that can be supplied, he expects it on the first train.

MARKET garden business is enjoying something of a boom. The prices of vegetables in practically all markets are so high that the market gardeners are confident of a good return for their early crops and are pushing things along.

THE Texas seedsmen, whose season is several weeks farther along than it is with the northern houses, say that the business is footing up ahead of last year and that in certain lines it has become difficult to fill orders.

THE U. S. Senate has requested the Treasury Department to state the amount of specific duties collected on imports during the last year and the cost of making the collections, also the same information regarding ad valorem duties. The information is desired in connection with the proposed tariff revision.

HELIANTI.

Otto Katzenstein & Co., Atlanta, Ga., report having secured the sole American rights for the distribution of a new tuberous plant called Helianti, which they say has gained a rapid popularity in Europe because its yield is something phenomenal and its economical value great.

Helianti is a hybrid belonging to the sunflower family. It grows ten feet high, with deep green foliage and bright yellow flowers, but the edible parts are the root tubers. The tubers are plowed like potatoes and stored like sweet potatoes, in a cellar or barn, covered with a layer of moist sand. The yield is said to be as much as half again as great as that of Irish potatoes. Its food value is said to be more than four times that of potatoes and twenty-five per cent greater than the food value of green peas. The flavor is said to resemble French artichokes, or asparagus with a flavor of mushrooms, and Katzenstein & Co. say that they have not the least doubt that Helianti will soon be one of the most popular vegetables in this coun-

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION.

The Canadian Seed Growers' Association has just completed its annual meeting at Ottawa. The association is backed by the Dominion government with the object of improving agriculture and, while the trade takes an interest in the work of the association, its affairs are largely conducted by the agricultural college people. The new officers elected were: President, Dr. J. W. Robertson, of MacDonald College; secretary-treasurer, L. H. Newman, of Ottawa. The following are the directors: Prof. C. A. Zavitz, Ontario Agricultural College; G. A. Peters, Fredericton, N. B.; G. A. Gigault, deputy minister of agriculture for Quebec; G. H. Woodford, Carleton, Alta.; J. Bracken, Regina, Sask.; W. L. Kate Lock Aster Wins 1st prize again at Toronto Exhibition, as best long-stemmed Aster for florists' use, making six years in succession—every year since its introduction. I grow Aster "Miss Kate Lock" exclusively, and have done so for ten years. My blooms are all selected when in their prime, which makes them a trifle high, BUT: it pays to buy the best. The cut shows a sample of blooms from which seed is selected. Can not supply seed by bulk this year; will fill all package orders.

ance on hand of $471.38. The total expenditure amounted to $3,438.50. An adequate grant sufficient for the requirement of the association is given each year. Since the association is now placed on a firm foundation, it is fully expected that it will extend and develop throughout Canada to a still greater degree than it has in the past.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $4,777.

VITALITY OF SEEDS.

Can tomato seed, cabbage, melon, cucumber and celery seeds, and all other garden seeds which retain their vitality for five years, be kept over two or three years and still be all right for sale and use, and will the plants be just as productive and true in every way? Some of the garden books limit tomato seed to four years, and some books say five years. Which is right? Can seeds be kept in Mason fruit jars as satisfactorily as in any other way. I do not wish to keep seed longer than two or three years. Do any market gardeners ever keep their garden seeds over for two or three years? For example, if seed was harvested in August, 1907, and not planted till May or June of 1909, it would be only one year and ten months. F. C. P.

Seeds that have a vitality of from three to five years are usually all right the second or third year. I would not consider that they would be really good up to the full time stated.

When seedsmen speak of the vitality of seed and put the limit at five years, they mean to say that the seed will germinate up to that time, but it will not germinate the full percentage. It will drop off, say, ten to fifteen per cent every year, and at the end of four or five years, in the case of seed that is put down as being good for five years, it would not germinate strongly enough to make it what would be called good seed.

The thing to do, in all cases, is to plant the seed when it is received and not hold it at all. There are so many things that might happen to ruin the germination of the seed that it is not wise policy to take any chances on what it will do in any succeeding year.

I may make one exception to this, and

OUTDOOR SHOW IN HILLEGOM.

In April of this year there will be held an open-ground flower show in Hillegom, the center and the leading place of the Dutch bulb culture and export. This kind of show, which, as a first trial, was such a great success last year at Sassenheim, will be held on a more extensive scale at Hillegom and promises to become very interesting. The principal idea of this open-ground show is to make it clear how to obtain the best results from planting Dutch bulbs in small and large gardens, in borders, terraces and lawns, and to make the most effective combinations in beds and groups, combined with evergreens and early flowering shrubs, etc.

The show ground occupies more than three acres of land and is divided into a French garden and an old Dutch garden. In the center of the old Dutch garden rises the town hall, an interesting, old-fashioned building, and just opposite this town hall is the old church, which is situated on a hill near a small brook (old Dutch "gom"; hence the name "Hillegom"). It was erected in the fifteenth or sixteenth century. The brook, now turned into a canal, lies on the south side of the show ground and runs toward the old Haarlem lake, half a mile distant, which lake was drained and turned into beautiful agricultural land in the middle of last century. The narrow piece of land between the old Haarlem lake and the show ground lies below the level of the sea and also below the level of the surrounding canals. A draining mill is used to pump the water from this low land into the leading canal and it can be seen from the show ground. One has a beautiful view from the steps of the town hall over the bulb fields in this drained land into the low lying,

Gladiolus Bulbs

For forcing, and planting during the spring. By ordering bulbs now, you receive not only the best selection, but the advantage of the following low prices:

Gladiolus America

A few points of merit

COLOR: A beautiful, soft, flesh pink, very light and much like Enchantress Carnation, except slightly tinged with lavender, which gives it the delicate coloring of the most beautiful Lælias. Words fail to do justice in describing this grand and glorious color; it must be seen to be appreciated. PURPOSES: For florists' use, its color makes it everything to be desired; delicate, attractive and absolutely new; no other color in Gladiolus like it or one-half so beautiful. It has created a sensation in the cut flower markets, selling for more than five times the price of other varieties.

America. The best commercial pink in existence. 1st size bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000; $165.00 per 5000.

Augusta. Lovely, pure white with blue anthers. 1½ to 2½ in., $2.00 per 100; $15 per 1000; $70 per 5000.

Blue Jay (Baron Hulot). Finest blue Gladiolus yet seen. It is a rich, deep color of indigo shade. The only real blue Gladiolus on the market. $10 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis. Extra fine red variety. 1½ to 2½ in., $1.50 per 100; $12 per 1000; $50.50 per 5000.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

VICK QUALITY ASTERS

THE STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE

WE CATALOGUE over 75 varieties of Asters, among which are Queen of the Market, white, pink, lavender, rose and blue; Giant Comet, 12 colors; Victoria; Truffaut's; Improved Crego, white and pink. In fact, if it is a variety that is really worth growing, we make it our business to have the best strains for florists' uses.

Our Best Novelty

VICK'S MIKADO PINK. Premier of Shell Pink Asters. For years we have seen the necessity of a good, mid-season Comet type shell pink Aster. Now we have it, and it's a beauty. Every wholesale florist who has seen it praises it extravagantly. Just the thing to grow between the extra early and the late flowering varieties. Habit similar to non-lateral branchings. Stems, straight, long and strong; plant, vigorous; flowers, very large and yet very dainty; petals, long and narrow and gracefully reflexed; crown, completely covered; color a charming sea shell pink. Sold this year by packet only. Each, 25c.

VICK'S MIKADO WHITE AND ROSE

Every grower ought to have both of these colors to go with Vick's Mikado Pink. Although we have catalogued these two colors before, we have never heretofore had enough stock to fill orders. We have a splendid stock this year, and prices are lower than ever before. 1-32 oz., 35c; 1-16 oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 85c; ¼ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $2.75; 1 oz., $5.00.

Two More New Asters

VICK'S IMPERIAL LAVENDER

Vick's Imperials, Daybreak and Purity, are known wherever good Asters are grown. Vick's Imperial Lavender possesses all of the splendid qualities of Daybreak. Color a pure lavender. Will sell well in any market. 1-64 oz., 40c; 1-32 oz., 60c; 1-16 oz., $1.00; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ¼ oz., $2.50; ½ oz., $4.50; 1 oz., $8.00.

VICK'S NON-LATERAL BRANCHING

For several years we have been working to produce a branching plant with fewer, stronger, longer stems, without being sapped by side buds and shoots. We now have a strain in which the whole strength of the plant goes into from nine to fifteen stems, all of which produce exhibition flowers. Two colors only, white and rose. 1-32 oz., 25c; 1-16 oz., 40c; ⅛ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.00; ½ oz., $1.75; 1 oz., $3.00.

Other Recent Vick Introductions

VICK'S EARLY BRANCHING

Similar to the well-known Standard Late Branching. Season, about a week or ten days earlier; two colors, white and rose. 1-16 oz., 25c; ⅛ oz., 40c; ¼ oz., 70c; ½ oz., $1.30; 1 oz., $2.50.

VICK'S ROYAL PURPLE

Flowers, similar to Branching; stems, start close to the ground; very few lateral stems; season, medium early. Goes well with Early Branching. 1-16 oz., 25c; ⅛ oz., 40c; ¼ oz., 70c; ½ oz., $1.30; 1 oz., $2.50.

VICK'S UPRIGHT WHITE

There is a heavy demand for this variety. Flowers similar to Branching, but stems grow directly upward, leaving more room for cultivation. Splendid shipper. Last year we could not furnish seed enough. 1-16 oz., 30c; ⅛ oz., 50c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.25; 1 oz., $2.00.

VICK'S CARDINAL

For brilliancy of color and profusion of bloom, this Aster surpasses all others. Especially adapted for bedding, where it makes as gorgeous a showing as Scarlet Salvia. Each plant resembles a huge bouquet. 1-32 oz., 25c; 1-16 oz., 40c; ⅛ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.00; ½ oz., $1.75; 1 oz., $3.00.

green agricultural land of the old Haarlem lake.

The show will be divided into a permanent exhibition in the open and temporary shows in the large tents—the latter more especially for cut flowers and forced plants.

Important growers of rhododendrons, azaleas, lilacs, clipped plants (forms), etc., will also show their best products, so that this show will be very interesting for every florist and nurseryman, as well as for amateurs.

The opening date is fixed for April 8. Consequently it will be open just before Easter and will be closed at the end of the first week in May.

Those who intend to make a trip to Europe should make their arrangements so that they will not miss this interesting show.

DREER'S SUPERB ASTERS

Dreer's Superb Late Branching Asters.

We offer below but a few of the more important Asters. For complete list see our current Wholesale Price List, which also contains everything in Seeds, Plants and Bulbs that a Florist needs. Copies free on application.

Dreer's Superb Late Branching

The finest Aster for late August and September blooming.

The plants form strong, branching bushes, 2 to 2½ feet high, bearing on long, strong stems their handsome Chrysanthemum-like flowers, which, under ordinary cultivation, average 5 inches across. The form of the flowers, together with the length of the stems, places them at the head of Asters for cutting. We offer eight beautiful and distinct colors, viz.:

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Azure Blue. A rich deep lavender	25c	$1.00
Pure White. Extra fine stock	25c	1.00
Shell Pink. An exquisite shade	25c	1.00
Rose Pink. A very desirable color	25c	1.00
Deep Rose. Rich and brilliant	25c	1.00
Deep Purple. Royal deep blue	25c	1.00
Lavender. A pale grayish-lavender	25c	1.00
Crimson. Very rich	25c	1.00
Finest Mixed. All the colors	25c	.75

Dreer's New Aster "Pink Beauty"

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
A magnificent cut-flower variety, in bloom from early August until well on in September; 24 to 30 inches high; flowers average 4 inches across, on long, strong stems. Color a delicate blush pink, and pronounced by experts to be the finest pink mid-season sort yet introduced	50c	$4.00

Dreer's New Late Aster "Crimson King"

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
A superb new late-branching variety, with perfectly double flowers of rich, rosy crimson, full of fire. Fine for cutting, showing up well under artificial light	50c	$4.00

Crego's Giant Comet Asters

Magnificent fluffy flowers, averaging over 5 inches across, with long, strong stems; the finest of this type. Comes into bloom in August, continuing well into September, and, unlike most of the Comet sorts, stands when cut and is a good flower to ship. We offer two colors, our own saving from stock received from the originator.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Shell Pink	50c	$4.00
Snow White	50c	4.00

Early Wonder Asters

This is the earliest Aster in cultivation, being in full bloom when Queen of the Market is only in bud, frequently coming into bloom in late June. Flowers larger than Queen of the Market, borne on long, strong stems. Very valuable for cutting.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Early Wonder White. Pure glistening white	40c	$2.00
Early Wonder Pink. A good, clear pink	40c	2.00

Late Aster "Violet King"

A new and distinct color in the Late Branching class, fine large double flowers of a pleasing shade of violet, a strong, free grower and very free flowering	40c	2.00

LAVENDER DAYBREAK

HIGH

A WORD ABOUT

The past season was a very favorable one in our section for th were visited by many of the leading seedsmen and florists, and all pron had ever seen growing. We have been steadily improving our strain grown in the United States. ¶ ¶ We desire to thank our florist friend will be able to secure all the varieties ordered, as usually we are sold ou

VICK & HILL CO., Dear Sirs:—Last fall I cut and sold 290,000 cut blooms of Asters, and I found your seed about the best I had, in some cases far ahead of others.—Alberta P. Brace, Lockport, N. Y., Jan. 4, 1909.

Lavender Daybreak

Vick & Hill Co.'s Latest Novelty.—This variety was much admired and commented on at the Florists' Convention, held at Niagara Falls, August, 1908, at which time we exhibited it for the first time. Of the many new asters introduced of late years, this is the peer of them all. It may truly be called perfection. The habit of growth is similar to that of Daybreak, but the flowers are larger in size, always full to the center and of a most beautiful shade of lavender. (See illustration.) PRICE: Per oz., $6.00; ½ oz., $3.25; ¼ oz., $1.75; ⅛ oz., $1.00; 1-16 oz., 60c. Tr. pkt., 25c; two for 40c.

Purity

The White Daybreak.—A pure white aster of great beauty, which originated with us several years ago. The plant is of most symmetrical habit, usually growing about 18 inches high. The plants are literally one mass of snow white flowers of large size, resembling great balls of snow. As a cut flower variety Purity is first-class, the stems being long and strong, and the plant is of a free and branching habit. This variety is thought very highly of by all florists who have seen it growing at our seed farm. PRICE: Per oz., $1.50; ½ oz., 80c; ¼ oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 35c.

Daybreak

The seed of this aster has always been scarce, but this year we have a fine stock of seed, and are prepared to fill all orders from seed grown from our own original stock. The flowers are large and double to the center; the color is an exquisite shade of sea shell pink, resembling the color of Daybreak Carnation. The plant is a strong, compact grower, and the flowers are borne upright on long stiff stems. A field of the plants in bloom is a sight never to be forgotten, and is charming beyond description. PRICE: Per oz., $1.50; ½ oz., 80c; ¼ oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 35c.

Royal Purple

The flowers are large with full centers well covered, petals flat and incurved. Color a rich shade of royal purple. This variety is distinct in growth from the Branching Asters. The side stems start from the main stem close to the ground, instead of branching out from the main stem at various heights as in the branching varieties. Season early. PRICE: Per oz., $1.50; ½ oz., 80c; ¼ oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 35c.

Sunset

The habit of the plant is the same as the well-known varieties, Daybreak and Purity. The color of the flowers is a delicate shade of white pink, shading to a deep rich pink in center, making a beautiful combination of colors in one flower. The flowers are globe shaped. PRICE: Per oz., $1.50; ½ oz., 80c; ¼ oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 35c; 1-16 oz., 20c.

Cardinal

The color is, as its name implies, a beautiful shade of cardinal. The growth is similar to the Branching Asters, but some dwarfer. The flowering season begins about the middle of August and the flowers retain their brilliant coloring for many weeks. PRICE: Per oz., $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 40c.

Vick's Late Branching

The Money Makers.—Vick's Branching Asters are the most satisfactory Aster to grow of any on the market today, and are now so well known to the trade that it would be useless for us to say very much in their favor. We can say, however, that our strain of seed is unsurpassed by any other, in fact it is the finest that can be grown. The Branching Asters are without doubt the most profitable for the florist and wholesale grower, as they can by successive sowings be had in bloom from August until late fall, and the grower can always demand the highest price for good flowers of this kind.

Vick's White Branching

The premier white aster, and has no equal as a money maker; flowers very large, resembling large white chrysanthemums, and borne on stems from twelve to eighteen inches in length. PRICE: Per oz., $1.25; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Vick's Rose Branching

Always in good demand, a fine variety for cutting, as the stems are extra long, flowers very large and a fine rose color. PRICE: Per oz., $1.25; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Vick's Pink Branching

A fine bright pink branching variety, and is not generally known. Petals are flat and the flower is the same shape as White Branching. PRICE: Per oz., $1 25; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Vick's Crimson Branching

Very prolific and the earliest of the Branching Asters to bloom. PRICE: Per oz., $1.25; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Vick's Dark Violet Branching

This aster will take a leading place in the dark shades and is bound to be a favorite. The color is that rich dark shade that sets off the beauty of floral designs. The flowers are of extraordinary size, and stand erect on long, graceful stems. PRICE: Per oz., $1.25; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Vick's Lavender Branching

The flowers are large, of good form, borne on long, stiff stems. The color is very pleasing—a fine shade of lavender. We have found this a good variety to grow for the market. PRICE: Per oz., $1.25; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Vick's Purple Branching

A beautiful and most desirable shade of royal purple, a color that is always in great demand, and makes a striking contrast with White and Pink Branching. PRICE: Per oz., $1.25; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Vick's Branching

Above colors mixed. PRICE: Per oz., $1.00; ½ oz., 55c; ¼ oz., 30c; ⅛ oz., 15c.

Vick's New Early Branching

A distinct advance in the branching class. The Early Branching come into bloom about two weeks earlier than the Late Branching. The plants have but few branches and are free from side buds, the whole strength of the plant being given to the development of the very large and perfect flowers, which are borne on extra long stems. We offer two colors only, Early Branching White and Early Branching Rose. PRICE: Per oz., $1.75; ½ oz., $1.00; ¼ oz., 60c; ⅛ oz., 35c; 1-16 oz., 20c.

Hohenzollern Asters

This magnificent aster may justly be called the Ostrich Plume. The habit of the plant is branching, bearing flowers of mammoth size on long stems. The flowers are double with curled petals, resembling giant chrysanthemums. An interesting class, and always admired.

Hohenzollern White

The plant grows tall and branching, bearing flowers of mammoth size on long stems We have cut many flowers on stems measuring from eighteen to twenty-four inches in length. The flowers are of the purest white, measuring from six to eight inches across; are double, with curled petals, resembling a Japanese chrysanthemum. A great improvement both in size and form of flower. Late. PRICE: Per oz, $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

Hohenzollern Rose

A perfect gem. The habit of the plant is branching. Flowers are very large and double, petals curled. Color, a fine shade of rose pink. Early. PRICE: Per oz., $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

Hohenzollern Dark Blue

Flower large and borne on long stems. The color is a nice shade of dark blue. Early. PRICE: Per oz. $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

Hohenzollern Light Blue

This variety has the same habit of growth as the dark blue. The color is very pleasing and attractive. Early. PRICE: Per oz., $2.00; ½ oz, $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

IMPROVED SEMPLE'S PINK

Hohenzollern Lavender

Lavender-colored asters are always in demand, and this beauty is one that should be in every collection Early. PRICE: Per oz., $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

Hohenzollern Mixed

All colors mixed. PRICE: Per oz., $1.50; ½ oz., 80c; ¼ oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 35c; 1-16 oz., 20c.

Violet King

The habit is similar to the popular Vick's Branching, vigorous in growth, long, stiff stems. In form the flower is entirely new and distinct from any other variety; petals somewhat resemble the quilled varieties, but are much larger and broader, those in the center being curled and incurved, completely covering the crown. In shape and size the bloom is round, full and very large, many of the flowers measuring from four to five inches. The color is a soft violet-lilac. It comes into bloom several days before Vick's Branching. PRICE: Per oz., $1.50; ½ oz., 80c; ¼ oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 35c; 1-16 oz., 20c.

Semple's Pink Branching Mary Semple

A beautiful and popular variety of the Branching Aster. The flowers are very large and the color is an exquisite shade of bright pink, very much the color of Enchantress Carnation. Stems long and stiff. A grand Aster for cutting purposes, and for shipping has no equal. PRICE: Per oz., $1.25; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Lavender Gem

An exquisite shade of lavender, deepening in color with age. The flower is always double. The plant is an erect grower, of medium height, and branches from close to the ground. Early. PRICE: Per oz., $3.00; ½ oz., $1.75; ¼ oz., $1.00; ⅛ oz., 60c; 1-16 oz., 40c. Tr. pkt., 20c; two for 30c.

Vick's Early Snowdrift

The very best large flowering early white aster in cultivation. The size and make-up of the flower is not surpassed by any of the late varieties. The plant is erect and of branching habit. Flowers large, pure white and double. Petals long and recurved, and in many irregular and twisted, which gives it a very graceful effect. We find that this aster comes much more double from plants that were started from seed sown in plats in the greenhouse about April 1 than from seed sown in outside seed-beds in May, and would advise starting the seed of this variety in the greenhouse about the date first mentioned. PRICE: Per oz., $3.00; ½ oz., $1.75; ¼ oz., $1.00; ⅛ oz., 60c; 1-16 oz., 40c. Tr. pkt., 20c; two for 30c.

Improved Semple's Pink Branching

A seedling from that grand old variety, Semple's Pink, which, on account of its earliness, will certainly become equally and we predict more popular than its parent. The color is of the same shade of bright pink, and the habit of the plant and form of flowers are identical, being of the same strong, robust growth and branching habit. Its greatest value is in its earliness, blooming as it does ten days earlier than Semple's Pink. (See illustration.) PRICE: Per oz., $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

Vick's Mikado White

A Comet Aster of great beauty. The flowers are pure white and of immense size. The petals are curled and twisted in the center of the flower. The growth is of medium height. A very fine bedding aster. PRICE: Per oz., $3.00; ½ oz., $1.75; ¼ oz., $1.00; ⅛ oz., 60c; 1-16 oz., 40c. Tr. pkt., 20c; two for 30c.

Empress Frederick

A new Comet Aster that impressed us most favorably the past season. The plant is rather dwarf in growth, but vigorous, and bears very large white flowers in the greatest profusion. We do not recommend this aster for cutting purposes, but where a stem of medium length can be used to advantage this variety is very useful, especially for design work. PRICE: Per oz., $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

Rosy Carmine

Many call the new color a light scarlet—in fact, a field of it in full bloom has the appearance of a field of Scarlet Asters The color is hard to describe, but we think Rosy Carmine about right. This new aster is a beauty, and, as with all our new asters, it has stood trial for several years, and we think it improves each year. PRICE: Per oz., $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

Queen of the Market

Earliest of All.—Decidedly the best early aster, producing flowers in profusion on long stems, and being several weeks earlier than any other aster. The flowers are very double, rendering them of exceptional value for cutting purposes. Most of the Queen of the Market Aster seed sold in this country is grown in Germany, but we prefer to grow our own seed, for we must have the best that can be produced for our florist trade. Start your seed of this variety as early as possible to get best results. We offer five distinct colors, white, light blue, dark blue, rose and lavender. PRICE: Per oz., 60c; ½ oz., 35c; ¼ oz., 20c; ⅛ oz., 15c.

Queen of the Market, mixed colors.—PRICE: Per oz., 50c; ½ oz., 30c; ¼ oz., 20c; ⅛ oz., 15c.

Upright White Branching

Another season's trial of this great aster confirms the opinion we had already formed, that the Upright White Branching Aster is bound to be one of the leading asters for shipping purposes. As the flowers are very large, double and firm, stems long and straight, two feet or more in length, color a pure white, a bunch of twenty-five cut blooms shows up in fine shape. A first-class variety and one that every shipper should grow in quantity. Earlier than Vick's White Branching. PRICE: Per oz., $2.00; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., 75c; ⅛ oz., 50c; 1-16 oz., 30c.

Tall White Mixture

A very fine selection of the best tall white asters, consisting of tall White Branching, Crego, White Comet, etc. We recommend this mixture as being very fine and offer it with much confidence as being a mixture that will please all. PRICE: Per oz., $1.00; ½ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Tall Pink and Rose Mixture

Like the Tall White Mixture, the Pink and Rose Mixture consists of the very best in its colors, such as Crego in pink and rose and other tall pink and rose varieties, and is in every way first-class. PRICE: Per oz., $1.00; ½ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Truffaut's Peony Flowered Perfection

A popular aster and very fine for lifting and potting when in bloom. Grows about one foot high. We have a good strain of mixed colors. PRICE: Per oz., $1.35; ½ oz., 65c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

Victoria

Our mixture of this aster covers a wide range of colors. Good for pot plants in August and September. PRICE: Per oz., $1.50; ½ oz., 80c; ¼ oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 35c.

Florists' Special Mixture

This mixture is made up principally of white, pink, red, rose, purple and violet; and includes the early, mid-season and late classes. The mixture gives the purchaser a great range of varieties and colors. PRICE: Per oz., $1.00; ½ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., 35c; ⅛ oz., 20c.

The Crego Aster, White

A new aster offered last year for the first time, and from what we have seen of this variety we think that it is a good aster and will be very popular for cutting purposes. PRICE: Per oz., $8.00; ½ oz., $4.00; ¼ oz., $2.50. Tr. pkt., $1.00.

DENVER.

The Market.

The demand for flowers last week was good, considering that it was affected somewhat by the bad weather. Retailers generally report a fair business, with good prices.

Beauty roses have not been overplentiful, especially the medium priced ones, and these are not exceptionally good. Other roses are good and just about enough to go around, considering the light demand for them. Carnations have been plentiful and easy to get—all the retailers wanted at reasonable prices.

Lincoln's birthday created a demand for a certain line of flowers. On St. Valentine's day, although the weather was bad, the trade was good in all lines, especially in violets, great numbers of bunches being sold at regular prices.

Bulbous flowers are coming in quantity, but have not been swift sale as yet.

Various Notes.

The Gallup Floral Co. has moved from its location on Sixteenth street to 1546 California street.

A. C. Sinram, of Arapahoe street, will open a new store for the sale of cut flowers and plants about March 1, at the corner of Fifteenth and Tremont streets.

J. A. Valentine has returned from the carnation convention and other eastern points.

Frank Crump, of Colorado Springs, was a recent visitor.

Emil Glauber, of the Montclair Greenhouses, has returned from New York and the east.

F. X. Goeschel has opened a store at First avenue and Broadway. E. S. K.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business for the last three weeks has been fairly good. Cut flowers and blooming plants are moving well at moderate prices. Some good azaleas, cyclamens and primroses are to be had. Cinerarias are coming in also, but are limited. Cut hyacinths and tulips are plentiful, but flower buyers prefer roses and carnations; consequently bulb stock is not selling well. In fact, you have to do some tall talking to make a sale of them. Valentine's day is improving every year. Some of the florists think it will equal Christmas in a few years. Most of the stores had good displays for that day, Jacob Schulz being the leader. Henry Fuchs also had a beautiful display of hyacinths and tulips in boxes and pans and a variety of potted plants.

At the last session of the bowling club James Doerr's team put it over Will Walker's team to the tune of three straight. Louis Kirch was the king of the evening. K. R.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

ORANGE, N. J.

The president's reception and annual smoker of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held on Friday, February 12, in its rooms in this city. The evening was taken up with addresses by representatives of other societies, the press and the trade. There was also a musical program and light refreshments. The usual display of flowers filled the tables. Among the speakers were Charles Totty, Frederick and Charles Atkins, Edward Reagan, Charles McTaggert, of Thorburn's, and W. E. Maynard, of the Gardeners' Chronicle. The Rickards brothers gave their specialties. Andrew Wilson danced and told funny stories, and music was rendered by the Imperial Quartet.

The Rev. Lewis H. Lightipe delivered an oration upon the life and services of Charles Darwin.

In the floral display was a table of orchids and greenhouse climbers from the Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, staged by Max Richter. A vase of valley from this house attracted attention by their size, stem and fragrance. There was also a collection of orchids from Thomas Jones, of Short Hills, and the usual contributions from the estates of patrons of the society.

The judges for the evening were Edwin Thomas, Jos. A. Manda and Arthur T. Caparn. J. B. D.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

This is the sixth week of a continuous downpour and everyone is wondering when the rain will stop. It has been almost death to the local trade, for never in the history of retailing have stocks of flowers moved so slowly. There has been a fair amount of funeral work, however. Narcissi and daffodils have gone to waste by the thousands daily. The warm rains have been just such as suited them, and all the early varieties have fairly outrivaled their former abundance.

Paper Whites have been sold as low as $1.50 per thousand, and daffodils at twice that price. Already the fruit blossoms are commencing to be shown, and double flowered peaches and almonds, together with willow boughs and acacia, are much in favor in window decorations. Wild maidenhair is plentiful and this gives the overworked tame varieties a short, well-needed rest.

Violets are a decided glut in the market. Three dozen bunches for $1 is the ruling price. Lilium Harrisii and valley are plentiful, but move slowly. Roses and carnations are not in oversupply, but there is sufficient to fill all demands. The continued dark weather is to be blamed for the shortness of the supply of these, but with a few days' sunshine they will again be plentiful. Smilax is scarce and asparagus stems are not as plentiful as the retailers would like to see.

Various Notes.

Geo. L. May, of the May Seed Co., has recovered from his recent illness.

A clever swindler has victimized several Oakland and Berkeley florists by means of fictitious checks. His plan has been to order a floral design to be sent to a funeral, and tender in payment a check for $10 more than the amount of the purchase. He cleaned up over $100 after banking hours one afternoon, and has not yet been apprehended. G.

BERKELEY, CAL.

Following the death of his mother, February 2, W. R. Thomas was surprised at an unusual profusion of floral pieces coming from wholly unknown friends. The mystery has been solved through the complaints of numerous florists of Berkeley and Oakland who have been made the victims of one of the cleverest passers of worthless checks with whom the local police have had to deal.

The identity of the alleged forger is unknown, but he is a well-dressed man, and works with the assistance of the death and funeral notices in the newspapers, a set of fictitious letters of condolence, and several worthless checks. He enters a florist's establishment, describes the flowers he wishes sent, gives the name and address and a note of sympathy for the family to be delivered with the gift, and then presents a check for $15 or $20 in payment for a $3 piece, receiving cash in change.

The first complaint to the police department came from C. H. Hutchinson, florist at 2315 Telegraph avenue, who sent a large violet piece, but did not cash the check on account of being out of change. The man stated that he would get it cashed across the street or else go home for it. He never returned, and Hutchinson is out the price of the flowers.

Wreaths and large bunches of flowers have been received from other sources, Symocopulos Bros., of Oakland, being one of the sufferers. The trick is considered one of the cleverest in check passing

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE Stark brothers, of Louisiana, Mo., are the third generation of Starks in the nursery business.

THE Genesee Valley Nurseries, of Rochester, N. Y., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $10,000.

THE consensus of opinion is that the nursery trade is starting in upon its best year. In almost all parts of the country the demand is strong and such surpluses as there are appear to be merely local, while there are very general shortages.

CONNECTICUT NURSERYMEN.

At the annual meeting of the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association, held in Hartford February 1, the following officers were elected: President, C. R. Burr, Manchester; vice-president, C. W. Atwater, Collinsville; treasurer, W. W. Hunt, Hartford; secretary, J. Vidbourne, Hartford.

LIRIODENDRON CHINENSE.

One of the most stately and interesting trees native of North America is the tulip tree (Liriodendron tulipfera). It is said to be the sole remnant on this continent of a genus which at an earlier epoch was abundantly represented not only in North America, but Europe as well. Another tulip tree occurs in China, of which a specimen probably as fine as any to be seen in Europe is growing in the collection of Kew Gardens, London. At first thought to be merely a geographical form of the North American species, the Chinese tree has since, by both Sargent and Hemsley, been considered distinct enough to rank as a species. The flowers are not so large, the petals are narrower and the fruit is more elongated. The tree in its native habitat is usually from fifteen to twenty feet high. The Kew specimen at eight years old is ten feet high, and the leading growth made during the past summer was four feet in length. The most striking characteristic of the tree at its present stage is its magnificent foliage. A leaf was measured, the blade of which was thirteen inches long and ten inches broad. It is probable, however, that as the tree grows older the foliage will be reduced in size, and approximate to that of the American species. Although this Chinese tree is not likely in any way to displace the older liriodendron in the esteem of arboriculturists, it will make an interesting addition to a group of trees of singular charm and distinction.

Dreer's Select Dahlias.

"Dreer's White"

This new quilled Show Dahlia is probably the most important introduction of the season, not only on account of its color, form and size, but also on account of its remarkable free-flowering habit. In our trial grounds the past summer it bloomed as profusely as A. D. Livoni. Its flowers are of large size, frequently measuring 6 inches across, and are borne on stout, stiff stems, nodding lightly, and while it resembles in form in a general way the popular Grand Duke Alexis, it is of a much more refined and perfect build, and never shows a trace of any color, always being of a pure, glistening white. It was shown at the annual exhibition of the New England Dahlia Society, where it received an Honorary Award, the highest award given. The Florists' Exchange, reporting on this exhibition, says: "Among notable exhibits perhaps the most striking was that of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, who exhibited a lot of their new Dahlia Dreer's White, and which were magnificent flowers of a pure white."

We offer strong plants, ready April 15, 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

New Decorative Dahlia

"Jack Rose"

Unquestionably the most important addition to the decorative class of Dahlias for many years. In color, a brilliant crimson-red, rich and glowing and which has suggested its name, Jack Rose, on account of the close approach in color to the popular Gen. Jacqueminot Rose, or, as it is more commonly known, the Jack Rose. The habit of the plant is all that can be desired for garden decoration, it being of a uniform compact habit of growth, producing its flowers with the greatest freedom; these are borne on erect, stout stems and always come perfect, a green center or an open flower never having been seen, and under the most ordinary cultivation they will measure five inches or more in diameter. As a cut flower, its rich color, together with its long, stiff stems which hold the flower erect, will at once secure it a place; in fact, the comparatively few flowers placed on the market the past season were quickly disposed of at highest prices. Awarded a certificate of merit by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Oct. 20.

Strong plants, ready April 15, 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

New Cactus Dahlia for Cutting

"Pearlhilde"

Mr. Bassett, the oldest and one of the most extensive growers of Dahlias for cut flowers for the Philadelphia markets, and with whom this variety originated as a sport from Kriemhilde, includes this as one of his best six cut flower varieties. It is identical with its parent except in color, which is a soft blush, so near a white as to pass for such. Strong field roots, 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day, coming on Sunday as it did, made business good on the two days. Everything sold well, especially violets, sweet peas and valley. Violets were none too plentiful and were sold at the wholesale house before arrival. Retailers were cleaned out a few hours later. The weather was disagreeable on Saturday and worse on Sunday. This did not seem to interfere in the least with business. Bulbous stock is now plentiful in all lines, but selling well.

Various Notes.

The club members in charge of the rose show are busy arranging and completing the plans for the coming exhibition.

The results of the recent sale of carnations on McKinley day, by the rescue mission, have been announced. Ladies and girls were stationed all over the principal corners with baskets of carnations. The sales amounted to a trifle over $2,000. Despite this fact, the florists had a larger sale than ever before.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There was an improvement in business last week. The Lincoln anniversary and Valentine's day, however, had much to do with it. Roses were more plentiful, but there were not enough of either carnations or roses to satisfy the demand.

St. Valentine's day was the biggest ever. This day is getting better every year and will soon be a close second to Easter. The retail stores advertised boxes of flowers for valentines, and one store alone sent out about 1,500 boxes.

NORTH TONAWANDA, N. Y.

The King Construction Co. received an order by cable February 13 from Messrs. Richon & Hermes, of Parame, France, for two of their large iron-frame greenhouses. Before deciding to increase their greenhouse plant, M. Richon made a visit to England, Holland, Belgium and Germany to inspect modern construction. Two visits were also made to the United States. It is stated by the King Construction Co. that negotiations are in progress for the placing of other orders and that by the end of the season it is expected there will be several greenhouses of the King type erected in European countries.

Des Moines, Ia.—The wind blew the chimney from the greenhouse at the Mitchellville Industrial School, January 29.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—It is stated the Pikes Peak Floral Co., of which Wm. Henry Evans is president, has had a good year and is planning an addition of about 50,000 feet of glass this season.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is

they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, ready for delivery beginning February 15, 1909, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready for delivery March 1, 1909, $5 per 100 additional.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

EUREKA SPRINGS, ARK.

Definite plans have at last been made for starting a florists' establishment in this city, where such an establishment has long been needed, and the man who has undertaken the enterprise is Clayton I. Poor, formerly of Jonesville, Mich. Mr. Poor had recently sold out his Michigan business, and was looking out for a location, when Eureka Springs was brought to his notice by a small advertisement which had been placed in the REVIEW by F. S. Hawley, of this city, who owns property which had been pronounced an ideal site for greenhouses. Among the fifty or more immediate replies to the advertisement, Mr. Poor's reply was the first to reach its destination and he quickly followed his letter here, in order to make a personal investigation. February 11 he closed a lease for the offered property, including a cottage and a lot frontage of 127 feet on West Main street. More space will be available when needed.

As a beginning in the new business, Mr. Poor contemplates the erection of a greenhouse with 3,000 feet of glass, work to be begun by June 1.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—Arthur Dummett, Inc., of Mount Vernon, N. Y., will open a store here. The company has rented part of a building on Spring street, opposite the postoffice, and will build a 30-foot show house.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business took a decided lunge forward last week, and there was no cause for complaint about lack of orders. Weddings, receptions and dinners were numerous and, ending with St. Valentine's day, made demand good. Every year flowers seem to become more and more the accepted, correct Valentine gift, rather than the lacy paper creations of our grandmothers, and as a result florist suppliers vie with each other in producing novelties in boxes and flower furbelows. White roses and white carnations are a little scarce, and red was greatly in demand the latter part of the week, and consequently very scarce.

Various Notes.

James Souden and W. D. Desmond are opening a flower store on the corner of Ninth street and Hennepin avenue, expecting to be ready for business March 1. They have leased a new store, with a fine front entirely of glass, and the plans are for one of the finest cut flower stores in the northwest.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. had a couple of good decorations last week, making use of some of their large cut of bulb stock. Valentine's day brought a number of out-of-town orders, mostly calling for violets.

R. A. Latham has remodeled and rearranged his store, and the increased space thereby obtained will be a great advantage when the usual spring rush takes possession of the store.

O. C. Swanson had a number of fine bunches for February 14. Violets and orchids in fancy white satin finished boxes created a large demand for duplicates.

Miss Whitted had an attractive window of assorted baskets of flowers, and reports a busy week.

Department stores are coming in again this year with their pre-season attractions, carnations at 2 cents each, and violets at 15 cents per bunch, etc.

M. E. M.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Grand Rapids Floral Co., formerly at 149 Monroe street, has moved to its new quarters at 145 Monroe street. This store has been remodeled to meet the requirements of the new occupants and is now one of the best appointed flower stores in the city.

NEPTUNE

The Best Yellow Carnation that has yet been introduced. A good, strong, healthy grower, free and continuous bloomer, 2½-ft. stem, and a very pleasing shade of yellow. Has not burst ½ of 1% in 4 years. Also Pink, White and Variegated Lawson, just as good as when first introduced. Other commercial varieties at reasonable prices.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day was a pleasant one, and this was a great help to business. Saturday looked threatening at first, but cleared off later. Pot plants were in heavy demand; anything in pots found a ready sale. Violets, sweet peas and carnations were worn a great deal on the streets. From reports, business was beyond expectations, for all the violets in town were sold by night. However, sweet peas, freesias, carnations and roses made good valentines, and a large quantity of this stock was disposed of. Aside from the holiday business, trade has been good.

The Exchange, after the early morning hours, looks like a banquet hall deserted, and the telephone wires are hot all around with hurried inquiries as to who has this or who has the other.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the club was held February 8, which was also carnation night. The attendance was good and a fine collection of blooms was on exhibition. Some fine blooms of the standard varieties were shown, as well as some seedlings which were conceded by some growers to have a bright future. John Cook, the originator of My Maryland rose, was unable, on account of sickness, to attend and give his ideas as to the best methods of growing this rose, but has promised to do so later. The rose is doing excellently at Mr. Cook's, and he also has several promising seedlings in red and pink which will be heard from later.

A large electric sign has been placed over Lexington market, naming the market days—Tuesday, Friday and Saturday—which is a great help to visitors who desire to see one of the finest markets to be found anywhere. This was planned by Thomas Paterson, who is the present market master and is also a florist himself. Q.

It gives me pleasure to renew my subscription, as I owe my success in large part to the Review.—F. W. Brooke, Ithaca, Mich.

Single Chrysanthemums
From Seed

I am offering seed of Wells' new early flowering singles, in original sealed packets, at 25c and $1.00 each. These can be sown any time and, planted outside in the spring, will give you bushels of flowers in early fall, or plants can be lifted and potted when in flower.

ALSO

Wells' New Hybrid Pentstemons

This is a new race that shows the most glorious combinations of colors in scarlet, crimson, pink and white. The plants grow 2½ feet high and the flower spike is 18 inches long. No one who has not seen it can form any idea of the brilliant display a bed of these plants presents. No trouble to grow. Simply prick off the seedlings, like asters, and plant outside in May.

Trade packets, 25c and $1.00 each. Hundreds of seeds in a packet.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business last week was a record-breaker with most stores, and stock was scarce. Tulips are most plentiful at present. Valentine's day, from all reports, was good, but would have been better had it been on a week day. Violets sold better than ever, but there were enough to go around.

Various Notes.

Most of the stores had Valentine windows, displaying huge red hearts pierced with a golden arrow. George Shaffer's window had a heart made of violets and orchids, which showed up finely.

David Bisset, of Garrett Park, Md., is sending in some of the finest single violets that reach this market.

The Washington Florists' Co. had a Lincoln window for February 12, with a photograph of President Lincoln, a lot of split rails and an old ax. The whole arrangement was very artistic.

The Gude Bros. Co. had the decoration for a tea reception given by the Princess Kalanianaole for the ex-queen of the Hawaiian islands. Palms and blooming plants were banked throughout the house. The parlor was done in white roses and lilacs, the reception hall in Golden Gate roses. The main feature of the decoration was the table, done in the royal colors, purple and white. The chandelier over the table was done in asparagus, cattleyas and oncidiums, with bows of ribbon. A branched, moss-covered stump on the center of the table was arranged with orchids and Farleyense ferns. Huge bows of purple and yellow ribbon were used on the table.

George Cook had the dinner for Senator Depew, using 800 carnations and Farleyense. All the different shades of pink were used. The decoration consisted of eight pieces and was very effective.

There was an unusual demand for funeral work this week, both in and out of town. The funeral of Mr. Adams, an official of the Southern railway, called for some large pieces. A large standing wreath, made of red roses, white lilac, violets and valley, was especially fine; also a casket cross made solid of violets, with clusters of cattleyas and valley. There were a great many wreaths and other designs too numerous to mention, nearly all high class work.

Mrs. J. A. Phillips has been quite ill, but is on the mend again.

A report of the death of John H. Small will be found in this week's obituary column. O. O.

OBERLIN, O.—Harry A. Cook will shortly open a flower store, to be run in connection with his greenhouses.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Club Banquet.

Sixty-five persons attended the first banquet of the Rochester Commercial Florists' Association, at the Hotel Eggleston, Thursday evening, February 11. Before the supper a business meeting was held at the store of George B. Hart, 24 Stone street.

It was decided to invite the S. A. F. to hold its national convention at Rochester in 1910. In this connection a resolution was unanimously adopted favoring the enlargement of Convention hall along the lines favored by the Chamber of Commerce. The subject of a flower show the coming fall was also favorably considered, but definite action was deferred.

The Rochester Commercial Florists' Association was organized by the retail florists. It has a membership of about 100, and includes growers of flowers and ornamentals, private gardeners, and members of allied industries. The officers are: President, Fred W. Vick; vice-president, A. H. Secker; secretary, H. B. Stringer; treasurer, W. L. Keller.

W. H. Dildine, of James Vick's Sons, was toastmaster at the banquet. Chas. A. Brown, of Brown Bros., nurserymen, extended greetings and good wishes on behalf of the Rochester Nurserymen's Association and pointed out some of the benefits of organization. A. H. Secker, of Salter Bros., spoke on "Organization." W. L. Keller, of J. B. Keller's Sons, had for his subject, "Our Vocation." R. G. Salter spoke on "Sociability." George B. Hart gave a brief sketch of the association and referred to the forthcoming national convention. Short addresses were also delivered by Charles H. Vick, W. F. Kasting, Charles Malloy, Edward Osborne and John Dunbar. W. D. Valette, traffic manager of the Chamber of Commerce, outlined methods of work necessary for forwarding such an organization. He invited the members of the association to be the guests of the Chamber of Commerce at its first open meeting in March, and assured them of the hearty coöperation of that body.

The New Crested SCOTTII FERN NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI

This crested sport of Scottii will hold the same position to all the crested forms of Nephrolepis that Scottii now holds to the Boston. It is entirely distinct from all others and will become even more popular than its parent, with which it is identical in every way except that the pinnae are subdivided, giving it a beautiful crested appearance.

We have shown the plant at the exhibitions noted below and have been awarded the following honors:

SHAW GOLD MEDAL, St. Louis Horticultural Society, Nov. 3rd, 1908, for "Best plant, of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce."

SILVER MEDAL, offered by the Society of American Florists, through the St. Louis Horticultural Society, Nov. 3rd, 1908, for "The most meritorious plant, or flower, of American origin."

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT of the Horticultural Society of St. Louis, Nov. 3rd, 1908.

SILVER MEDAL, Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, Nov. 3rd, 1908, for the best new plant.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, Nov. 6th, 1908.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

With favorable weather up to last Saturday and with plenty of good stock except in roses and Beauties, business was good. Saturday came in with snow and wind, and with the weather man predicting a cold wave. A good many prospective buyers, therefore, hesitated in placing orders. Consequently the amount of business for St. Valentine's day did not come up to expectations. Red carnations and violets were most called for, but still some of the latter were left over. Funeral work was quite plentiful.

Various Notes.

The entertainment committee of the Florists' Club was well rewarded for its work at the annual dancing party, held February 11. The hall was neatly decorated with palms and ferns, donated by the A. F. Kellner Co, Charles Menger and E. Welke, and southern smilax from the Holton & Hunkel Co. The weather being ideal, the attendance was large, thus making it the most successful affair, socially and financially, of its kind thus far. No doubt these events are the best means of promoting the feeling of good fellowship among the craft.

The Rev. E. Perry, of the Wesley Methodist Episcopal church, of this city, recently held a second flower service, distributing 1,000 red carnations, while he used fully as many roses for the previous service, thus putting our product in a still higher class than it is sometimes credited with.

That strange bird, the stork, paid the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Leidiger a visit last Thursday, leaving a bouncing baby girl. There is great rejoicing, as it is their first-born.

The destruction by fire of the warehouse of the Johns-Manville Co., 225 Clybourn street, last Saturday, was quite a sad affair, causing the death of five firemen, with several others hovering between life and death at this writing. It was the falling of a brick wall which caused the calamity. E. O.

Decorah, Ia.—The Perry Florists' Association held its winter meeting February 4 with Mr. and Mrs. Symonds, at the Decorah Greenhouses.

Milford, Conn.—A stock company for conducting a florists' establishment has been formed. The capital stock will be $10,000, in 100 shares of $100. The majority of the shares are owned by Roger H. Comstock and Harry L. Hungerford, of Milford, and Chester Comstock, of Ridgewood, N. J.

We desire to call attention to our immense stock of Greenhouse Heating.

TWO PARALLEL HOUSES.

Kindly tell me how much hot water pipe would be required to heat to 60 degrees two greenhouses, both in one block, each house 16x65 and nine feet six inches to the ridge. The walls are four feet six inches, with two feet of glass, and the south gable is glass. The houses have even-span roofs and run north and south, with a shed, 10x32, at the north end. I should like to use 2-inch flow pipe and 1¼-inch or 1½-inch returns. Would a boiler rated at 350 square feet of radiation be large enough? The temperature never goes below zero in this part of Oregon. C. K.

Each of the houses 16x65 feet should be provided with at least one 2-inch main flow pipe and nine 1½-inch returns. If the houses are built with a common partition wall, five of the nine 1½-inch radiating pipes can be placed on the outside wall and four on the inside, in each house. The two houses together require a little over 600 square feet of radiation. It will, therefore, be economical to install a boiler rated to carry not less than 750 square feet of radiation, and one rated at 1,000 square feet will be still safer. L. C. C.

POOR CIRCULATION.

Will you kindly inform me as to where the trouble lies in my heating system? I have two connected, even-span greenhouses, 20x50 feet. They run north and south and the boiler is at the north end of the west house. From the boiler I have run one 3-inch pipe in both houses, to the extreme south end of the houses, returning by 2-inch pipes. There are seven 2-inch pipes on the west side of the houses, seven 2-inch pipes on the east side and seven 2-inch pipes in the center, where the two houses are joined, there being no partition between them. The expansion tank is located about six feet directly over the boiler, which is a 4-piece hot water boiler, with a 28-inch grate.

Now, what I should like to know is, what is the reason that I cannot get hot water in all of those 2-inch pipes? The best I can do is to get hot water in four of them. The other three have cold water, but still the return pipe, which is located at the extreme north end of the house, has hot water, and also the water in the expansion tank is hot. The expansion tank has a circulation through both the main and return. J. H. S.

I would suggest that you run the riser under the ridge of one of the houses to the far end and there feed the twenty-one 2-inch returns. Connect the expansion tank only with the main return close to the boiler and elevate it at least ten feet above the highest point in the flow pipe. This should increase the pressure on the system slightly and enable the boiler to force the hot water through the system. See to it that all the pipes are carefully graded and have a uniform fall. Sometimes a slight buckle in the returns gives lots of trouble in the circulation. L. C. C.

HOT WATER FOR SMALL HOUSE.

I shall be thankful for any suggestions on any point, either in heating or general make-up. My plan is as follows: The house is to be 8x35, four feet to the eaves and seven feet to the ridge, with benches two and a half feet high, glass from the benches up, and tar paper outside. The house will run east and west, or, to be more exact, southeast and northwest. I will heat with hot water. I will use an old Success steam boiler, with a capacity of sixty or seventy gallons. There is a zigzag flue up through, for coal smoke, but I intend to fill this flue with old brick and use gas for fuel.

The boiler will be in the cellar of my dwelling, with a flow pipe from the top of the boiler to the far or east end, under the bench against the north wall and halfway across the end, where it will connect with the returns, two under the bench with the flow and three under the other, all connected to one main return, which will drop to the bottom of the boiler. There will be a barrel expansion tank, with a capacity of twenty or thirty gallons, in the attic, twenty feet above the boiler, and connected to the return at the boiler with ⅜-inch pipe. All the other pipes, both flow pipe and returns, will be 1¼-inch. I will connect both the flow and the main return with smaller nipples, as the boiler-holes are small.

I am located in southwestern Pennsylvania and want a temperature of 55 or 60 degrees in zero weather. C. D.

I think it would be better to tap the boiler out so as to allow the use of a 1½-inch main flow and at least a 1½-inch return. I should carry a 1½-inch flow under the ridge of the house to the far end and take off branches to feed four 1¼-inch returns under each side bench. In other respects the plant is all right. L. C. C.

Buy Hot-Bed Sash at Cut Prices and Build Cold Frames Economically

Hot-Bed Sash 3x6—1⅜ Glazed with 6-inch Glass $1.69 Dealer's price $3.50

The problem of finding room for bedding plants is solved by the use of Cold Frames. It is poor economy to overcrowd your greenhouse with plants that are better off outside, in cold frames, where they soon become sturdy and in fit condition to plant or market. The capacity of any greenhouse can easily be doubled by building Cold Frames to care for the "overflow."

The Market.

Business conditions last week were fair. Beauties are scarce at present, but will probably be in good supply in a few weeks. Other roses, such as Bridesmaid, Bride, Golden Gate, Ivory, Perle, Chatenay, Richmond and Killarney, are in good supply and demand. There is an abundance of carnations on the market and they meet with ready sales. Sweet peas, callas and bulbous stock of fairly good quality clean up well. Violets are of good quality. Potted plants, such as cyclamens, primulas, azaleas and cinerarias, have a satisfactory demand. Green goods are plentiful and sell well. The weather is fair and is about all that could be desired.

Various Notes.

The Michler Bros. Co. has been cutting bulbous stock of good quality. The firm also has good callas.

Anderson & White have the largest supply of geraniums and other spring stock that they have ever had at their greenhouses.

A recent visit to the J. A. Keller greenhouses, on East Sixth street, found everything in good shape. The 40,000 square feet of glass are devoted to a general line of stock for the retail downtown store, on Main street. The two new rose and carnation houses, built last summer, were the most notable. Bridesmaid, Bride, Golden Gate, Ivory, Perle and Richmond are among the varieties of roses grown, and excellent flowers are being cut. Rhea Reid will be given a trial here next season. The favorite varieties of carnations are Enchantress, Rosepink and White Enchantress, White Perfection and Beacon. A few Queen Louise, Boston Market, Lady Bountiful, Aristocrat and other varieties are grown in limited quantities and will probably be discarded next season for some of the newer varieties now on the market. Several other houses, devoted to palms, ferns and general stock, were looking well. A lean-to house of sweet peas has been producing abundantly. J. Ferdinand Keller, the manager, and his skilled assistants deserve much credit for such a neat, clean and well-kept place. Mr. Eggers, formerly with S. M. Harbison, Danville, Ky., is now the rose and carnation grower for the firm and has proven himself a highly competent grower. The retail cut flower store is in charge of James P. Keller, assisted by Miss Pauline Worland and Henry Ballard.

August Le Clere had a large decoration for Gov. A. E. Wilson, at his mansion in Frankfort, Ky., last week.

Honaker had a beautifully decorated window for St. Valentine's day.

William Bell has been kept busy with funeral work at the store.

John Ballow is now in charge of Mrs. E. C. Henry's greenhouses at Frankfort, Ky.

William Kash, formerly with Mrs. Henry, is now with the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind. BLUE GRASS.

HUNT'S GUARANTEED FERTILIZERS

OUR FERTILIZERS ARE PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR FLORISTS' USE and are analyzed by an expert chemist to see that they are free from all acids. You can depend upon their being just what you want, AND SAFE. You ought to have these on hand at all times, ready for use.

PURE BONE MEAL

The brand we are selling has no superior. It is an absolutely uniform grade of pure bone, guaranteed free from acids, and is sold at as low rates as many inferior brands, which cannot be used with safety in greenhouse work.

200 lb. bag	4.00	2000 lbs., 1 ton	30.00

BLOOD AND BONE

Preferred by many of our best and largest growers owing to its great percentage of ammonia and available phosphate, which makes it quick acting. It is a mixture of pure tankage or blood and the best grade of Bone Meal in proportions to stimulate root action and bring out the best color in the blooms.

Guaranteed Analysis	Per cent
Ammonia	6½ to 7½

Price

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE

One of the most effective of fertilizers and largely used by the best growers, both as a top dressing and in the manure tanks. The raw material for Hunt's Sheep Manure is the droppings taken from solid floor sheep corrals. Ordinary manures are largely shoveled up from the ground and contain a large proportion of soil for which you pay, but from which you get nothing except possibly weed seed. A trial order will convince the most skeptical of the superiority of our brand.

The Market.

Valentine's day brought out the best business we have had for a long time. Stock was just about equal to the demand, so that there was a general clean-up among the wholesale houses, with scarcely a flower left over, and the retailers give a similar report. Prices ruled good, but not much higher than the general run lately. There was some advance, however. Violets did not advance much, as there was a heavy supply of them and they were about the only flower that did not sell out clean. The late arrivals did not sell out as well as had been expected.

Business continues good and this week starts out better than for some time. The market is well cleaned out. Roses, carnations, bulbous flowers—in fact, all sorts of flowers are bringing better prices. Many growers are off crop now, and that tends to lessen the supply. If the demand holds out, there will be a few weeks of good prices.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Society, held Saturday evening at Weiland & Olinger's, brought out a large attendance. The work of perfecting the organization for the entertainment of the S. A. F. next August was gone over, and reports were heard from the chairmen of those committees who were present. The souvenir program committee is making rapid headway and many advertisements have been secured. The finance committee reports satisfactory progress, and all other committees are busily engaged in doing their respective work. Several new members were admitted. During the meeting refreshments were served through the courtesy of Weiland & Olinger, and the meeting was greatly enjoyed by all present.

William Murphy's place was closed Wednesday, February 10, on account of the death of his grandson, Donald Murphy.

TRI-CITIES.

Current Comment.

The Tri-Cities experienced one of the most sudden drops of the temperature Tuesday morning, February 9, that have been known hereabouts. It fell 15 degrees in one hour.

H. H. Hensley, of Rock Island, has purchased the half interest of his partner, Mr. Rhodes, in the Long View Floral Co., and will hereafter conduct the business himself under the same name.

The Tri-City Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Henry Gaethje, Sr., in South Rock Island, Thursday evening, February 11, and when President Knees called the meeting to order nearly all members were present. A letter from Adolph Arp, now of Meridian, Miss., but formerly of Davenport, Ia., and a charter member of the club, was read with interest. In the letter Mr. Arp stated he intended to make Meridian his future home, and the club forthwith made him an honorary member.

The annual banquet of the club was decided to be held at the Outing Club, Davenport, March 25, and will be attended by the florists and their wives, employees and a few intimate friends. After the luncheon at 7 p. m., the rest of the evening will be made merry by dancing and entertainment.

The topic of discussion for the evening was, "Does It Pay to Invest in the Newest Novelties in Rooted Cuttings?" The subject was a good one and was well talked over, and the consensus of opinion was that it does not pay the small commercial florist until the varieties have been thoroughly tested and proven good.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held at Davenport, Ia., the exact place as yet not having been selected. Officers for the following year will be nominated and elected.

After the adjournment of the meeting, refreshments were served. H. M.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

No Greenhouse is Complete

unless it is equipped with our latest improvement on ventilation. This is the greatest invention in many years and if you don't know about our new method you ought to drop us a line at once and find out about it.

Without our New Hinge and Header your greenhouse is out of date if you have top ventilation. This new hinge braces the roof at the weakest point; does away with drip from ventilators; prevents ice forming at the header; keeps bars from sagging; does not break glass in the roof;—they are inexpensive and you should have them.

Don't do any building until you find out about some of the things we make. You can't keep up with the other florists if you persist in building "cheap" houses.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

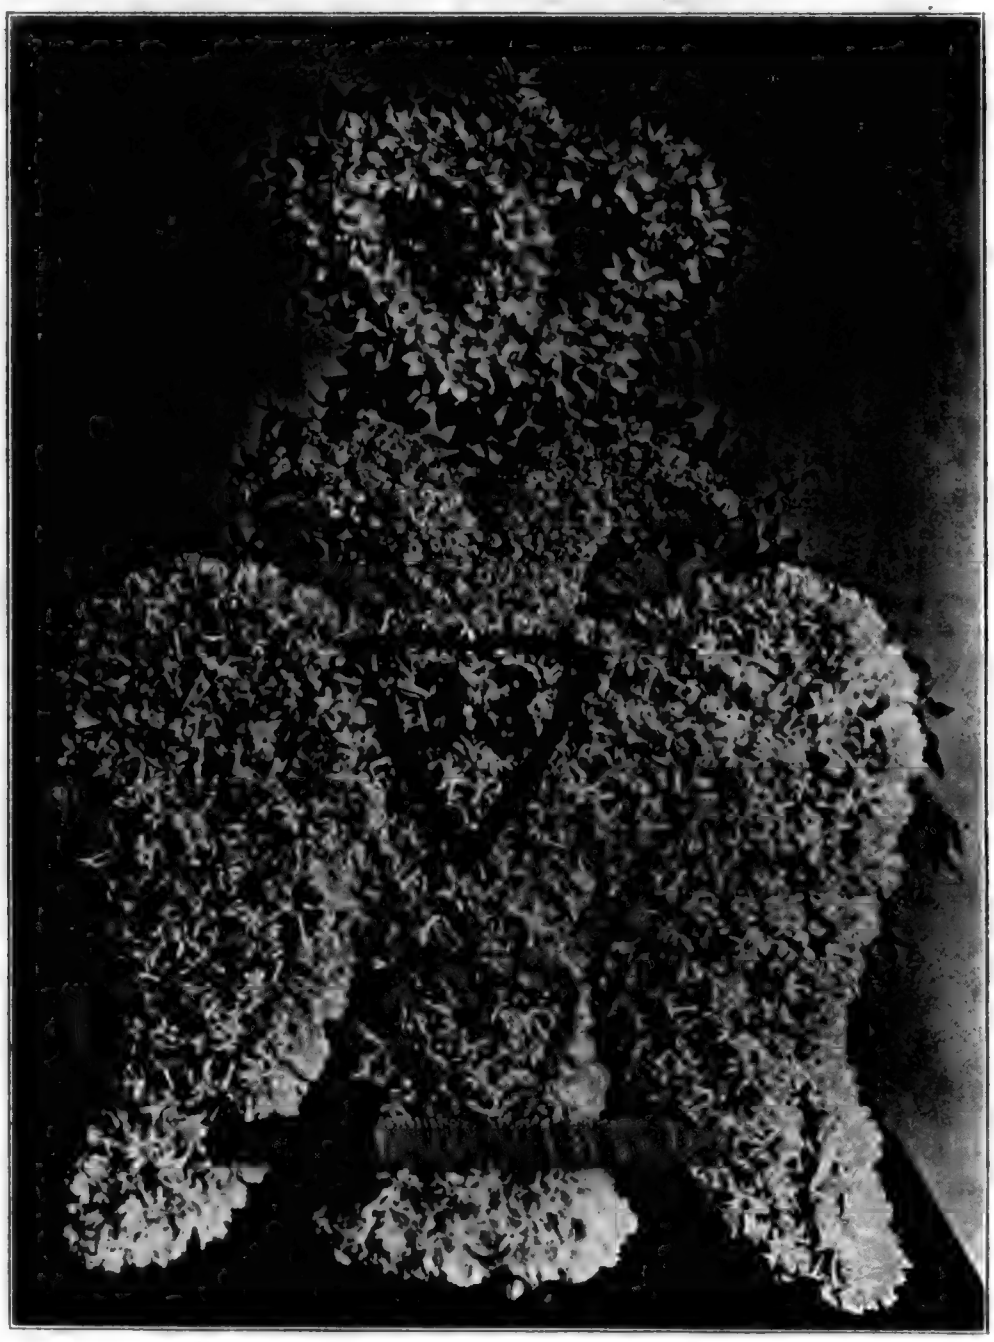
THE MASONIC DESIGN.

The accompanying illustration shows a somewhat unusual design made by Charles P. Mueller, Wichita, Kan., for the obsequies of a thirty-third degree Mason. The masonic eagles were made with Roman hyacinths, the border being of carnations. The eagles' heads were made of immortelles, although it would have been possible to have made them of colored carnations. The crown was of Paper Whites. Smilax not only backed the whole design but served to outline the upper parts.

THE RETAIL TRADE.

[An abstract of a talk by Edward MacMulkin, of Boston, Mass., before the floricultural classes of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, February 17, 1909.]

During the last thirty years the methods of conducting a first-class florists' business have improved year by year, and the knowledge of the business required of a first-class man has increased correspondingly. Years ago it was sufficient for a man to know the name of a few common flowers and be able to put them in a box and tie them up. That was the end of it. There were no such things for the ordinary public as decorated dinner tables, decorated halls, churches, etc. All those were for people of large means, who had greenhouses of their own. Now all well regulated households have more or less of decorations when they give a dinner, and devote considerable time to the selection of the flowers and expect the florist to be of considerable assistance in the selection. This is as it should be, for the reason that if with your assistance your customer is satisfied with the result of the combined efforts, he is sure to want it another time, and not only that, but he will also recommend you to his friends who want similar work done for them.



The Building of a Business.

The florist is under a handicap, in a way, in the conduct of his business, from the fact that conditions are not always favorable to pushing his goods before the public by advertising them, as does his neighbor in other lines of trade, through the daily press, periodicals, etc. It is practically conceded in the trade that the florists' business is a one-man affair, and that practically all who want to buy flowers know where they are going to get them, or have some friend who will tell them the best place to get what they want. For this reason it is wholly up to the man himself to make his business. He must not only be thoroughly informed about it, but he must have good taste, be courteous to his customers, ready to supply their wants, and prompt in the execution of his orders, and he must demand the same qualities in his employees.

In this connection I am sorry to say that a large number of florists do not take kindly to the idea of customers of their establishment wanting to do their business with any special employee. Personally I would consider it a compliment to my judgment to have men in my employ in whom my customers have enough confidence to intrust to them the execution of their orders. This difficulty is due more to a lack of education and proper spirit in the employer, and as new men with new ideas enter the business, this stumbling block to the young men will be removed. Any of you young men who intend to enter the business, to be successful, must have one idea uppermost in your mind; that is, the convincing of your customer that you are the man from whom he can get better results for the money he expends than from any of your competitors. Competition is abroad in the land. It has entered the florists' business as well as others, and the time has gone by when a man can say to a customer, "If you don't take this, you can't get it anywhere else."

Unfair Competition.

The competition, I am sorry to say, is not always fair in a florist, any more than it is in other lines. In fact, the chances for deception are greater with the florist, if he be at all unscrupulous. For instance, a man may go to a legitimate house and say he wants so many of one thing and so many of another, or wants a certain decoration put up and wants certain good things in it. You tell him what it will cost him, intending to give him what he asks for. Your competitor comes in then and says, "I can do the same thing for so much less," knowing at the time he could not do so except by furnishing an inferior article. You can buy a rose for 5 cents and you can buy the same variety for 25 cents, but it is still a rose, and the trouble with a great many people is that a rose is a rose and they cannot see why the price should be different in one place than in another. Of course, this does not happen often and is always disastrous to the cheap man. He makes that one trade, but he can never do business with that customer again. Every man is entitled to a legitimate profit on his work. He must satisfy himself what that profit should be and he should get it. If his unscrupulous neighbor should take away a trade, it should not bother him. His customer is sure to come back, and come back to stay.

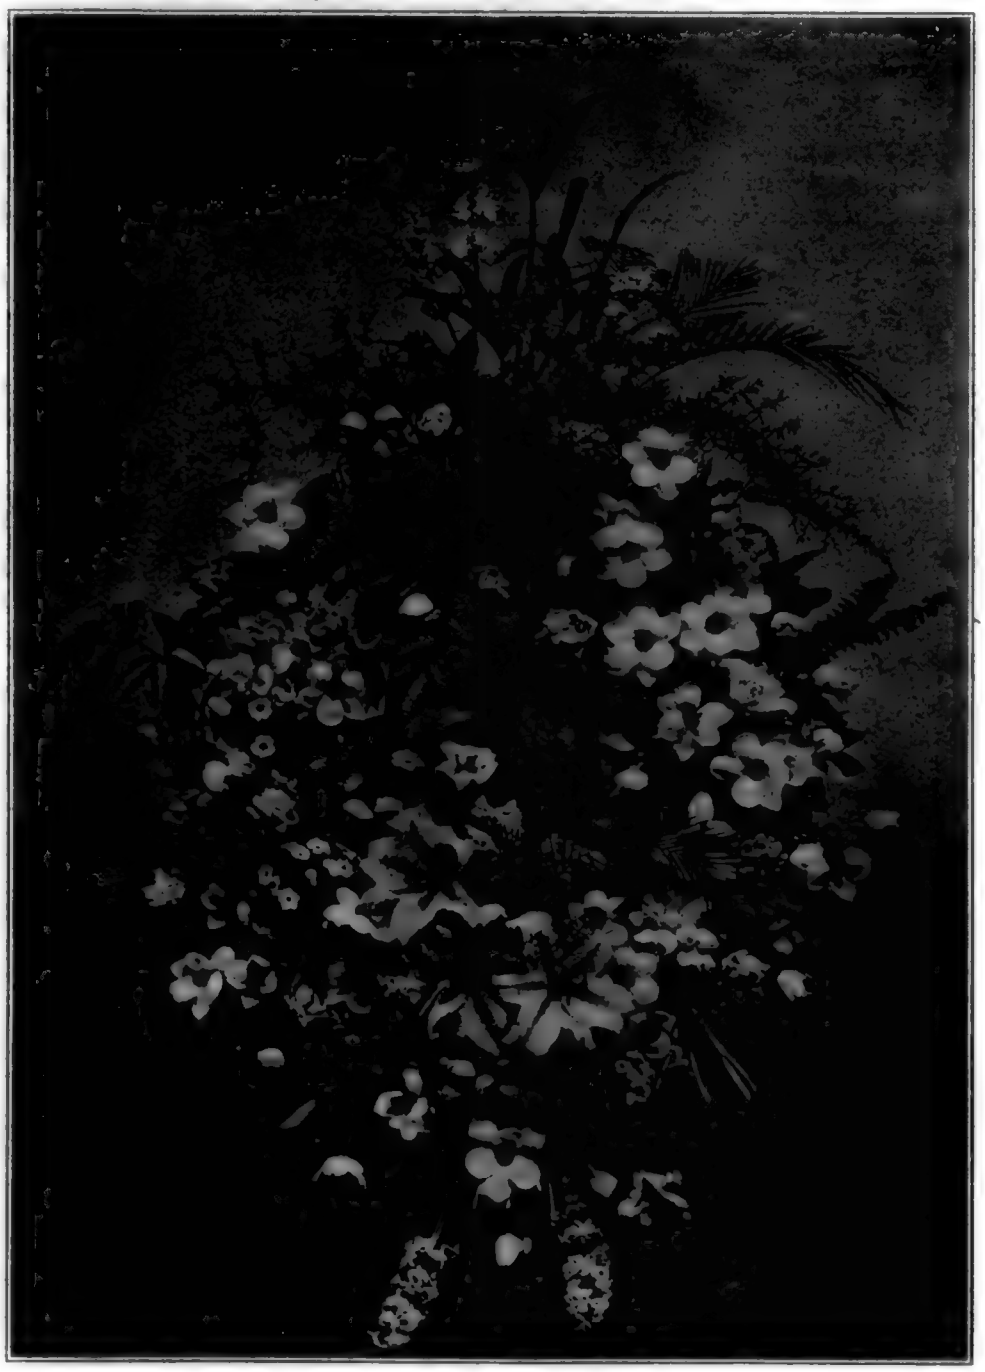
Modern Requirements.

A man who goes into the florists' business today is in it to stay. To do a paying business now, a man must invest considerable capital in fixtures and what we call dead stock; that is, a certain amount of stock that must always be in your possession to do your business properly. You can, of course, open a small store at a small expense for fixtures and stock, keep your expenses in the way of labor down as low as possible and you can make a living. I would say to that man, keep out of it. You do not belong there. To be successful in these times as a florist, a man must have a presentable place to do business; he must have it well stocked; he must have enough and efficient employees; he must have greenhouses to store the goods necessary for his business, or he must hire them, thus reducing his profits; he must have or hire land for his landscape and garden work; in fact, he should be in a position to tell his customer he can fix up his grounds or his garden as well as he can his table, and the customer nowadays not only wants it, but expects it; if you cannot do it for him he goes to the other man and the other man does it; he also sells flowers, and he sells them to your former customers, but yours no more.



I do not for a moment say that all these facilities are necessary the day you start in business, but it should be every man's ambition to be the man. Every man entering the business from now on must have the ambition to be the proprietor of a place where everything in any manner connected with horticulture can be obtained for the asking. The business is as yet in its infancy. It will get its set-backs the same as any other. Lean years will appear now and then and the florist will feel it keener than other lines, because it is in part a luxury, but it will keep step now with all other industries and will average equally prosperous.

You here who have the advantage this college offers for obtaining the practical knowledge of the cultivation of plants and flowers, the soil in which they return the best results, climatic conditions under which they should be cultivated, etc., have a decided advantage at the very beginning of your business career. You are starting off with a knowledge that it has taken your competitor years and years to acquire, and you know conditions which in the nature of things it would not be possible to know except in a place of this kind.

Work for the Dull Season.

The outdoor work of the florist is gradually assuming large proportions and is deserving of his best efforts. It is a well-known fact that what is called the store business of the florist is good only from about the first of October until the first of May; the rest of the year the florist who does nothing but a store business has hard work to make both ends meet, generally using up his profits to pay necessary expenses during the summer. Many years ago I saw the necessity of making the dull months profitable instead of a source of expense and, much to my surprise, found conditions were such that I would find no difficulty in providing work for men who would otherwise have to remain idle. It is necessary to say here that experienced labor is difficult to obtain, and when you get a man that knows his business it is more profitable to keep him than to let him go for a couple of months or so when you really have nothing for him to do.

I found upon investigation that there were a great many men, say men who had a small, profitable business, men who filled good positions in large establishments, superintendents of manufactories, etc., who were purchasing small places within a short distance of their work, places of one to ten acres, which they were gradually improving at an expense of $100 or so a year, each with the expectation of making in the end a little paradise of his especial property, and I have today on my books a number of such people who not only keep my men busy in the dull months and have given me a fair profit on the goods and work done, but have become buyers of flowers in the winter months, when I have practically nothing to do outside.

Fascination in Landscape Work.

Putting aside the financial question involved, there is a certain fascination in the work that appeals to any one interested in it. Every one likes to be successful and, although the worries are many, the desired result achieved is a source of gratification that overbalances anything else. The satisfactory execution of the comparatively small orders always leads to larger ones, and while we all may not have the financial responsibility to attempt larger and more important work, we have the feeling that sometime we will have it, and know that when we do reach that condition we have the ability to carry the work to successful completion. I cannot impress too thoroughly on your minds the necessity of being prepared to attach this department to your business. The percentage of profit is good and the percentage of loss practically nothing. It, of course, necessitates the carrying of a nursery stock for a year or so, but even that grows into profit for you and, if you have a greenhouse, can be taken care of without additional expense other than the interest on the investment. That should not be an outlay, as I know of nothing that will improve in value as much in a year as a shrub, tree or plant that you put in the ground.

THE PILLOW.

The accompanying illustration gives a pretty pillow arrangement wherein the design has lost much of its conventionality. The field of white carnations is relieved by four corner-pieces of pale pink roses tied with pink satin ribbon. The idea of youth and brightness is admirably expressed. The design is one of our series by Charles Henry Fox, of the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, but Mr. Fox says the lettering is not to be commended. PHIL.

FANDL'S DESIGNS.

The illustrations on page 6 show two excellent designs in the German style of floral architecture. These were the work of Paul Fandl, who learned the flower business in Germany and who now for a time has been located at Spokane, Wash., where he is building up a prosperous trade.

The wreath on the easel was made for funeral purposes and is an excellent example of its class. It contains too many varieties of flowers to be salable in the leading American stores, but among the people who are accustomed to the floral work of the Fatherland it seems much better than the style in vogue with the leading retailers in this country. Mr. Fandl used principally tulips, auratum lilies and hyacinths, with a spray of fine white lilac at the top, but there are a number of other varieties mixed in throughout the design. The green was in as great variety as the flowers. Leaves of cocos and kentias were used, with the fronds of the Boston fern and adiantum, and a liberal use of asparagus.

The fan was designed for presentation. Mr. Fandl's customer sent it to a young lady after a ball. The body of the design was made of pink hydrangeas, witn myosotis among the adiantum fronds which represented the lace on the outer edges. The garniture was made of Testout roses and lily of the valley. The finishing of the reverse side was an essential feature. It should always be made with a background of green to conceal the reverse side of the picture. The frame in this case was of wire covered with green silk.

BASKETS FOR THE TABLE.

At a recent luncheon, at the plate of each guest was a little gilded basket, planted with small ferns and double violets, while the centerpiece was an odd shaped gold basket, growing with ferns and daffodils. The individual baskets at the guests' plates were intended to be carried away as souvenirs and, as the affair was at a club, it only required the example of the hostess, on arising, if any hint were needed.

SUMMER AND WINTER.

These illustrations, from photographs taken on the grounds of Z. G. Simmons, Kenosha, Wis., might almost be entitled "Before and After," although they do not show the same views. One picture shows a garden path before frost cut down the plants; the other is a typical winter scene.

J. H. Wilcott, who is gardener for Mr. Simmons, describes the garden scene as follows:

"A sort of pergola of rough cedar posts was constructed, about ten to twelve feet wide and ten feet high, with a gravel path three and a half feet wide, and then a strip of sod fifteen inches wide on each side the whole length of the path. Grapevines, hardy climbing roses and clematis are planted at the foot of the posts. The arch across the path is covered with bittersweet that has been fed liquid manure and attained this growth in two years.

"Beginning at the arch on both sides is a wall or hedge of privet, kept square-trimmed, four feet or so high. Then the pergola begins and runs down the garden. Hollyhocks in various colors are planted at some of the posts and larkspur at the others in large clumps. Hardy roses form the background and Lilium candidum, foxglove and Canterbury bells are in front of these on both sides. Next to the grass sod comes a long row of pansies in all colors, alternating with sweet alyssum. Later in the season the scene is changed with gladioli and cardinal flowers, also tiger lilies filled in here and there with cannas of the taller kinds placed between the roses, making the path in fall show a red and white effect.

"The other picture shows how a place in town may be beautiful both winter and summer. One year before this place had only two large trees on it. All the rest are forest trees moved and successfully reëstablished. There are thorn-apple trees, wild crab-apple and dogwood, also a few black cherry. My method is to save the roots about two and a half feet around the tree and in transplanting I place them about eight inches lower than they were before, giving them plenty of water the first year. With the shrubbery, the site now is attractive winter and summer."

PRACTICAL VIOLET CULTURE.

I wish to grow both single and double violets. I have Professor Galloway's book. He advises inside culture exclusively. He also advises the use of cyanide gas. Do those who make money growing violets year after year follow these methods? Would you kindly give me some good common-sense advice on this subject as early as possible? When is the best time to buy stock, and what is the most practical way to handle both single and double varieties?

G. A. T.

The many successful growers of double violets in the Rhinebeck section of New York grow their plants in beds or benches all the time. As a rule, however, the sashes are removed from the houses during the summer months. Excellent double violets, however, can be grown by setting the plants out in the field in early May, lifting them not later than September 1.

In the case of singles, it would be a mistake to grow these inside. The result would be an excess of foliage and little flower. The largest and most successful growers of singles propagate their stock in early spring, when the plants are done blooming, plant out in the fields in May and do not lift and house until the plants have been exposed to a little frost. If lifted before freezing weather, the plants will produce an abundance of foliage and few flowers.

With double violets, culture in the beds all the time, or early lifting, is desirable, on account of the spot disease, which annually wipes out many a grower's stock. The single violets are now much more grown than the doubles, and are little subject to disease. Princess of Wales is the standard variety; one or two newer sorts are also now offered.

Purchase your stock in early April, grow in flats in a cool, light house until early May, then plant out in rows two feet apart. Allow one and one-half inches in the rows for the singles and six to eight inches for the doubles. Keep them well cultivated all summer. Cut off any runners as they appear. House your doubles not later than September 1 and your singles a month later, unless you expect sharp frost before that time. A night temperature of 40 degrees suits violets.

Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas is used by a large number of violet growers. This is a dangerous fumigant, however, and you would do well to read up articles in past numbers of the Review before using it. Once you have ascertained the exact strength needed, you will use nothing else. It is both simple and effective and not at all expensive.

We forgot to say that Lady Hume Campbell is the double violet least subject to disease. Marie Louise is a splendid dark variety. C. W.

VINCA FOLIAGE DISEASED.

I enclose a sample of diseased vinca vine. Please inform me as to the cause of the trouble and a remedy for it.

M. A. B.

It is not uncommon to see occasional plants of the variegated vinca affected in this way. There are two principal causes, growing the plants in a house where they get little or no sun and too low a temperature. Vincas will grow in a house just above freezing, but succeed best in a night temperature of 50 degrees, where they can have plenty of sun and air. A favorite way to grow them is along the edges of the benches. I should advise cutting down the affected plants. Run a little on the dry side until they break away from the bottoms freely again, and grow in a light, sunny house. This trouble need not worry you. It is due to some cause which can be easily remedied. C. W.

HARRISII BUDS TURN YELLOW.

I have been growing Harrisii lilies for five years and have had quite a loss each year through the buds coming deaf. The buds will sometimes get a full inch long before they get yellow and dry up. The lot I grew this year I was very particular with, in both heating and watering. At no time were they over 60 degrees at night. The bulbs were first-class and rooted well before being put on the bench, where they grew as well as any person could expect. They reached the full height of the ordinary Harrisii and had perfect leaves to the buds. If you possibly can, I wish you would enlighten me on this subject. STANCH READER.

Your temperature has been ideal for Harrisii and, as you say watering has been carefully done, there must be some other cause for the buds turning yellow. Attacks of green aphis will cause this trouble more quickly than anything else. Are you quite sure your plants have been regularly fumigated and that aphis has not been allowed to get in its work while the buds were young and hidden within the upper leaves? Overdoses of chemical fertilizers, such as nitrate of soda, will cause buds to yellow; also moving plants from a high to a low temperature. We are inclined to think the aphis may have been the cause of the trouble.

CEMENT GUTTERS AND BENCHES.

"Cement gutters and benches versus those of other material furnish a topic that is often heard about lately. Winter weather has caused much havoc with the cement work at different establishments."

The above paragraph recently appeared in print and since we have recommended cement gutters to those who saw them at our place during the carnation meeting, as well as to a great number of friends who wrote in regard to them, we wish to say that our cement gutters came through the severe winter weather in perfect shape. We are so well pleased with our experiment with a real concrete gutter (cement and gravel, wet) that we are now casting 1,200 lineal feet of the same kind of gutter.

Anyone familiar with cement work can make these gutters. The outlay for forms, cast-iron attachments and reinforcement is small.

While we are always glad to answer inquiries regarding this gutter, we wish to say that drawings and instructions for making it will be published if further tests on a larger scale confirm our expectations.

We also wish to say that, notwithstanding careful inquiries, we failed to locate any cement greenhouse walls in this country with which the winter weather had "caused much havoc." Neither, we are glad to state, was anybody in this vicinity unfortunate enough to have his cement benches exposed to the winter weather.

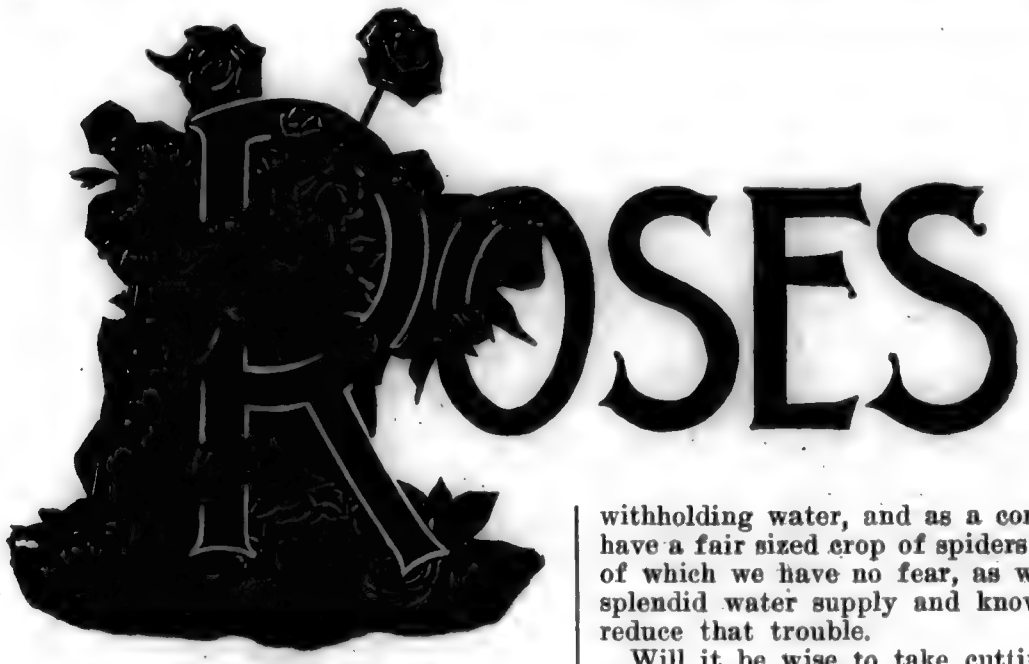
DECAYED PANDANUS.

I enclose part of a leaf of Pandanus Veitchii. I keep them in a house with a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night. They were fine plants when I purchased them, two months ago, but they are all spotted now, and decaying at the top of the pot. Will you kindly let me know what causes this?



R. F. G.

The pandanus in question have evidently had a chill, if not actually touched by frost. The damage was probably done in transit at the time of purchase.

A temperature of 55 degrees is rather too low for Pandanus Veitchii, and if the plants were kept a little too wet at such a temperature, the leaves would be likely to spot more or less. A night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees is much more favorable for this plant.

A SUMMER ROSE HOUSE.

Will you please state what is the best way to make a summer rose house? I have a mum house, with raised benches. Would you plant the roses on the benches or on the ground? If on the ground, would the old mum soil be all right, placing it on the ground, spading it all up and putting about six inches of rose soil on top? What are the best plants to start with—2½-inch or 4-inch pot plants or dormant stock? What size of wire would you use for the plants and how high should they be? G. G.

Summer roses invariably do best on ground benches. Old mum soil would not be suitable for the purpose. Procure some good, loamy sod and add one-fourth of good cow manure. Chop it all up and mix thoroughly, adding a 4-inch potful of bone meal to each bushel of the compost.

At this season well grown plants from 2½-inch pots are good stock for planting, though from 4-inch pots the results will be quicker. Unless you have had some experience with dormant stock, it is better to leave it alone. Ribes.

ROSE ANTHRACNOSE.

We are forwarding under separate cover, by express, specimens of our rose-trouble, which is confined to one house of Ivory and Uncle John. For several seasons we have kept a part of our stock over for a second year, and we started to follow out this method last summer, but along in July we noticed that some plants began to fail and the trouble seemed to spread in colonies around the first plants affected. We then cut out these blocks of unhealthy plants, refilled the place with fresh soil and planted fresh stock, but in a short time those plants adjoining the plants first affected also showed the trouble. All the new shoots came out very weak, with thin, small foliage, of a pale green color, which soon after showed brown blotches toward the edges and finally dried up and fell off—the tips of the shoots first, and finally the whole branch drying up.

A peculiar feature of the trouble is that in its first stage it generally shows on only a part of the plants and the others appear vigorous, but the healthy part generally succumbs to the trouble after a while. We have kept on taking out affected plants right along, and replanting. The specimens sent are plants that were set in late in the season and did not make a heavy growth.

We have been trying to fight it off by withholding water, and as a consequence have a fair sized crop of spiders on hand, of which we have no fear, as we have a splendid water supply and know how to reduce that trouble.

Will it be wise to take cuttings from plants now apparently healthy?

Will you kindly put us right in this matter, so as to prevent this trouble from occurring again? S. F. C.

The plants reached me in excellent condition, which gave me a chance for a careful examination. While there are a few eelworms present, they are not numerous enough to cause the trouble.

The worst trouble is the disease called rose anthracnose. This disease frequently attacks Golden Gate and Chatenay in their second year. It usually manifests itself by showing a dead twig, which commonly commences to die at the top and continues to die toward the base of the branch. At the same time the plant continues to put forth new and vigorous growths, which are attacked in turn and succumb.

This is a disease which is hard to eradicate, and as the plants affected must have lost some vitality, it would be risky to propagate from them.

Every affected plant should be thrown out and all decaying matter removed. Spray once a week with the copper solution, using a very fine spray, so that every part of the leaves and stems may receive its quota. The solution consists of the following: Copper carbonate, one ounce; ammonia enough to dissolve the copper; water, twelve gallons.

This trouble usually shows up in February or March, and as the days get warmer the plants least affected will outgrow it. Cleanliness and plenty of ventilation are favorable factors in its extermination. Ribes.

BLASTED ROSE PLANTS.

What is the matter with my Beauties, Brides and Maids? My Beauties grow nicely until almost ready to form the bud; then they blast and start growing anew from where they are blasted. This condition has lasted about a month and is steadily becoming worse. The sepals of the Brides and Maids grow to such length (being, in fact, almost developed leaves), and are twisted about the petals so tightly, that they force the bud through the side having the least resistance. The enclosed bud will perhaps provide you with a clearer idea of my trouble than the explanation I write you. W. R.

From the appearance of the bud enclosed, there is evidently some trouble at the roots. This blasting of the growth, with the subsequent growth from below, is one of the indications of the trouble called rose anthracnose, a serious affair in a rose house.

Throw out all affected plants, dead branches, leaves, etc. Stir up the surface. Give plenty of ventilation, with a night temperature of 56 degrees and a day temperature of 60 to 80 degrees, and no feeding. As the days lengthen, those plants not already affected may outgrow the trouble. Ribes.

POMPONS AND SINGLES.

A correspondent has written me asking cultural notes on how to grow pompons and singles with the idea of producing fine sprays of flowers, market sprays, as he terms it.

They can be propagated at any time now, as the cuttings are in shape to take off the plants, and propagation can continue till the middle of June. The earlier rooted stock can be topped for cuttings or kept pinched back till the middle or end of June, when the plants can be set out on the benches, single stem plants about 6x6 to 6x8, and larger plants that may carry a dozen shoots more room proportionately.

As the plants grow, the shoots should be kept tied to wires or whatever support is used until after the bud (which in the large flowered types would be called the crown bud) appears. Around this bud or break, for it is really the natural break of the plant, many shoots begin to appear, and these are allowed to spread out and produce as many buds as they will. A little judicious thinning of the buds where the clusters are too numerous is time well spent, but much thinning is a waste of time and destroys the natural beauty of the sprays.

There is as much difference between well grown singles and pompons as there is between exhibition flowers of the large-flowered kinds and the rubbish that passes in so many markets as the commercial grade. The artistic decorator grows enthusiastic when he sees beautiful sprays of the light and graceful singles, and many fine dinner tables were graced with nothing else last fall in New York.

Some growers say there is no money in pompons or singles. The trite but true remark that there is room at the top applies here as well as anywhere. Do not think that because the flowers are small the plants do not need feeding with liquid fertilizers like the large fellows. They do need it and show by the better foliage and more brilliant coloring of the flowers when they have been well treated. One thing I have noticed in the singles is that they should be cut just about as soon as the last flowers are opening in order to keep well, and let the stems stay in water twenty-four hours before shipping any distance.

As pot plants the singles sell on sight. Put in a batch of cuttings May 15, pot them along as needed after being taken from the sand, and flower them in 6-inch pots. Do not pinch these plants in any shape or form. Simply put a stake in the pot and tie up the main shoot; the plants will assume a beautiful bush form and when in flower sell on sight, and your customer will be so pleased that he will come back. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

Ferns

ADIANTUM CUNEATUM.

As the fronds are closely cut from Adiantum cuneatum, the plants are benefited by a few weeks of rest in a rather cooler house, where they can be kept tolerably dry at the root. In repotting we find a good compost to be fibrous loam two parts, leaf-mold one part, with a smaller quantity of dry and well broken up cow manure and a good dash of sharp sand. Some growers do not use any of the leaf-mold and, in the case of large plants, the cow manure can replace it, but young plants seem to relish the leaf-mold. Where plants have become of rather unwieldy size, they can be pulled or cut apart. They do not grow so satisfactorily as younger plants potted along, but will soon become established in a warm, moist house. Care should be taken, however, not to keep them too moist at the root.

Small ferns are offered by specialists at such cheap rates that it scarcely pays for the small retailer to bother raising any from spores. This method of propagation is much the best for such varieties as A. cuneatum, gracillimum, decorum, concinnum, pubescens and formosum. Sow the spores in pans containing an equal mixture of loam and peat or leaf-mold, with a good mixture of fine sand. It is better to sterilize the compost to prevent weeds, seeds and scum appearing on the surface. Make the surface soil smooth, and water before scattering the spores. Place in a glass case where the sun's rays are excluded, in a moist house kept at 60 to 65 degrees at night. As soon as the little plants can be handled, prick out in patches in other pans or flats. Later, when they attain more size, they can be potted off singly.

GROWING FERNS FROM SPORES.

Kindly give me all the information you can in regard to growing small ferns for filling fern dishes—when to sow the seed to have a crop for Christmas, the kind of soil, the temperature, and how long it takes to grow a crop from the time you sow the seed until the plants are salable. Please tell me, also, how to germinate the seed or spores to good advantage. G. J. L.

For the germination of fern spores a shaded greenhouse, in which a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees may be kept at night, is one of the first requisites. Or, for a small quantity of spores, a frame may be built on a bench in the greenhouse, and covered with a sash, in order to give control of the atmospheric conditions. Some clean 6-inch pots or pans are then prepared for the spores, by being two-thirds filled with cinders or broken pots for drainage. Then fill up the pots to within about half an inch of the top with some fine, light soil. Press down the soil firmly and smoothly, and then give the pots a good watering with a fine rose can, or dip them in a pail of water.

After the pots have drained off well, say in the course of an hour or two, the spores should be sown thinly on the surface of the soil, without any covering of soil. Place the pots in the frame and cover them with panes of glass. Then keep the frame rather close for the first two weeks or so, only giving air enough to dry off the condensed moisture each day.

The time of germination varies somewhat with different species, but some signs of germination usually show in from two to four weeks in the case of the ordinary commercial species.

After the seedlings have reached a certain size they are transplanted to other pans or flats, in which they remain until large enough to pot off.

The time required to grow a crop of suitable sized plants for filling ferneries depends upon the species grown, but in most cases about a year is required. The members of the pteris family are among the most rapid growers.

If the seed pots have been well watered before the spores are sown, they should not need any more watering until after the spores have germinated, but in case they should get dry from being too freely ventilated, the best way to water them is by soaking the lower part of the pot in a pail of water. Do not water overhead at any time before the seedlings are large enough to transplant. W. H. T.

STOCKS FOR SEED.

Will you please tell me if seed saved from single stocks produce double flowers, as the double flowers do not have seed? M. H.

Double-flowered stocks produce no seed. In Germany, where the bulk of the stock seed is grown, the doubles and singles are allowed to flower together. After the former have been flowering some time, they are cut out and every attention given to the remaining single plants. The plants when pulled up are hung in dry sheds and the seed carefully sorted. Experts can tell by the shape and size of the seed pods those which will produce a high percentage of doubles, and vice versa. All seeds are removed by hand. Pods containing nothing but poor seeds, viz., those that will produce single flowers, are discarded. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Ventilation.

We are reaching a period in which the sun's rays are becoming increasingly powerful, necessitating some shutting off of fire heat and increased watchfulness in watering and ventilating. Too many growers fail to realize how essential to the well-being of plants is a house where violent fluctuations in temperature are unknown. A house will be left shut up tight until it has become insufferably hot; then heat will be shut off and a lot of air rushed on; perhaps in an hour or two dark clouds will cover the horizon and this same house will, if not carefully tended, quickly have a barnlike atmosphere. The grower comes along and finds it chilly and turns on heat, closing the ventilators, and departs. No one can grow good plants under these conditions.

For the next two months some fire heat will be a necessity in the majority of houses, and it is a mistake to close it all off. Even on quite a warm day leave a little on, for it gives a geniality necessary to ward off mildew attacks. Ventilate a little at a time and reduce the ventilation in the same way. All plants require air in greater or less quantities and the grower, to achieve the greatest success, contrives to give it in such a way that the atmosphere always feels genial and balmy. There should never be a chilly feeling running down the spine on entering a house, or the ventilating is at fault.

Shading.

It is rather early to commence shading, but it becomes necessary by the early part of March in the case of palms, adiantums and some of the so-called stove plants. Lay it on thinly, just enough to break the direct force of the sun's rays. A mixture of naphtha or kerosene and white lead makes a satisfactory shading, which holds well and is easily removed.

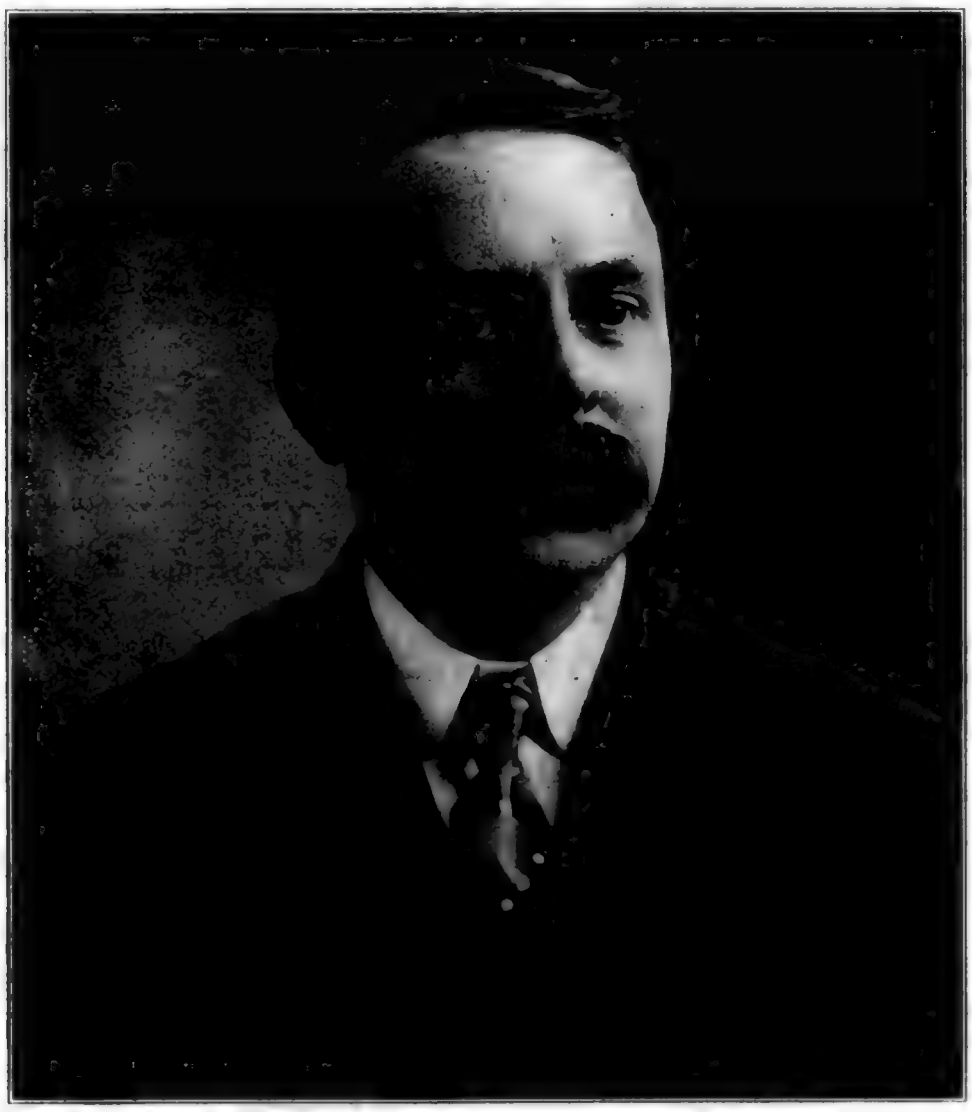
Nephrolepis should have no shade for some time. They always succeed better in much stronger light than the majority of ferns. In the case of seedlings, recently potted cuttings and propagating benches, cheese-cloth is much to be preferred to shading the glass for some time yet. If you grow a good many flowering plants and have a special house to stand them in, the roof, of course, is better shaded. This insures a cooler atmosphere, which plants in flower require to hold them in good condition. In the case of houses or frames of violets, which it is desired to retard as much as possible, shading is to be recommended, but do not use any on your carnations yet. If a green shading is liked, add some chrome-green to the white lead and kerosene until you get the desired tint.



Lily of the Valley.

While the growing of valley is largely in the hands of a few specialists, there are quite a number of small growers who like to get a batch along for special occasions, such as Christmas or Easter. The big growers have an advantage over the small ones, in that they can devote special houses to valley, where bottom heat and atmospheric conditions are ideal. Where, however, a few hundreds or thousands only are grown, more modest contrivances are necessary. It is usually possible to build a propagating case directly over hot water or steam pipes. The pips can be planted directly into a bed of sand and kept dark until the flower spikes are nearly ready for opening, when more light is gradually admitted to make the spikes more stocky and give the leaves a chance to develop.

Another and simple plan is to place a few 6-inch pots at a time on a board covered with moss under the bench, directly on the hot water pipes, covering them with a box, or, better still, stand the box on the pipes, fill with the pots and pack between them and cover them with moss. This plan answers well where a small quantity only is wanted. If a supply of 6-inch pots for Easter is desired, with ample foliage, the best plan is to start on the bench of a house kept about 60 degrees at night, moving to cooler quarters as the flowers expand. These pots should be started at once, as it will take about six weeks to flower them. If forced in the dark, three to four weeks only is necessary.

Flowering Shrubs for Easter.

At Easter there is always a good demand for well-flowered plants of Azalea mollis, lilacs, hawthorns, Prunus triloba, pyrus in variety, Deutzia gracilis and Lemoinei, Staphylea Colchica and Philadelphus Lemoinei. The majority of these plants require about six weeks' time from starting to flowering in a temperature of 60 degrees; when the flowers are opening, give cooler quarters. Of course the azaleas, prunus and lilacs can be had by hard forcing within a month, but such plants are never satisfactory. They can be quickly picked out in the store windows, from their wilting appearance, and will never please customers. Start your plants sufficiently early so that you can allow the plants to open in a temperature of 50 degrees, rather than 65 degrees, and they will do you far more credit. All these shrubs like a moist heat and spraying overhead several times daily until they are well started.

Dutch Bulbous Plants.

Many inquiries are coming to hand, the substance of which is: "How soon shall I start my hyacinths and tulips for Easter?" None of this class of stock ever requires much forcing unless Easter comes abnormally early. All these bulbs should be kept as cool as possible, in cellars or frames until the middle of March. If placed in any ordinary greenhouse then, they will be along in ample season. Sometimes we get a burst of heat in early April which sends bulbs along with a rush; in other years it is very cold. It is, therefore, somewhat difficult to give an exact time when to house bulbous stock, but as a rule three weeks in a temperature of 50 degrees will be found ample for any of the hyacinths, tulips and narcissi, and even then it may be found necessary to hold them for a few days in a cold cellar. The double tulips, such as Couronne d'Or and Murillo, take a day or two longer to open than the singles.

Easter Lilies.

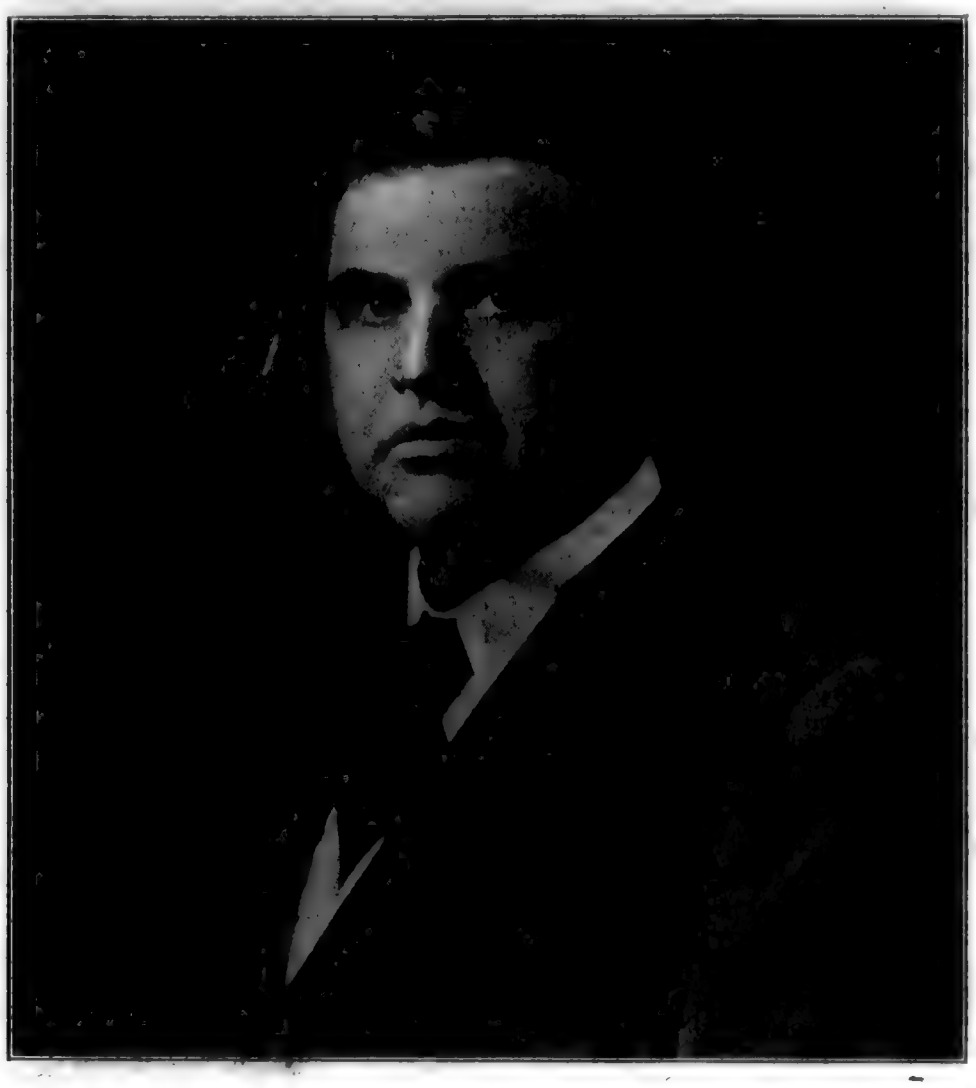
Lent is now here and if you can see the buds peeping in the tops of your lily shoots, you are all right. If you cannot, your plants must be hurried or they will be too late. A temperature of 55 to 60 degrees will bring out the buds now peeping in season for Easter. It is always better to have your plants a little early, rather than the reverse, as when in bloom they can be easily held for a few days in a cool house.

In the case of backward plants, which you are anxious to get in, if at all possible, give them as warm a house as you have; 70 to 75 degrees at night is not too high. Spray over freely. Keep well watered and see that aphis is not allowed any quarter.

Candidum lilies will be all right if the buds show so that you can count them by March 15. These should never be subjected to any hard forcing.

Propagation.

Keep the propagating benches filled with cuttings. Cuttings root much better now than they will a month hence. There is now an excellent and fairly steady bottom heat at command, and the percentage of loss, with careful watering, should be small. Be sure not to make the all too common mistake of allowing cuttings to remain in the sand until quite hard. These never make satisfactory plants when potted. If the roots are an inch long, the cuttings are better in pots or flats right away. The longer the roots become, the more they will be broken when lifted.



ILLINOIS' MODEL PLANT.

State Builds Commercial Range.

The greenhouses built by the State of Illinois at the Agricultural College, for conducting experimental work in floriculture under commercial conditions, have been spoken of as a model commercial plant. For that reason the description of them given at Springfield last week by Prof. H. B. Dorner will be of special interest. Prof. Dorner said:

"The two houses already erected were designed to avoid shading as much as possible and so are of the lightest construction possible, commensurate with strength. Each house is 28x105 feet, thus making it possible to have four 100-foot benches, each four feet wide.

"All parts above the gutters are of clear cypress, with sashbars of the type ordinarily used in greenhouse construction. The gutters are of the King pattern, made of channel iron supported on posts of 2-inch iron pipe. Each post acts as a down spout and empties into a vitrified tile drain, laid along the inside of the wall.

C. E. Gullett.
(President Illinois State Florists' Association.)

"Below the gutters, in the side walls, is twenty-four inches of glass.

"Ventilation is secured by two lines of interrupted sash, operated by Foley ventilating machines.

"The walls below the side lights are composed of concrete, but constructed differently than those usually built. The iron pipes supporting the gutters are set into concrete piers 12x18 inches and extend well into the soil, to secure a firm foundation. The walls themselves are formed of large concrete slabs, which are five inches thick, reinforced with ⅜-inch iron rods, and fit in between the posts. Their ends rest on the concrete piers and are held in place by concrete pilasters eight inches square, built about the posts. The sill was anchored to this wall and the side rafters put into place.

"The benches are each 4x100 feet and five inches deep, and are built of pecky cypress supported on 1-inch iron pipes.

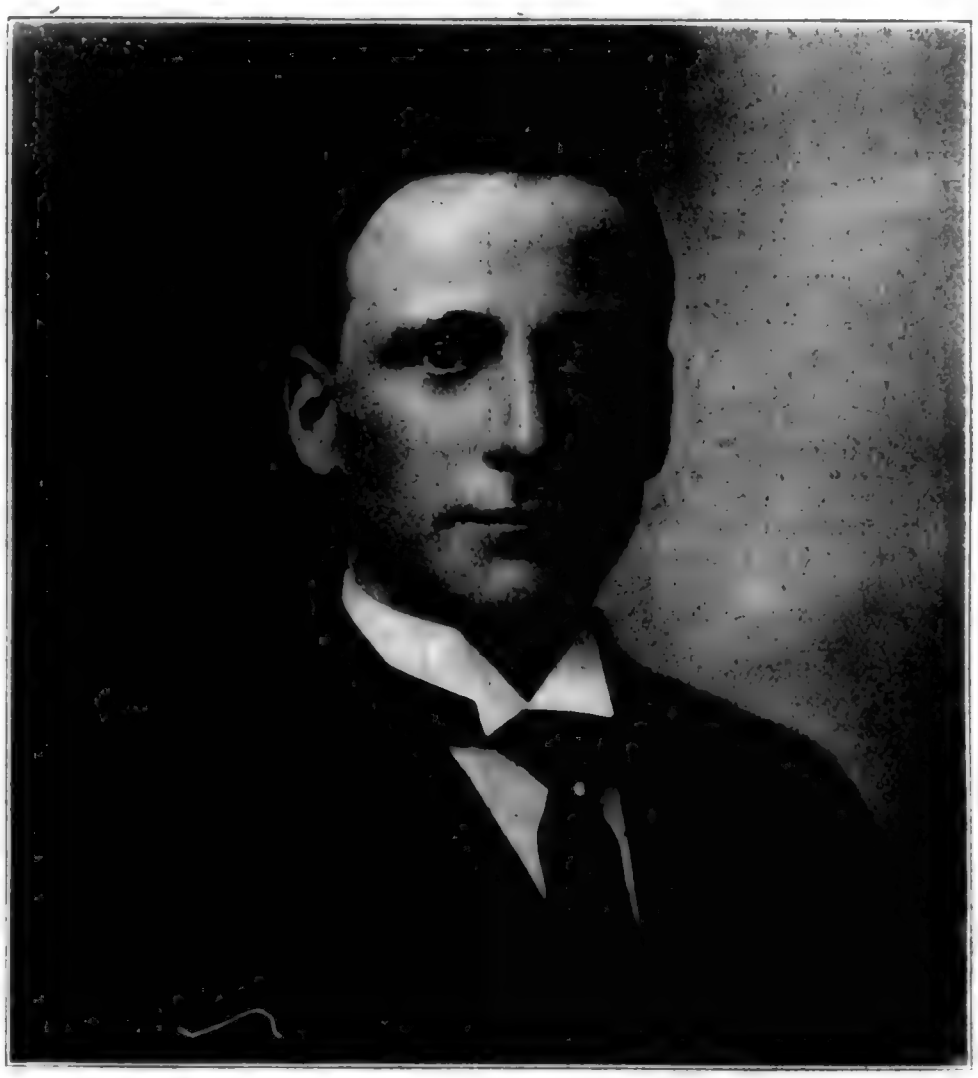
"The walks between the benches are twenty-eight inches wide and those between the benches and walls are twenty-two inches wide. All walks are of cement.

Service Building.

"The service building is a structure 26x100 feet, constructed of wood, with plaster finish on the outside. It is situated on the north side of the greenhouses, with its longer axis parallel to the longer axis of the greenhouses. A space sixteen feet wide was left between the service building and the greenhouses.

"One-half of this building is large enough to accommodate three sixty horse-power boilers. The concrete floor of this room is about two feet below the floor level of the greenhouses.

"The other half of the building is devoted to a large workroom, about twenty-five feet square, a hallway, an office 13x20 feet, a small laboratory, a small room and a lavatory. The workroom contains a reinforced concrete floor, making it possible to scrub it out whenever necessary.



"Beneath this part of the building is a cellar, divided into three rooms. Through the largest of these extend all the steam, water and sewer pipes. This makes an excellent room for storage. The other two rooms, which take up the other half of the cellar space, are used as cut flower and cool storage rooms.

Heating Plant.

"The heating plant is somewhat different from that used in most places. At the present time power is secured from a sixty horse-power tubular boiler, the setting of which was designed to reduce the amount of smoke as much as possible. Draught is secured by a 70-foot brick stack, designed to carry 180 horse-power if necessary.

"The heating system was constructed to be run either as a high or low pressure system. From the top of the boiler a 6-inch feed main drops down into the cellar to the pressure regulator and its accompanying by-pass. From here the main continues and passes under the cross house. At this place branches of 1½-inch pipe come off and, passing through 6-inch tile, emerge in the greenhouses under the benches and by the side walls.

"Under the benches the 1½-inch pipe divides into two 1¼-inch pipes, one extending down each side of the bench. These pass down to the other end, cross over, and come back on the opposite side. There are also two wall coils, one of which passes around the end to the door. This, then, gives four lines of pipe under each bench and four on each wall, or twenty-four pipes in all. Overhead pipes have been omitted altogether.

George B. Franks.
(Vice-president Illinois State Florists' Association.)

"Each flow and return is fitted with a regulating valve at the corridor end of the house, and each return, before it passes into the main return, is fitted with a check valve.

"The water is returned to the boiler by means of double Morehead traps, one situated in the cellar and the other over the boiler.

"The greenhouses, as well as the service building, are furnished with water and electric light from the University plants."

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Keeping Qualities.

The divine flower's popularity being due in a great measure to its good keeping qualities, it is directly in the grower's interest to carry out in full every detail which will in any way assist in preserving these qualities.

Every grower should instruct himself in botany sufficiently to be able to dissect and define the different parts of a carnation bloom; otherwise he may be unable to locate the cause of sleepiness, should such a complaint be made regarding his product.

The difference in time between the stigma's being in a receptive condition and the pollen's becoming ripe would seem to indicate in the carnation an inherent tendency averse to close fertilization, which is a desirable characteristic, but if the blooms are held on the plants too long, as a great many are, pollination may occur by transfer of pollen from one flower to another in the handling incident to cutting and bunching. Even if there were no other reason, the fact that pollen "takes" best during bright, warm periods, should be sufficient guide for us to choose the early morning or late afternoon as proper times to cut bloom, but another reason is that there is less liability of flagging in the plants at these times.

Cutting and Handling.

Under no circumstances should bloom be taken from plants suffering for water, and while good results may be had by breaking or snapping the stems, this is no reason why a better method should not be employed. By making an upward, slanting cut through the stem with a sharp knife, a chisel-pointed stem end is produced, which presents a larger and better surface for passage of water.

The practice of allowing the stems to remain out of water any length of time after being cut is very injurious. Every effort should be made to place in vases of water at once.

In handling considerable quantities, the placing of vessels containing water at various points about the house will be effort well spent, for not only can the cut be gotten quickly into water, but with a little foresight the different grades can be gathered separately and kept apart, thus saving much handling in sorting.

It is not claimed that any method of handling will remedy the defects in bloom taken from overfed, diseased or wilted plants, but, on the other hand, well grown stock can easily be lowered in value by careless methods in placing before the public.

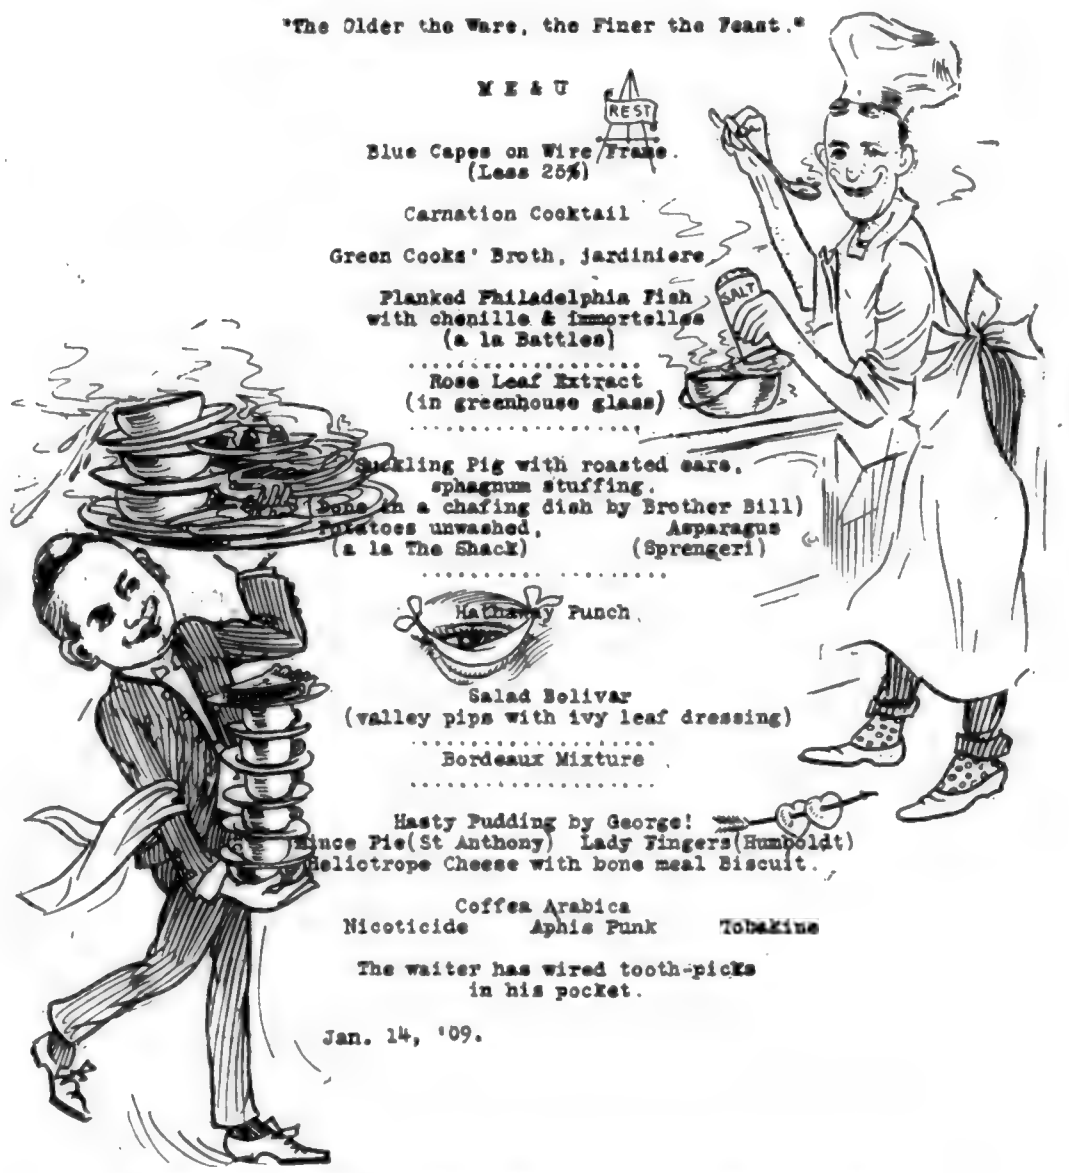
Growers who supply retail dealers or sell through commission houses may reason that their interest in lasting qualities ceases when the amount realized from the sale is placed to their credit, but this is not so.

Many of these gentlemen seem possessed of little knowledge of the fine points and it is the growers' duty to give advice concerning the requirements of the finished product.

Geo. S. Osborn.

FAIRY RING AND THRIPS.

Can you tell me what is the matter with the enclosed Enchantress blooms? The plants seem healthy, but many of the blooms come like these, with the outer petals brown, and some fail to open. They are in a light, even-span house, which runs a little hot—sometimes 55 degrees. We have fed with wood ashes and with liquid cow and sheep manure—one application of each. We smoke once a week with tobacco stems. Could smoking cause this? D. R.



One of the buds forwarded was affected with fairy ring. This disease spreads rapidly, and unless you get busy at once it will spread all over your place and do great damage. Get some Bordeaux and spray the plants thoroughly, at least once each week. Paint one of the steam pipes with sulphur and lime, mixed with water enough to make a thick paint. Renew this once each week. Avoid all syringing for a time, except when you wash the Bordeaux off before applying a new dose. Apply this on bright days. Keep the atmosphere dry and bracing at all times. Ventilate freely.

The other bud was badly thrips-specked, and this, too, should command your immediate attention. Nicotine in some form is the thing for them. Use the extracts to spray with, and supplement the spraying by fumigating with the nicotine paper. Now, while the weather is cool, is the time to rid your place of them. Later, when the weather is warm, you will have a hard time keeping them down. A. F. J. B.

CUTTINGS FAIL TO ROOT.

Please state what effect fumigation with tobacco stems has on carnation cuttings. We smoke our carnation houses regularly every week with stems; also the propagating house, with heavy smoke. Is this harmful to cuttings? We find our cuttings do not root properly under these conditions. A Subscriber.

Whether the tobacco smoke is responsible for your failure in rooting carnation cuttings, I am not prepared to say. If all other conditions were favorable, I doubt whether the fumigating alone would prevent the cuttings from rooting. Some years ago, before we substituted spraying for fumigating, we rooted carnation cuttings just about as successfully as we do now. One thing I do believe, however, and that is that when a very dense smoke is produced it is apt to be warm when it strikes the cuttings, if they are on a side bench. This will wilt the cuttings enough to prevent proper rooting, and your trouble may result in this way.

Menu for Dinner Prepared and Served by Denver Florists.

Why not discard the smoking method altogether, and employ the more up-to-date method of spraying or vaporizing, or even fumigating with tobacco dust? You will wonder, after you have given it a trial, why you did not change long ago. A. F. J. B.

A DENVER DINNER.

In the pressure of business at Christmas, at Easter and upon other special occasions, the problem of meals for the workers is one which has vexed many a retailer. As a result, in quite a number of leading stores arrangements have been made for feeding the entire force on the place during the days of heavy business. Just in rear of the store and conservatory of the Park Floral Co., Denver, stands a cottage which was acquired with the real estate, and which has been turned into an office building, but in which kitchen and dining-room have been left equipped for their original purposes. During the Easter rush the entire force will be fed by the company for several days (and nights), the employees receiving a much better meal than they could get outside, and getting it in half the time. At other times the employees are at liberty to use the facilities for any little social suppers gotten up among themselves, and Mr. Valentine encourages these affairs as tending to smooth out any little wrinkles in the organization and to foster united effort for the general good of the business.

Just before the Christmas holidays two of the junior members of the concern offered the president to wager a dinner for the force, to be paid in the cottage dining-room, that the volume of Christmas sales would exceed a certain figure—they lost, by only a couple of dollars, and Mr. Valentine offered to foot the bill providing the young men would prepare and serve the dinner themselves. Being game, they took him up and started elaborate preparations for the feast, which took place January 14. The accompanying menu card was prepared merely to commemorate the event and not with any intention of showing what the boys gave their guests to eat and drink.

OBITUARY.

Charles Bramley, Sr.

With plans complete for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding, Charles Bramley, Sr., one of the oldest business men of Cleveland, O., died at his home in that city on Wednesday, February 17. His wife, who had been at his side through the fifty years of active business life in Cleveland, survives, with nine children. Three children are dead.

The golden wedding was to have been celebrated Monday, February 22. All preparations had been made. Invitations had been sent to many relatives and friends, about 500 in all, and Mr. Bramley had taken a great interest in all the preparations. The supper was to have been original and unique in this respect, that it was to be served in a greenhouse. Tables were to be arranged in the center and on the sides of the greenhouse, which is about 140 feet long. Domes for electric lights had been prepared, to be hung every six feet. The domes were to be trimmed in yellow. The entire greenhouse range of Bramley & Son was wired and equipped for electric lighting, all in preparation for the wedding anniversary.

Mr. Bramley was an early settler in Cleveland, having lived at 1181 East Seventy-first street since 1855. He was a gardener until 1894, when he and his son, William A., started in the florists' business, under the name of Charles Bramley & Son. They began with two 50-foot houses and gradually increased the amount of glass until at the time of Mr. Bramley's retirement they had one of the largest retail florists' establishments in the city of Cleveland. His honest, upright and progressive way of conducting business brought him many friends, and his acquaintances and brother florists all speak highly of him.

In May, 1908, he had a stroke of apoplexy and had not been in as good health since, although he was not confined to bed until two days before he died. He retired from the firm of Charles Bramley & Son in August, 1908, his interest having been purchased by the son, William, who has conducted the business since then, under the name of Bramley & Son.

The funeral services were held at his residence, on Saturday, February 20, and his remains were placed in a vault at Lakeview cemetery. Many letters and other expressions of condolence were received by the wife and children. The flowers were numerous and beautiful, and were highly appreciated by the members of the family, who wish to thank all for their tokens of sympathy. They wish especially to thank the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., the Cleveland Florists' Club, the J. M. Gasser Co., the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, J. W. Wilson and J. Kirchner.

Patrick J. Melia.

Patrick J. Melia, of Newton Highlands, Mass., died February 13 of typhoid pneumonia, after two weeks' illness. He came to this country thirty years ago from Ireland, and was with A. H. Fewkes for a good many years. At the time of his death he was employed by Mrs. Ellen A. Mansfield. He was 53 years old. A widow and eight children survive.

Harvey L. Spencer.

Harvey L. Spencer, of Phœnix, R. I., died at his home February 24, after a brief illness. He was born in Bristol, R. I., in 1828, but had lived in the vicinity of Phœnix since he was about 9 years old.

William Findlay.

William Findlay, one of the old-time gardeners, florists and fruit growers of Newport, died February 12, after a long illness. He was born in Largo, Fifeshire, Scotland, in 1831. He came to this country in 1854 and settled at Newport, where he spent the remainder of his days. After a few years Mr. Findlay leased the greenhouses at the estate of the late Gov. Lawrence and engaged in fruit growing, and in 1873 he built a range of houses. About this time the growing of roses under glass was just being considered and Mr. Findlay devoted considerable time and study to this subject. It is said that he was the first to grow the Jacq. rose this way, using boxes about fifteen inches square, one foot deep and one plant to a box. No relatives in this country are known to have survived him.

The Weekly Florists' Review

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Reports as to last week's business in the principal cities are almost uniformly excellent.

Lent, which began Wednesday, is no longer the important deterrent factor it once was in the flower business.

The pure food law has occasioned the changing the name of Whale Oil soap to Fish Oil soap.

After May 1 the Wells Fargo & Co. express will operate on all lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad.

GOT TOO MANY ORDERS.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time:

We are sorry we ordered our geranium adv. to appear two weeks in the Review, as the orders came in such numbers Monday and Tuesday that the several thousand we had to sell were sold, but too late to stop the adv. from appearing again. If they keep up ordering as they have done it will consume much time in returning checks.

PORT ALLEGANY GREENHOUSES.
Port Allegany, Pa., Feb. 18, 1909.

ECONOMICAL CONCRETE WALL.

In the Review of January 21 I noticed an article on the use of cinders in making a concrete wall. I have experimented a good deal with concrete made from cinders and cement, and find that it does not give good satisfaction, and in the long run is more expensive than when made of gravel and cement, as the gravel concrete can be made up into a wall much lighter than the cinder concrete and still be equally strong.

The economical florist, in constructing a concrete wall, should try to save his cement without sacrificing strength, as the cement is the most expensive part of his wall.

I have found that a very economical wall can be constructed of concrete and old bricks. My method is to mix the gravel and cement in proportions of six to one. Then one side of the frame is built complete. The other side is brought up one board at a time. A layer of concrete is thrown into the frame and then a layer of bricks is placed on the concrete. The bricks are followed by another layer of concrete, which is firmly tamped on to the bricks, and so on until the wall is complete. The layers of brick have about one inch of concrete between them, and the bricks are placed about one inch apart in the layer. The concrete is mixed soft, so that it readily fills all cracks between the bricks. Care must be taken to keep the edges of the bricks from touching the sides of the frame, so that the concrete will fill in on both sides. Thus, when the frame is taken away, the wall has all the appearance of a solid concrete wall, and I believe is just about as strong.

I have a boiler pit, 16x75x12 feet deep, the walls of which are constructed in the described manner and are only six inches thick. The walls are only about fifty per cent concrete. The bricks used were old bats and culls, which can be procured by any florist for just hauling them away.

V. Kangley.

FROM AN ENGLISH GROWER.

The early mums here get more popular each year, as do all sections of the chrysanthemums, in spite of a class of our writers to the gardening press telling the country they are on the decline.

It will no doubt interest readers of the Review to know that we have arranged with C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., to give him sole control in America of the Wells-Pockett novelties in future. This will bring the American growers as up-to-date with the new Australian varieties as we are here, and will insure only those that do well in the United States being sent out to commerce.

We have had good results each time we have advertised in the Review, and even now we are getting replies from the one in the issue of November 14 last.

Merstham, England. W. Wells.

The Great Central Market.

There were no special events last week to stimulate demand, but it nevertheless was one of the best weeks this market has seen in a long time. Almost all lines of stock were in fair supply, but the demand was sufficient to clean out nearly everything at satisfactory prices. Beauties were scarce, but the rose supply increased considerably. Carnations were abundant and brought excellent figures, considering the large supply. Violets did first rate, but bulbous stock in nearly all lines was sold at low prices.

The current week opened with a holiday and one which did little for the trade, but business continues good. Prices are just a little bit weaker than they have been, for supplies have been somewhat increased as a result of two bright, springlike days at the beginning of the week. Beauties, however, continue scarce and this is possibly the one item on which the market cannot fill all orders. Not only are the Beauties scarce, but the quality is nothing to brag about. There is fine, long stock of Richmond and Killarney that is bringing first-class prices, possibly some of the extra value being given by the scarcity of Beauties. For several weeks short roses have been particularly good property, Bride especially so. The increased production of short stock has made it a little less brisk sale

We Have These in Quantity and They are Making a Hit

For some years we have had the largest supply and finest indoor Sweet Peas to be found in the west—but this year we have more of them and they are better than ever. We never saw such good Sweet Peas in February. Can supply splendid long-stemmed white, pink and lavender, by the thousands. Try some; they make a hit wherever used. We do a big shipping business in these.

To be sure you get them in best condition, we pick specially each afternoon the stock to fill all shipping orders on file at 12 o'clock.

Carnations

Remember, it isn't what you pay, but what you get, that determines value. The best is the kind that it pays to handle—and that's the kind of Carnations you get of us. Our supply is large, and the quality such that a comparison will bring your business our way.

Violets

Now is the time of year it pays best to push Violets—good quality and large supplies assured. We handle the cream of the stock, both New York Doubles and Home-grown Singles. Write or wire for prices on special large quantities.

Roses

The Rose crops are coming on again and we can take good care of all orders for Killarney, Maid, Bride or Richmond. Excellent stock in all grades. Beauties continue scarce—order early.

Bulb Stock

Tulips in all colors—long-stemmed, fancy stock. Fine Golden Spur and Daffodils. This is the stock that makes the biggest show for the money at the present time. Plenty of Easter Lilies and Callas. Fancy Valley ALWAYS on hand.

Green Goods

We have a large supply of Smilax, fine, long, heavy strings. Can furnish Asparagus Sprays in bunches. Also, the best Hardy cut Ferns in this market. All other Greens of highest quality.

than heretofore. The growers generally predict that bright weather will shortly bring in an enormous crop of roses, but the good weather is lasting only for a day or two at a time and the rose growers are enjoying every day that conditions hold in their favor.

Carnations are in heavy supply and have done extremely well for some little time. There is considerable difference in quality, but the good stock is so abundant that it is possible to do a large shipping business and a thoroughly satisfactory one.

Single violets are blooming freely under the influence of a few days of good weather, and eastern stock also is coming in heavier. Last week violets moved freely, if at slightly lower average prices, but this week there are indications that the supply will soon be such that values will be materially affected. Both the Rhinebeck stock and the locally grown singles are of excellent quality, so that the better grade of stores are using them in large quantities.

There are increased receipts of bulbous stock. Tulips are more plentiful than at any time this season and prices are ruling low. Daffodils also are coming in heavily and are slower sale than jonquils, which are not so abundant. The quantity of bulb stock forced for this market this year is less than in previous seasons, but the price does not appear to be in any way improved by the lessened supply. The growers are said to be dismissing the bulb salesmen more curtly, even, than last year, as a result of the present condition of the market for bulbous flowers. Even callas are down; the buyer who can use a quantity gets them for 10 cents, or less if the stock is not in every way first-class.

There is no special feature in the green goods market. The wholesalers are beginning to wonder where they are coming out on ferns. Large quantities are in storage and in many lots the waste has become considerable, but the price does not advance.

Ernest Oechslin Shot.

Ernest Oechslin, whose greenhouses are at River Forest, just opposite Concordia cemetery, was shot by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of his nephew Sunday morning, February 21, the ball from a 22-caliber rifle entering Mr. Oechslin's right side, passing through the lung and lodging in the spinal column. The injured man was taken at once to the Oak Park hospital, where his condition was reported excellent February 24, although the bullet had not been removed.

Mr. Oechslin is a brother of Frank Oechslin. On coming to Chicago both brothers were employed by J. F. Kidwell & Bro. Later they were in business together as the Garfield Park Flower Co. After dissolving partnership, Ernest built at River Forest, where he quickly established a prosperous cemetery and wholesale trade, and Frank built on West Adams street.

Trade-marking the Violets.

The Glencoe violets are now trade-marked and the best flower buyers among the public have been notified by mail to look for the trade-mark as insuring them fresh picked double violets.

The Glencoe violets are grown by Mrs. Otis M. Howard and Miss Nina Howard and are handled by E. H. Hunt. The growers decline to sell direct to the trade, believing the commission man fully earns his fee. Marie Louise is grown and the flowers reach the trade within fifteen hours from picking. The trade-mark is printed indelibly on ribbon and attached to each bunch. W. E. Lynch, of Hunt's, says the Glencoe violets always sell at a better price than the Rhinebeck stock, but he can't see that there is any wider margin since the local stock was trade-marked, though it may come.

The retailers who use Glencoe violets regularly are given neat cards for window display and it is said they leave the trade-mark ribbons in the bunches when making up corsage bouquets, etc. Of course none of the retailers handles Glencoe violets exclusively, so it is just a little bit early to say how much benefit the Glencoe growers will get from their efforts to educate the public to the superior freshness and fragrance of their output; the result appears to lie in the hands of the retailers.

plants. A carload of Holland roses and other stock was received this week and a second car is on the way.

Hoerber Bros., the new firm at Des Plaines, will plant only four varieties of roses, Killarney, Maid, Bride and Richmond, not counting a few White Killarney.

Jensen & Dekema say it is no unusual thing to receive orders from Europe for carnation cuttings, but during the last week an order came from South Africa, their first from the dark continent.

Harry Lubliner's wedding is announced to take place March 16.

Kruchten & Co. report the sale last week of 300,000 fancy cut ferns to a local retailer, who will place them in storage for spring use.

Adolph Benesh, of the E. F. Winterson Co., was married on Washington's birthday. There was a celebration at 486 West Eighteenth street that evening.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is now cutting fancy tulips in considerable quantity. They are reported to sell well so long as the price is kept low, but the buyers refuse to pay old-time prices for even the best tulips. Daffodils go slowly.

The Atlas Floral Co. is preparing to remove May 1 from 37 Randolph street to 35 Randolph, the next door east.

E. B. Washburn has been at Madison, Wis., for a few days, participating in the social festivities at the university.

John Zech spent Tuesday of this week judging the primary election.

E. C. Amling says the sweet pea crops are on for the season and that one of his Maywood growers is advertising for girls to help pick the crop. Mr. Amling had 20,000 sweet peas February 22 and figures the supply will increase considerably before it strikes the gait which it will keep up for several weeks.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says Klehm's Novelty tulip is selling first-rate again this year. Daffodils, he says, have been the slowest sale of any stock.

Wm. Weil reports a steadily increasing business at Sixty-third and Harvard. He removed to this location some two years ago, but it has been since the Englewood branch of the elevated road was opened that his trade has grown fastest.

Vaughan & Sperry speak of February 20 as possibly the best Saturday of the season.

Peter Reinberg has had a splendid business in the last four or five weeks, having a fine crop of roses at the time they were most in demand. He also is having better results with carnations than for several years.

Percy Jones says all flowers enjoyed a good market last week, except bulb stock.

The George Wittbold Co. says funeral work is running heavy and Schiller, on the west side, makes the same report.

One of last week's visitors was W. H. Siebrecht, of Siebrecht & Sons, New Rochelle and New York city.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., is on the road this week, calling on a few of the people he thinks need Easter supplies.

O. J. Friedman states that he has just closed a lease on the store at 6 Jackson boulevard, to which he will remove May 1. The room is just east of the main entrance to the Stratford hotel and has an entrance from the lobby. It is almost directly across the street from Fleischman's.

C. E Shafer, of La Crosse, Wis., is in town this week, getting figures on the new houses to be built this season by the La Crosse Floral Co.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Frank Burfitt, of Chicopee Falls, Mass., has a valuable collection of economic plants, in addition to a full line of flowering stock. A fine specimen of citrus is in full fruit.

Joseph Beach, of South Hadley Falls, Mass., is planning a new house for propagating purposes. He has just completed a handsome dwelling.

G. H. Sinclair, of Holyoke, Mass., notes a steady demand for orchids. He is one of the few in this section who handle them extensively. The branch store at Northampton is doing good business.

H. W. Field, of Northampton, Mass., reports a good call for flowering plants and cut flowers from his college patrons. He has a choice assortment and nothing goes to waste.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., has great faith in the future of White Killarney and has an immense stock ready for shipment. Everything is carried out on a large and liberal basis. The system of management is perfect. The demand for bedding plants is large and an enormous stock of rooted cuttings is on hand, ready to ship to almost every point of the compass. Two new houses are just completed and are intended for Kaiserin —nothing better yet for a summer rose, under glass.

Six years ago Otto Keser landed at Portland, Conn., on the shores of the old Connecticut river, and, like the great pioneers of the past century, went to work with ax and spade in preparing the way for what is now one of the snuggest establishments in the Nutmeg state. As he is ably assisted by his good side partner and a crowd of junior Kesers, business cannot fail to be good and to hold the company at the point of success it has reached. M.

The Market.

Business last week was the best seen in Boston for nearly a year. A prolonged ice storm and several dark days in succession caused such a dearth of flowers as is seldom seen. Prices held up well and, while a little easier now, can be classed as satisfactory. Much depends on weather conditions. A few more dark days would soon cause another famine, as both roses and carnations are off crop. Roses are scarce and prices on the best grades remarkably high; as much as $8 to $10 per dozen has been paid for best grade of Killarney and White Killarney, while Beauties touched the dollar mark. These prices are, of course, exceptional and have receded with the clearer skies. Carnations are not plentiful. On some days as much as $4 per hundred was made by ordinary blooms and $6 for fancies. Everything, of course, depends on the weather and supply, as demand now seems pretty steady and the advent of Lent will not be appreciably felt for a few days.

Violets are plentiful; the best average about $5 per thousand. Sweet peas are good and sell well. With Dutch bulbous stock sales have so far been in marked contrast with a year ago, when the market was continuously glutted. Tulips of several colors and quite a variety of narcissi are seen, but Golden Spur, double Von Sion, princeps and poeticus ornatus are mostly seen. In the way of miscellaneous flowers some anemones and ranunculi are seen. Easter lilies are unusually fine and meet with a ready sale. Quite a variety of other miscellaneous flowers are now seen. Adiantum of the new season's crop is good. There is quite a good call for both ferns and asparagus.

Club Meeting.

As briefly reported in last week's REVIEW, the club meeting held February 16 was a successful one, 211 being present, although it was one of the most disagreeable nights of the winter. From Providence a good delegation came, Messrs. McNair and Chappell, president and secretary, speaking interestingly during the evening. From the North Shore Horticultural Society came a dozen members, for whom Messrs. McGregor and Alex. Shaw acted as spokesmen. The addition of six new members showed that the club's growth is to continue. Not for over four years has there been a meeting without applications for membership.

Among the exhibits, the Winsor carnations from C. S. Strout, which gained a report of merit for culture, were the best ever seen in Boston, the stems being of remarkable length. Charles Simpkins, of Peabody, had a collection of stocks showing splendid culture, as did the grand vase of Lupinus mutabilis from William Swan, who also showed splendid annual larkspur, worthy of more attention from florists. Daniel Whyte's Primula Kewensis showed what a splendid thing this is when well grown. F. W. Fletcher, as usual, showed Baronne Rothschild violet. Carnation Kanarienbird, from Henry Schrade, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., has the earmarks of a good yellow. It keeps splendidly and as the introducer says it is a free bloomer, it ought to be heard from.

R. & J. Farquhar's cyclamens, which received a cultural report of merit, were excellent. They also had fine Primula obconica and Acacia heterophylla. Carnations Splendor and Victory, from O. M. Whittemore, were both good, while Enchantress, as grown by Alfred Parsons, was remarkably good. Andree, a crimson seedling of H. A. Stevens Co., looked promising, as did a vase of mixed seedlings from Peter Fisher and a collection of six varieties from E. B. Beals, of Springfield. White Killarney, from Waban Rose Conservatories, received an award of a report of highest merit, the first time the club has ever given such an award. Answering queries, Mr. Montgomery said the White Killarnew possessed much greater vigor than Killarney, had a larger flower and one containing many more petals. An occasional plant would carry flowers half pink and half white. The severe weather and blockaded railroads prevented some exhibits from a distance arriving on time.

The annual banquet was set for March 31, one day earlier than in 1908, and will undoubtedly draw a big crowd. M. A. Patten's talk on carnations, while short, was practical and drew out a good discussion, among those taking part being Peter Fisher, James Wheeler, Eber Holmes, Wilfrid Wheeler, W. H. Elliott, G. M. Anderson, W. N. Craig, James Farquhar, H. A. Stevens and K. Finlayson. Mr. Patten said he never fumigates in his houses, preferring a fine nicotine spray from a barrel pump. Fumigating, he believes, hurts the stems. Spraying is done once in two weeks. Nicoticide, with some Ivory soap, is used and found effective. He was asked what would give good stems and his answer was, lime, keeping on the dry side and rather cool.

February is the best month for propagating for stock of convenient size. Feeding should be delayed until the days lengthen. Peter Fisher, answering a query as to how long it takes to find out the caliber of a seedling, answered, "At least three years." He has grown as many as 3,000 plants of seedlings and then thrown all away. Sometimes seedlings excellent the first year were found worthless later, and vice versa. The average life of a carnation in commerce is five to eight years; sometimes less but rarely more.

Various Notes.

February 27 and 28 will be notable days at Horticultural hall and there is every indication of a big exhibition and the largest attendance ever seen at a trade show in New England. It is hoped that clear weather may prevail this week and there will not be such a scarcity of flowers as during the previous week.

Prof. F. A. Waugh lectured on "American Landscape Architecture" at Horticultural hall, February 20. A good number took part in the discussion, several speakers stating that a large proportion of the so-called landscape architects were poorly fitted to lay out an estate, their horticultural knowledge being slim.

William Purdom, of Kew, England, was one of the visitors at the club meeting February 16. Mr. Purdom goes to northern China and Thibet to collect plants and seeds for the Arnold Arboretum in place of E. H. Wilson, just returning from a two years' trip. Mr. Purdom left for Shanghai via Vancouver, February 18.

E. V. Hallock, of Queens, N. Y., will be the attraction at the club meeting March 16. His lecture will be on "Bulbous and Tuberous-rooted Plants." He is sure to have a big audience.

William Dunton is now running the store on City Hall avenue, formerly managed by the late M. B. Bunker.

A magnificent spring show is already assured in Horticultural hall. The entire space for the main hall is already taken. The show will this year last five days, March 25 to 30.

Patrick Welch is in New York this week in the interest of the S. A. F., he being a member of the tariff committee.

Letters from Edward Hatch, the popular secretary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, at Miami, Fla., indicate that he is improving in health and has taken to tarpon fishing for a pastime.

W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, has an exceptionally fine lot of lilies and azaleas coming along for Easter.

Daniel Iliffe, now of South Weymouth, will have a good exhibit at the trade show February 27. He is having many calls for building, piping, etc., at both trade and private places, particularly the latter.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

Business has been good, but seems to vary considerably according to the weather. Funeral work forms the bulk of the trade, though there have been a few society affairs to give the retailers something to do. Roses are scarce, while carnations are in fair supply. We have had a spell of near-summer weather, with a hard thunder storm. The hail cracked some glass here, but to no great extent.

Various Notes.

The Blackman Floral Co. had a good trade on Lincoln day and St. Valentine's day. For Lincoln day they had a large picture of Lincoln in the window, which attracted much attention.

Ben Kramer reports sending out lots of violets on St. Valentine's day. A feature of his window decoration was a large red heart made of immortelles, with a background of boxwood and placed on an easel. A picture of George Washington in the center of a large wreath of bronze galax decorated with small flags attracted attention February 22.

Elspermann reports a fine trade St. Valentine's day. He had a heavy call for carnations.

Julius Niednagel has been having good business. E. L. F.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

We had some weather here last week. Ice, sleet, snow, wind — lots of each. Propping up purlins and sashbars was the order of business for a number of days. At the Scottswood Greenhouse the boys carried the snow and ice out of the gutters.

Krueger Bros. report business as unusually good.

ROSES

Our supply in that direction will be increasing from now on. Among our rose consignors we count some of the most successful growers in this section. We want to make special mention of our stock of

Killarney

The best of them are worth $25.00 per 100. The quality is very fine, and at the price is hard to beat. In the medium grades, stock selling at $5.00 to $15.00 per 100, we can also give you very good value. Those sizes we can furnish in almost any quantity.

Richmond

Red roses have always been a leader with us, and we have never had better stock to offer than we have today in Richmond roses. Prices range from $5.00 to $35.00 per 100, and you can depend on getting from us in any grade the best value to be had.

ACACIA

PUBESCENS

The crop will last for another two weeks. The excellent demand that we have had for Acacia is the best indication that the trade fully appreciates the beauty and novelty of this stock. Those that know Acacia, know that we have the finest stock in the country, and that nowhere is it to be had in such quantity.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The pre-Lenten season has closed with a rush. Social activity seemed to increase as Ash Wednesday drew near, until the festive season ended on Tuesday with as lively a demand for the six days previous as this market has ever experienced. The number of orders shipped out of town was large, while the local business was up to high water mark.

Summarizing market conditions, it may be said that the rose crops, barring Beauties, are coming on, the shorter grades showing greater activity than fancy stock. Carnations continue rather scarce, the demand exceeding the supply, white being more active than pink, a condition foreign to this market until within the last fortnight. Cattleyas are scarce, but gardenias are fairly plentiful and of excellent quality. Violets, thanks to the warm, springlike weather, have come on with a rush, the houses being reported as "blue." Enormous quantities of violets have been marketed, but so large was the production that prices necessarily fell, the street taking up much of the surplus at low figures.

The advent of southern daffodils marks the decline in price for the local stock. The southerns are as yet interesting only to the fakers, but all the greenhouse-grown bulbous flowers are arriving in increased quantities and, despite an excellent demand, prices are receding all along the line. Mignonette has been in active demand, much choice stock being sold at listed prices. Callas have also sold well, with Easter lilies following closely.

The green market has improved, plumosus and adiantum being in active demand, while smilax improves slightly. There is no demand for Sprengeri. Valley has been going fairly at moderate prices. Sweet peas are active when of quality.

Hatboro.

Eugene Weiss is one of the best known florists in Philadelphia. His Germantown place, his store on North Eighth street and his greenhouses at Hatboro are well known to all our florists. Mr. Weiss himself has a host of friends who will be glad to hear that he is up and doing once more, after his midwinter illness. He now gives his personal attention to his greenhouses at Hatboro, adding not a little to the pleasure of his visitors by his cheery talk as he conducts them about his place. The houses are of the older style of construction and are devoted to roses and carnations. The roses grown are Bride, Bridesmaid and Killarney. The carnations include Winsor, Lieut. Peary, Aristocrat and some of the older standard varieties. So vigorous and full of bloom were the carnations in these old-style houses, some of them sash-built, that one could not help wondering whether with the aid of houses of modern construction Eugene Weiss would not be in a class by himself as a carnation grower.

Southampton.

Stephen Mortensen first came to this city in the early 90's, heralded as an orchid expert from St. Louis. He proved to be an all-round grower of the first rank, roses finally supplanting orchids in his affections. As a rose grower today he is considered among the best who favor the Philadelphia market with their flowers. Mr. Mortensen's progress at Southampton, where he is considered among its most progressive business men, has been chronicled in this column from time to time. The object of the present note is to describe the latest addition to his plant, made last season. It is a beautifully constructed house, Lord & Burnham make, 43x265, with concrete sides. It is planted with somewhere near 6,000 Bridesmaids, whose stocky growth and well colored blooms bear evidence of their enjoyment of the favorable conditions. Bride, Richmond and Mrs. Jardine, in addition to more Bridesmaids, fill the other house of Mr. Mortensen's place. Own-root roses are gradually giving way to grafted stock. A long row of sashes over the grafted cuts in the propagating house are largely devoted to My Maryland, "The Great

Various Notes.

The Washington branch of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. will be opened next week at 1212 New York avenue, where the first floor and basement have been secured in a remodeled building that had not been leased before. The new branch, which is centrally located, will give the company about 2,500 square feet of space.

Henry C. Heileman has purchased the lease, good will and fixtures of the store on Germantown avenue, near Chelten avenue, from the William Graham Floral Co. Mr. Heileman, who has earned an enviable reputation with the Leo Niessen Co., opened his new store February 20. Frank Hastings has been retained.

J. R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., was in this city last week. Mr. Fotheringham's mission was to present the claims of the rose, White Killarney.

Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, was in this city February 20, to attend the funeral of his mother-in-law.

D. P. Gorman, of Williamsport, was here last week.

Robert Craig, John Westcott, and party, have been enjoying an automobile trip through the Isle of Pines. They are most enthusiastic.

Edward Reid reports a large shipment of flowers in the train wreck near Norfolk February 21. Mr. Reid has, by the way, joined the acacia men.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report heavy shipments of Easter and other goods by the steamer Menomenie. A natural willow urn made in their own factory is a pleasing novelty.

M. Rice & Co. report the arrival of a large shipment of adjustable pot covers by the steamer Vandalia.

White lilac is increasing in quantity and in popularity. Berger Bros. showed a fine shipment of Marie Legraye.

Samuel Lilley arrived from up the state this week, just in time to report that his firm is handling nice gardenias.

A prominent wholesaler reports that St. Valentine's day business fully doubled that of last year.

The Robert Craig Co. has as pretty a lot of Bougainvillea glabra Sanderiana as one could wish to see. Good cultural methods, combined with brain, bid fair to produce something worth seeing before Easter.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons were much complimented on their decorations at the Second Assembly ball February 19.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

A striking illustration of the success of the carnation grown indoors all summer can be seen at the extensive plant of the Newburgh Floral Co., which makes the divine flower a leading specialty. The stock could not be in a finer condition and plants have yielded with scarcely a let-up since early fall. The cut has brought top prices throughout the season in New York and the crop of cuttings cannot be beaten for vigor.

The Schaefer Floral Co. is bringing in a fine batch of bulbous stock that is selling at good prices.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with almost a summer temperature and everything indicates quite a fall in the prices of cut flowers before the week is over. Supplies of roses are fast increasing. Values are off twenty per cent, comparing this week with last, and they are going slowly. Beauties are down to 50 cents for the best; in large quantities 40 cents is accepted. There are plenty of them now. Richmond is down from its pedestal, and even Killarney is no longer dear; 8 cents will buy the finest Maid and Bride. Some were selling good stock at 6 cents Monday morning.

Carnations are grand in quality, but gross in quantity. It is hard for the market to absorb them all without serious concessions. Grand stock was selling as low as 2 cents on Monday. Even the few novelties arriving have receded to within the reach of all.

Lilies are lower, especially callas, and tulips are abundant and cheap. Gardenias and orchids hold their own. Big shipments to Washington, March 3, will take everything in sight.

For violets, 50 cents is the extreme top. The market is flooded, too, with sweet peas and quotations have fallen. Some days it has looked very springlike at the street corners. Southern narcissi will be here this week in quantity. George Saltford already receives large shipments daily from the sunny southland.

The general retail trade is in a healthy state and the majority seem to be busy most of the time, but this village is getting so healthful, and the climate so mild, that the funeral work departments are not rushed. Washington's birthday, with its dinner celebrations, seemed to have all the retailers busy. Several balls this week will have extensive decorations.

Various Notes.

Everything indicates a great success for the Florists' Club's banquet at Shanley's Saturday evening, February 27. The president's reception begins at 6 p. m.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club is March 8, and this will be rose night. There will be a great exhibition and the biggest crowd of the year.

Several rose growers from this section have already booked themselves for the Buffalo rose convention, March 17. On the same evening occurs the banquet of the National Gardeners' Association and their exhibition, which will draw record crowds this year and continue for two days. Many handsome prizes have been donated for this event. Some of the prizes are: Gold medal from Lord & Burnham Co., silver cups from Pierson U-Bar Co., Bobbink & Atkins, Ellwanger & Barry, Peter Henderson & Co., Rickards Bros., Burnett Bros., J. P. Lorenson, Charles Elliott, John Shore, J. J. Donnelly, Julius Roehrs Co. and W. E. Maynard.

The bowling department of the New York Florists' Club meets Monday evenings. Secretary Scott called his men together for a royal start on Washington's birthday. President Donaldson says the club will have a team at Cincinnati that will carry home all the prizes, and John usually means just what he says.

Leo Niessen, of Philadelphia, was in the city Saturday, February 27.

Mayor Breitmeyer, of Detroit, was in the city last week, but will be unable to attend the banquet of the Florists' Club as expected.

Joseph A. Manda, of West Orange, is adding several orchid houses to his plant this spring.

L. G. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., leaves the city this week for Palm Beach, Fla., and other resorts for a two weeks' vacation.

The Newman Floral Co. is much pleased with its success in the new store at the corner of Fifth avenue and Broadway. Since the departure of Fleischman from this part of the city, Mr. Newman has a monopoly of this fine section of the metropolis. Mrs. Newman

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

Washington's birthday brought a lot of parties which called for decorations. Red was used principally, by nearly all the florists, for tables.

The window decorations of this city have shown good taste. For this occasion, one window presented a pretty effect with a miniature cherry tree. The background of azaleas and other flowering plants set the whole off to advantage. All the windows had pictures of Washington draped with the national flag.

We do not feel that this day is a big addition to the business, but in comparing the business of other holidays now with those ten years ago, at that time there were no big days aside from Easter, Christmas and very few others. Now, for instance, take Valentine's day; it's a big day now by actual figures. In talking over this subject with one of our largest florists, he made the remark that this year his business for Valentine's day was as much as he did in fourteen days in February ten years ago.

Easter stock is now being rounded into shape. Lilies, mostly the black-stemmed variety, look fine, but will take a lot of forcing.

Cut stock has loosened up considerably, with the exception of roses, which remain a trifle scarce.

Ideal weather conditions now prevail, more like May than February. The storm just passed left a lot of snow, but did little damage aside from breaking a little glass, where the heavy ice collected in the gutters.

The business-house bowling tournament just closed left the florists' team in fourth place. This does not mean that they were poor, for few points separated the leaders. George W. McClure was captain of the team.

Mrs. Wm. Scott has been ill for three weeks and is now under the care of a trained nurse.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA.

Will Hydrangea Otaksa be in time for Easter that have been brought into a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night the first of the year, and then put into a rose house temperature about February 1 in 5-inch to 10-inch pots? No flower heads are showing yet. C. U.

Your hydrangeas should be along in time for Easter. If you can see flower heads early in March, you can have them in flower in a temperature of 60 degrees at night. Keep the plants in the sunniest possible spot. Water freely. Do not allow any aphis to take up quarters on the plants. Feed with liquid manure once in four or five days, as soon as you can see the flower heads, and continue feeding until the heads show color. A syringing overhead on bright days will also be refreshing to the plants.

NEW STYLE MISSION POT COVER

Just the thing for specimen plants. Takes the place of the expensive jardiniere, and gives plant plenty of air, which is impossible with jardinieres. We have them in three shades, a beautiful foliage green, golden oak and a dark mission. Colors must be seen to be appreciated. We have also a fine line of Mission Handle Baskets in same colors. We will send a complete set of these Baskets and Pot Covers on approval to any responsible florist in the country, for we are confident they will give satisfaction. Write us about them. Now is the time to place your order for our famous Ever Ready Waterproof Crepe Paper Covers, the largest selling single article in the florist business. There's a reason. Send 15 cents in stamps, and we will mail you sample, price list and booklet. Certificate of Merit at S. A. F., Niagara Falls, N. Y.

CALLAS ROTTING.

Will you tell me what ails my callas? I have 800 in 8-inch pots plunged to the rim in cinders on the bench. Over 200 have decayed at the base of the plant or top of bulb. I am careful in watering and keep them in a temperature of 60 degrees at night and 70 to 80 degrees at day. Am losing more every year. Four years ago we only lost fourteen. They were good, strong plants up to New Year's. The pots are one and one-half inches apart. C. U.

Your callas will do far better if not plunged in the ashes. Stand them on a bed of these, rather than plunge them in the ashes. This will allow of the pots drying out more and will be better for the plants in every way. Callas need an abundant water supply and, provided drainage is ample, you can hardly overwater them. Your pots are, however, far too close together. Spread them out more to allow light and air getting among them. When you grow them so closely packed, it is impossible to get satisfactory results. Throw away all affected plants and give the balance more elbow room. Your temperature of 60 degrees at night is all right. Do not use any shade on the glass. C. W.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME.

There is no better time to clean up the establishment than now, when work in general is not rushing and there is plenty of time to do all the odd jobs that have been put off until a better time.

It is an excellent idea to wash the glass on the inside of the walls of the houses with warm water and a good window brush and pole. It will make the houses look like new and the plants will grow much better.

The drip troughs should be thoroughly cleaned out and all scum and dirt should be cleaned off the lower end of the bars and gutter sides. All weeds should be pulled up from under the benches and all refuse under there should be raked up as clean as one would rake a lawn. It will be surprising what a collection of weeds, dead plants, broken pots, sticks, wire, etc., will be found, to be hauled to the garbage dump. And nothing that a grower can do to prevent insects and disease will be more effective than cleanliness. Weeds under the benches harbor insects. Rubbish of all kinds harbors diseases. A neglected, unclean house is a stronghold for both these annoyances, and fighting them in such an ambush is hopeless.

After getting the houses cleaned up, the pots should be washed and dried, and the seed flats got together and repaired. There is no end of work around that ought to be done before the rush comes on, for then there will be no chance to do it.

Select a bright, nice day to look over the roof for broken glass and for panes that have slid down, allowing rain to run in, allowing fumigating fumes to escape, and encouraging mildew and diseases. Now is the time to act. H. G.

DEPTH TO PLANT BULBS.

Do bulbs force better with the nose out of the ground or below the top of the soil? Should not tulips, hyacinths and such bulbs be covered entirely to force best or give best blooms? When grown in the ground by growers for blooms, do they not cover narcissus, hyacinth and tulip bulbs entirely? Do not bulbs with nose covered give the best length of stem? W. F. H.

Bulbs used for forcing are covered much more lightly than when grown outdoors. In the open ground they are covered from four to six inches deep, according to the size of the bulbs, an average depth being four inches. Hyacinths grown in pots or flats are best just barely covered. Some growers prefer to leave the nose just peeping above ground. Tulips and narcissi are better entirely covered. We do not think, in the case of forcing bulbs, that it will make any material difference to the length of stems whether the noses of the hyacinths show or they are covered an inch deep. All these bulbs are, or should be, covered with cinders or some other material after potting or boxing, and if in a dark cellar, all the better. They should not be taken out until they have sprouts two or three inches long. If taken out too soon they will, of course, come short-stemmed. C. W.

GOT WHAT HE WANTED.

We received letters from thirteen states, Canada and the District of Columbia, and from a number of the states several letters of inquiry about our adv. of a greenhouse opportunity in the Review, issues of January 28 and February 4, and still they come; over fifty already. We have leased the property to C. I. Poor, of Michigan, and he will build a range of greenhouses sufficient to amply supply all the needs of this community.

F. S. Hawley.

Eureka Springs, Ark., Feb. 13, 1908.

Since writing the above I have received a letter of inquiry from another state. To my mind the Florists' Review is an excellent advertising medium.

Enclosed you will find the money for the renewal of our subscription. We are nicely started in the violet business and cannot get along without the Review.—H. W. & S. W. Albrecht, North Germantown, N. Y.

The Market.

Trade is a trifle better, there being a fair demand for all spring flowers, or those that are classed as such by the public. Sweet peas are especially fine and plentiful and are great favorites with the public. There are more of these this season than usual. The daffodils have arrived; they are in good shape and are bought up on sight.

Carnations were in heavy demand last week, but were plentiful on the streets on Saturday, February 20. The fancy varieties are in steady demand. Roses continue to be scarce and are bought up on sight. A good many of the retailers advise their customers who desire roses to take something else, as they cannot with any certainty rely on being able to supply them. Such conditions have never before existed in this market at this time of the year.

Violets are to be found in large quantities and always find a buyer if absolutely fresh. Bulbous stock, while perhaps not so heavy in point of arrivals as last season, is still heavy enough to keep prices on a low basis. Azaleas are coming in large quantities and seem to take well, especially in the light colors.

Various Notes.

The greenhouse establishment of Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, was damaged considerably by a violent whirlwind which accompanied the rain storm of Tuesday afternoon, February 16. The office building, which is a large affair, about 50x200 and three stories high, was twisted nearly a foot from its foundations. The glass partition which separates it from the packing room was blown down. Hundreds of panes of glass were broken in the greenhouses, tree tops were twisted off and general havoc created. The whirlwind was traveling in a northeasterly direction and seemed to spend its fury on the Vincent farm.

The Market.

Business continues fairly good, but still is nothing to brag about. There does not seem to be anything special stirring in retail circles and consequently the wholesale demand is not heavy. If it were not for the fact that flowers can almost be said to be scarce, there would be the next thing to a glut.

The bright sunshine we are having will soon increase the cut of carnations, so that there will be plenty to fill all orders. Now there are enough in all colors except white, which is scarce. Roses are selling out well. Red is scarce. Other colors are about equal to the demand. Sweet peas and violets are selling well. Bulbous flowers are also doing well. Good lilies are not plentiful and lily of the valley is scarce.

Various Notes.

J. F. Pogue, of Coulthard & Pogue, spent February 19 in Chicago. He had a large order for carnations, but had but little trouble in getting all he wanted, though he says the market was well cleared out.

The warm, springlike weather we are having is starting the growth of various outdoor plants. Outdoor bulbous flowers are from two to three inches high and coming fast. Rose bushes in some localities have shoots an inch or more in length. Lilac bushes and other early shrubs are starting to swell the buds. If this weather continues much longer a lot of these plants will be given an

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

W. E. MARSHALL, New York, has been calling on the gardeners at Lenox, Mass.

MAIL orders continue to make a splendid record as compared to March of last year. The weather conditions are largely responsible for it.

THE Eckfords, widely known for their work with sweet peas, are extending their operations as seed growers for the English trade, paying especial attention to culinary peas.

ONION sets are going out briskly; there seems really no limit to the demand, especially in southern market gardening localities. Naturally prices are well held, for all holders feel that every bushel is sure to be called for before the end of the season.

W. W. BARNARD Co., Chicago, has stocked the store at 117 Fifth avenue, acquired from the National Seed Co., with a full line for retail trade and has printed the address of the branch store on its retail catalogue. The intention is to push the counter business at this location.

IT is stated that a large stock of second quality crowns and planting stuff was this season left on the hands of the German growers of lily of the valley pips for export and they are being put back for stock purposes, so that, given a favorable season this year, pips should be cheap and plentiful and of the first quality next fall.

ONION seed still is offered cheap, but it also still is true that the cheaper the offer the less certainty there is as to the past and future of the stock.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending February 13 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	328	$ 4807	Grass	376	$4111
Anise	150	1624	Hemp	500	2062

IMPORTS OF POTATOES.

English-grown potatoes are highly appreciated on the other side of the Atlantic, says an English horticultural journal, and as the result of this appreciation they are annually shipped to the United States in considerable quantities. This season the exports are larger than usual, owing probably to the low prices ruling, and of these the larger proportion is being sent from Holbeach, the center of one of the most important of the potato-growing districts in Lincolnshire. From this center about 1,000 tons are dispatched weekly to America. The price paid to the farmers is about £1 15s. per ton, and in addition to the cost of transportation the potatoes have to bear a duty of £1 17s. 6d. per ton.

BEGIN THE PARCELS POST.

The establishment of an experimental rural parcels post system in two counties, to be selected by the postmaster general, is authorized by a provision in the post-office appropriation bill now before the senate. The bill already has been passed by the house. The fixing of rates is to be prescribed by the postmaster general, who will report the result of the experiment to congress by January 1 next.

It was in this manner that the rural free delivery of the higher classes of mail was established—experimentally on one or two routes—and those who favor the parcels post believe it will grow from the small beginning now planned until it covers the whole country and is as indispensable as is the rural free delivery.

Boddington's Quality Asters
ARE FAMOUS

Why? Because we have made a specialty of the varieties of Asters that pay the florist to grow. We have learned this by coming in personal contact with the leading florists for the past 20 years, by observation and the reports of our travelers. Our selection for a long season of Asters is as follows:

Trade Conditions.

With a short supply and stiffer prices, there is a stronger demand for cut flowers in this market than is usual at this season. One reason for this is to be found in the largely increased number of whist, bridge and other social parties, at which it has become customary to have vases of cut flowers, as well as decorations and favors of choice blooms, mostly roses and carnations, although in some of the more exclusive and wealthy sets orchids are much used.

Bulbous stock continues to arrive in excellent condition and finds ready sale in pans. Funeral work is good and decorative calls are numerous.

Florists' Club Meets.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island met at its rooms, 98 Westminster street, on Monday evening, February 15. There was an unusually large attendance, with President Charles Macnair in the chair. Harry Clarke, of this city, and R. F. Colwell, of Barrington, were elected to membership. An invitation from the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Boston, to be its guest the following night, was accepted, and at the appointed time a delegation consisting of President Charles S. Macnair, Secretary William E. Chappell, Treasurer James Hockey, Alexander Macrae, John Macrae, David McCoid, Charles Hartstra, William Appleton, William B. Hazard and Michael Sweeney made the pilgrimage.

James B. Canning, chairman of the "business boom" committee on flowers, addressed the meeting at considerable length and stated what was desired, and in response to his call the contributions were liberal and general.

Horticultural Society.

The lecture room of the Public Library was given over to a meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society Wednesday evening, February 17, at which were discussed various topics in connection with fruit growing. The routine business of

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.35 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs, 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

the society was first taken up and then the various topics discussed. Edmund G. Brooks, George F. Weston and Alexander H. Johnson were made members, and Adin A. Hixon, secretary of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, was made an honorary member. Prof. A. E. Stone and C. H. Burlingame were elected delegates to the convention of the Toronto Fruit Growers, to be held this year. At the meeting of the New England Fruit Growers' Association, to be held in Boston early next month, Richard W. Bowen will represent the local society.

Various Notes.

Frank Genick, of Jamestown, has been committed to the state asylum at Howard, his mind having given way under the bereavement of his wife's death, January 28.

Robert S. Burlingame, of Newport, has been elected secretary and treasurer of the board of managers of the Rhode Island Agricultural and Mechanics' Art College, and the former governer, Charles Dean Kimball, has been reëlected president.

Cornelius Caswell, with John Wood, has received an offer to enter the employ of M. Aitken, of Springfield, Mass.

John Macrae, of 1246 Smith street, this city, has purchased two of the greenhouses belonging to Richard Dunbar's range at Bristol, and removed them to this city, where they will be rebuilt. One is 150 feet in length and the other is 100 feet. Mr. Dunbar has gone out of business and is disposing of his houses and appointments.

James B. Canning had the decorations for the annual ball and concert of the Providence Permanent Firemen's Relief Association, and also for the big Outlet ball.

Guiseppe Silvaggio has been granted permission to erect a greenhouse at 685 Manton avenue.

John Wood had twenty-five valentine corsage bouquets for a dinner party at the Narragansett Hotel Friday evening. These were of violets, with Richmond roses in the center of each bunch of 100 violets.

There were a large number of handsome pieces at the funeral of United States Congressman Daniel L. D. Granger, of this city, on Wednesday, February 17. One of the most conspicuous was an immense cross of roses, galax leaves and freesias from Johnston Bros.

N. D. Pierce, of the Norwood Floral Co., had all of the family, school and neighborhood pieces for the funerals of the four children in that village who were drowned while skating a few days ago.

Elmer E. King, of Attleboro, is bringing in some fine bulbous stock. On Saturday he cut 2,000 daffodils for the local market. He has been averaging half that number daily for several weeks.

The Market.

The demand for cut stock last week was really good and the wholesalers were cleaning up well, considering the amount of stock that came in each morning. While there is no glut at present, there is enough coming in to supply the wants of the retailers and also the shipping trade. The Lenten season, which set in this week, will, of course, put a stop to the large weddings, dinners and receptions for a while at least. Then, if this fine, warm weather keeps up, we may look for a glut in the wholesale market by the end of the week.

More good roses could be sold, but of these the market has been somewhat shy of late. Carnations, too, cleaned up last week. Violets sold well and cheap, as the market had plenty. Bulbous stock, too, was equal to the demand and cheap. Smilax, galax and leucothoe sold well. Asparagus sprays are scarce, but there are plenty of fancy and common ferns.

The Schaefer Floral Co., which recently opened on North Sixth street, has put

DREER'S SUPERB ASTERS

Dreer's Superb Late Branching Asters.

We offer below but a few of the more important Asters. For complete list see our current Wholesale Price List, which also contains everything in Seeds, Plants and Bulbs that a Florist needs. Copies free on application.

Dreer's Superb Late Branching

The finest Aster for late August and September blooming.

The plants form strong, branching bushes, 2 to 2½ feet high, bearing on long, strong stems their handsome Chrysanthemum-like flowers, which, under ordinary cultivation, average 5 inches across. The form of the flowers, together with the length of the stems, places them at the head of Asters for cutting. We offer eight beautiful and distinct colors, viz.:

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Azure Blue. A rich deep lavender	25c	$1.00
Pure White. Extra fine stock	25c	1.00
Shell Pink. An exquisite shade	25c	1.00
Rose Pink. A very desirable color	25c	1.00
Deep Rose. Rich and brilliant	25c	1.00
Deep Purple. Royal deep blue	25c	1.00
Lavender. A pale grayish-lavender	25c	1.00
Crimson. Very rich	25c	1.00
Finest Mixed. All the colors	25c	.75

Dreer's New Aster "Pink Beauty"

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
A magnificent cut-flower variety, in bloom from early August until well on in September; 24 to 30 inches high; flowers average 4 inches across, on long, strong stems. Color a delicate blush pink, and pronounced by experts to be the finest pink mid-season sort yet introduced	50c	$4.00

Dreer's New Late Aster "Crimson King"

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
A superb new late-branching variety, with perfectly double flowers of rich, rosy crimson, full of fire. Fine for cutting, showing up well under artificial light	50c	$4.00

[Crego's Giant Comet Asters

Magnificent fluffy flowers, averaging over 5 inches across, with long, strong stems; the finest of this type. Comes into bloom in August, continuing well into September, and, unlike most of the Comet sorts, stands when cut and is a good flower to ship. We offer two colors, our own saving from stock received from the originator.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Shell Pink	50c	$4.00
Snow White	50c	4.00

Early Wonder Asters

This is the earliest Aster in cultivation, being in full bloom when Queen of the Market is only in bud, frequently coming into bloom in late June. Flowers larger than Queen of the Market, borne on long, strong stems. Very valuable for cutting.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Early Wonder White. Pure glistening white	40c	$2.00
Early Wonder Pink. A good, clear pink	40c	2.00

Late Aster "Violet King"

A new and distinct color in the Late Branching class, fine large double flowers of a pleasing shade of violet, a strong, free grower and very free flowering	40c	2.00 in a line of candy. Mr. Schaefer reports an excellent trade since the opening.

Himmer Bros., out at Meramec Highlands, are cutting daily a big supply of California violets and fancy sweet peas. They contemplate new additions to their plant this summer.

Will Smith, C. A. Kuehn, George Angermueller and Henry Berning, local wholesalers who attended the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Springfield, report a splendid time. A. Y. Ellison and Henry Kahrs were the only retailers to attend the meeting from here.

Fred C. Weber's Valentine's day attraction in his large show window made a handsome show and attracted a great deal of interest in his neighborhood.

Conrad Bergstermann has an attractive display of blooming plants in his large show house facing Grand avenue.

The new show house of the Ellison Floral Co. is now completed and adds greatly to the already attractive place at Olive street and Taylor avenue.

The third annual spring flower show, which will be given by the St. Louis Horticultural Society, according to some of the members of the executive committee, promises to surpass the last two. The committee will meet next week and complete arrangements.

The present quarters of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. are becoming too small for them.

With Lent setting in Wednesday, a number of large weddings took place Monday and Tuesday, which kept some of our uptown florists busy.

Messrs. Henry Kahrs, Foster, Siegel, Schaeffer and the Riessen Floral Co., our downtown florists, report they are disposing of thousands of violets each day and that business of late has been good in all lines, especially funeral work.

President W. C. Young, of the St. Louis Florists' Club, says that he and the trustees have called the rose meeting off for next month, and that he has appointed John Connon, W. C. Smith and George Angermueller as a committee on bowling, and F. Vennemann, Wm. Winter and C. Fulgraf as a committee on shooting. They will meet Tuesday at Smith's and organize teams to compete at Cincinnati next August during the S. A. F. meeting.

Among recent visitors were F. J. Farney, of the A. L. Randall Co., and F. Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago. J. J. B.

One insertion of the advertisement brought me all the orders I need.—Geo. S. Woodruff, Independence, Ia.

Salem, O.—The Grandview Greenhouse Co. is the name of a partnership just formed by Russell R. Case and Norman W. Weirick, of this city, who have already started the erection of a greenhouse opposite the entrance of Grandview cemetery, on Franklin avenue. Mr. Case is an experienced florist and was formerly connected with the Garfield Avenue Greenhouses. Both flowers and vegetables will be grown.

SWEET POTATO PLANTS.

We wish to grow some sweet potato plants for our local trade, here in Nebraska. Will you kindly advise us as to time of planting, the preparation and care of the hotbed, temperature, when and how to take up the plants; in short, everything in detail necessary to grow good, strong plants? D. F. C.

Sweet potatoes are a tender plant and cannot be set out any earlier than tomatoes. I believe that in your latitude the last week in May, about Decoration day, is as soon as it would be safe to plant such tender plants in the field. If this is correct, then you should plant the tubers in the hotbed about May 1.

A hotbed for sweet potatoes can be made the same as for other purposes, but I prefer a deep one, a dug-out or pit, made by digging a hole about eighteen inches deep and a trifle larger than the size of the frame. This trench we fill with fresh horse manure which has been hauled up previously and turned and well shaken up once or twice. The manure is tramped into the pit until it is well filled and well packed. Then the frame is placed on top, and more manure packed all around it to keep it warm around the sides and ends. If the manure is not good the hotbed will be a failure, but I am presuming that the inquirer knows something about hotbeds. If the manure is burning dry, it needs a light watering, or it will be ruined.

After placing the frame on the manure, spread about an inch or two of sand on top of the manure, put the sash on and wait to see how it is going to act. In a few days the temperature will run very high, and the potatoes should not be put in until the temperature of the manure falls back to about 90 degrees. To get the temperature, put the thermometer well down into the manure.

When the bed is ready to plant, place the sweet potatoes on the sand as closely as they can be laid without touching each other. Put sand on top of them until they are completely covered over. Then sprinkle the sand and put the sash on again. Ventilate the bed each day, according to how bright and warm or windy the weather is, and water when needed to keep the sand moist. Do not open too much. Close them up early in the afternoon, so as to run the bed warm.

When the plants are up large enough to sell, a sash is lifted off and the plants pulled off by holding the sand and the potato down with one hand and catching hold of the sprouts, low down in the sand, with the other hand. They pull easily, and the old sweet potatoes will keep on producing more such sprouts or plants until late in July. Take the plants to the shed, count them out in bundles of fifty or 100 and roll them up in sphagnum moss and papers, like rooted cuttings. They do not keep well and should be planted out soon. It is best not to pull them until the customers want them. It is well to have the bed come on early enough, as they can easily be held back by giving more ventilation if they are ready a week or so too early. I have seen the first batch pulled and thrown away when entirely too early.

Where sandy soil is to be had, sweet potatoes pay much better than Irish potatoes, and the growing of the plants in such a locality is profitable at 50 cents per hundred. In sandy fields it is best not to plow the soil first, but simply to throw up ridges on the uncultivated soil. These ridges for the rows should be three feet apart, and the plants should be set eighteen inches apart in the row and watered immediately. If these ridges are thrown up about eight inches above grade and the trenches between are as far below grade, the ridges will seem sixteen inches high. If the ground is too loose under the ridges, the roots will go down too deep and be inclined to make long and slim, instead of short and fat sweet potatoes. H. G.

MUSHROOMS EATEN BY INSECTS.

We are sending you today some mushrooms that are being eaten by some kind of insect. Will you kindly look them over and tell us some means of destroying the pests? We have our mushroom beds under the tomato beds, and as fast as the small mushrooms appear they are attacked by these insects. W. B. C.

From the sample sent, which was pretty well dried up, I should judge that the damage was done by snails or wood lice, or it might be the work of some beetle, but the cavities are too large to be the work of a small insect, like the mushroom maggot. The damage is probably done at night, and I would suggest that you visit the beds at night with a light and find out what breed of despoilers you have to contend with. Then you may be able to devise some means of eradication.

From the sample sent it is impossible to tell what insect may be doing the damage, as there are so many that are fond of making a meal from a nice, tender mushroom, and under the greenhouse benches is an ideal home for them. Unless they are extremely numerous, they can be kept from doing serious damage by setting traps for them. The best thing we know of for this purpose is to cut a potato in halves, hollow out a little on the cut side and set these with the hollow side down in such a way as to allow the insects to get under it. These traps should be scattered pretty liberally where the insects are doing the most damage. They will soon discover them and lodge under them, and by going over the traps every morning and destroying the insects found, you ought soon to be able to reduce their numbers. Wm. Scott.

CLEVELAND.

Roses are scarce in the Cleveland market, as all good stock moves rapidly without blowing any horn. Bride, Maid and Richmond are coming in of exceptional quality just now, but the cut is small, and as for Killarney—it is ordered up days in advance. This is because, perhaps, Killarney never was in better color than this season, and when Killarney has that ideal color that it has when well grown, we do not want a better rose. G. C.

St. Louis, Mich.—D. Kleinhans has purchased the interest of his brother, Frank, in the greenhouses of Kleinhans Bros.

The Market.

With the commencement of the third week in February we have been treated to a slight change in the weather. After six weeks of continuous rain, we at last have a little sunshine and everyone's spirits have risen perceptibly in consequence. The retail florists have felt the quietness in trade as much as the dealers in other lines, and now that some good weather seems assured, we have hopes that it will stay a long time with us.

Flowers, with the exception of narcissi, daffodils and violets, have for the last ten days been really scarce, much more so than is customary at this time, and there has been a fair demand, especially for light colors and such stock as is suitable for funeral trade. Good roses have been hard to locate at any price, and fancy carnations have been quickly bought up. If the sunshine of the last two days continues, however, we will have an avalanche of stock of all kinds within a week. Violets, narcissi and daffodils have been a glut in the market.

Fruit blossoms have made their appearance in huge bunches and are proving popular with flower buyers. Wild flowers will soon make a showing.

Various Notes.

George Hansen, formerly of Portland, Ore., is in town with the intention of starting in the retail trade, should a good opening offer.

Pelicano & Co. report a heavy funeral trade for the current month at their Kearney street store.

The Golden West Nursery Co., of Los Gatos, Cal., has filed a petition in bankruptcy.

Domoto Bros., of Elmhurst, received 10,000 Japanese camellias on a recent steamer from the orient.

J. T. Richardson has departed for southern California, on a pleasure trip. He will be absent from town about six weeks. G.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Trade is excellent here, considering the heavy rains we are having. In fact, it has done nothing but rain since the first of the year, which has put the usual damper on good stock. In spite of it all, the city is full of tourists, and just as soon as the sun comes out the sidewalks are crowded with people. We are having plenty of funeral work, all hands being busy.

Wolfskill's last week displayed a handsome window of azaleas. Wright's flower store puts up a good showing and, in fact, all of the stores report business booming.

Jack D'Ortignac, formerly of the Angelus Florist, has purchased an interest in the Redondo Floral Co., the firm now consisting of Chas. E. Morton and Jack D'Ortignac, but it will be run under the old name.

Jacob Dieterich, the nurseryman, and W. H. Turner have gone in together and purchased a tract of land near the city and are now busily engaged in superintending the building of five modern houses, which they intend planting to Rhea Reid, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Marshall Field, etc. They certainly will be able to dispose of all they can grow.

The Los Angeles Florists' Club recently had a ladies' night and a good crowd responded in spite of the rain. Mr. Hinsel had his orchestra of eighteen pieces there and they gave the members a great deal of enjoyment. President O. C. Saakes made the opening speech, introducing the new president, Jacob Dieterich, who was duly installed, making a speech in response. The rest of the officers for the ensuing term also took up their duties. These officers are: Vice-president, Dr. A. D. Houghton; secretary, Jack Reeves; treasurer, Wm. Wern. A bountiful collation was served by the committee, with the assistance of several ladies. The committee on decorations did its duty well, the hall being elaborately decorated with smilax, American Beauties and carnations. C. E. M.

GUM CULTURE IN CALIFORNIA.

Considerable inquiry is being indulged in by the public about what the latest developments are in the realms of eucalyptus growing. Each succeeding year finds a few new species tried, and wider experimenting with the older varieties. Certain it is that the eucalyptus family is destined to become one of the most powerful factors in the hard-wood production of California. In Australia they have long been known and used, to the exclusion of almost every other tree where strength, finish and durability were required, and the tremendous interest taken in this state by forest culturists shows that we are alive to the possibilities at hand.

Up to the present time the blue and red gums, E. globulus and E. rostrata, have been the most widely planted, with the intention, usually, of converting them into firewood or using them as wind breaks. But recently the immense increase in the demand for railroad ties, wharf piling and hard-wood timber has given an impetus to the search for suitable varieties for such purposes. The natural conditions of the soil and climate have had much to do with the wise selection of sorts also, for it has been found that on wet lands E. robusta, E. rostrata and E. botryoides succeeded well, and these were closely followed by E. globulus, viminalis, cornuta, citriodora, calophylla and tereticornis, all of which would stand considerable moisture but did not do their best when there was an excess for any length of time. Several of these kinds succeed well in quite the reverse condition, that of dry, hot situations. Both E. rudis and E. rostrata make excellent growths, but E. polyanthemos and E. leucoxylon are especially adapted for desert planting.

Regarding hardiness, the ordinary blue gum will not stand as much frost as E. rostrata, polyanthemos or tereticornis, and must be carefully watched when small. It is almost safe to say that the three latter are quite hardy. Most of the experiments have been carried on in southern California, where the climate is very mild. The gum tree, however, is not suitable for cold sections of country. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

WM. A. PETERSON, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, reached home February 18, after a two months' trip to Florida and Cuba, accompanied by Mrs. Peterson.

THE house committee on agriculture has reported favorably the bill introduced January 29 by its chairman, Representative Scott, of Kansas, providing for the government inspection of imported nursery stock. The bill makes it unlawful for any transportation company to offer at any port of entry nursery stock, unless accompanied by a certificate of inspection by an official expert of the country from which the importation is made. If not accompanied by such a certificate declaring the importation free of disease or injurious insects, the stock will be held in quarantine until its freedom of dangerous insects, pests or plant diseases has been fully established.

STATE INSPECTORS' DOINGS.

The following condensed account of the meeting of the American Association of Horticultural Inspectors may be of special interest to nurserymen. As is probably well known, this association is made up of all the nursery inspectors in the United States.

How can a national importation inspection law be secured? Committee of three appointed by the chair to take charge of promoting such legislation during the ensuing year.

Is it desirable for this association to draft an inspection law for adoption by the several states? Laid on the table.

Is it desirable to change the present method for certification of stock sold by nurseryman, which was not grown in his state? The following resolution was adopted: "That a committee of five members be appointed to formulate a system by means of which the individual members of the association may notify the other members of the association of such views concerning special nurserymen, as it may seem desirable for the inspectors of other states to know."

What rule should govern the conditions of a certificate to a nurseryman in whose nursery stock San Jose scale has been found? No definite action.

What is the present opinion regarding the dipping of nursery stock in a contact insecticide, as compared with fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas? The following resolution adopted: "That it is the sense of this body that the present

Dreer's Select Dahlias

"Dreer's White"

This new quilled Show Dahlia is probably the most important introduction of the season, not only on account of its color, form and size, but also on account of its remarkable free-flowering habit. In our trial grounds the past summer it bloomed as profusely as A. D. Livoni. Its flowers are of large size, frequently measuring 6 inches across, and are borne on stout, stiff stems, nodding lightly, and while it resembles in form in a general way the popular Grand Duke Alexis, it is of a much more refined and perfect build, and never shows a trace of any color, always being of a pure, glistening white. It was shown at the annual exhibition of the New England Dahlia Society, where it received an Honorary Award, the highest award given. The Florists' Exchange, reporting on this exhibition, says: "Among notable exhibits perhaps the most striking was that of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, who exhibited a lot of their new Dahlia Dreer's White, and which were magnificent flowers of a pure white."

We offer strong plants, ready April 15, 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

New Decorative Dahlia

"Jack Rose"

Unquestionably the most important addition to the decorative class of Dahlias for many years. In color, a brilliant crimson-red, rich and glowing and which has suggested its name, Jack Rose, on account of the close approach in color to the popular Gen. Jacqueminot Rose, or, as it is more commonly known, the Jack Rose. The habit of the plant is all that can be desired for garden decoration, it being of a uniform compact habit of growth, producing its flowers with the greatest freedom; these are borne on erect, stout stems and always come perfect, a green center or an open flower never having been seen, and under the most ordinary cultivation they will measure five inches or more in diameter. As a cut flower, its rich color, together with its long, stiff stems which hold the flower erect, will at once secure it a place; in fact, the comparatively few flowers placed on the market the past season were quickly disposed of at highest prices. Awarded a certificate of merit by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Oct. 20.

Strong plants, ready April 15, 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

"Pearlhilde"

Mr. Bassett, the oldest and one of the most extensive growers of Dahlias for cut flowers for the Philadelphia markets, and with whom this variety originated as a sport from Kriemhilde, includes this as one of his best six cut flower varieties. It is identical with its parent except in color, which is a soft blush, so near a white as to pass for such. Strong field roots, 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

method of fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas is the most approved method of treating nursery stock where there is danger of infestation from San Jose scale.''

What conditions should govern the certification of strawberry plants from nurseries in which the strawberry root louse is known to be present? The following resolution was adopted: ''That it is the sense of this association that where the strawberry root louse occurs in a nursery patch, if the attack be severe, the patch should be destroyed, but if only a slight infestation, the nurseryman should be required to burn off the patch, and dip plants in tobacco water before shipping.''

Peach Yellows? Resolved, ''That this association recommend that nurserymen, as far as possible, cut scions from bearing healthy trees and urge proper fumigation of all propagated nursery stock used in the nursery with hydrocyanic acid gas.''

Crown Gall? Resolved, ''In view of the proven facts that this is a bacterial disease, communicated from one raspberry plant (and other plants) to another, that the practice on the part of nurserymen of storing raspberry plants visibly affected with crown gall with unaffected plants is extremely dangerous, and should be discontinued in the interest of fruit growing.''

Prof. T. B. Symons, Maryland, was elected secretary.

THE RHODE ISLAND BILL.

The establishment of the office of state entomologist under the direction of the state board of agriculture, is provided for in an act introduced in the state senate of Rhode Island February 16. This official will have large powers of investigation, and will be authorized to inspect all nurseries, private or public, and private lands, to determine if any insect or plant pests are there. All agents for nursery stock will have to be licensed under the act, and nurseries of other states doing business in Rhode Island will be obliged to file certificates of inspection from the states where they are located. A provision prevents the shipment of any nursery stock unless it is accompanied by a copy of the certificate of inspection of the consignor. Penalties of from $10 to $100 are provided for infractions of the proposed act.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, ready for delivery beginning February 15, 1909, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready for delivery March 1, 1909, $5 per 100 additional.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

GILBERT COSTICH, Rochester, N. Y.

WESTERLY, R. I.

I found S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., somewhat affected by the Bermuda fever, owing to the tempting offers made him, but, as he remarked, "There is far more satisfaction in viewing fields of healthy carnations than unhealthy lilies." At the time of my call he was busy with a European order for the new varieties of carnations and, judging by the most careful packing of a strong, well rooted lot of plants, there will be no kick coming from our fellow craftsman across the pond. The new propagating house is unique, the beds being a series built of cement, with bricks at the bottom—no chance for fungi. The size of the benches is 5x10 feet and each is heated separately, so that a different temperature can be given each if necessary. A pathway is allowed between them and around them.

An immense range is being added here for roses, chiefly My Maryland, with which Mr. Reuter is enthused, and he will grow as many as room can be allowed for. It is a grand rose and destined to surpass all its predecessors in its class. Entire absence of mildew is one of its chief qualities.

Mr. Reuter's carnations are all in solid beds and, without exception, are in splendid shape. The houses are of uniform height, six and one-half feet at the gutter and eighteen feet at the ridge. The patent clamp is used on the gutter and is a big success. Two varieties particularly attracted my attention—Pink Pearl and Ruby—both most appropriately named, for they are perfect gems. Louis Reuter says it keeps him hustling in the office nowadays, corresponding in several languages, owing to the rapidly increasing foreign demand for both roses and carnations.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Harry A. Neuner, who formerly had charge of the rose houses of the Erie Floral Co., at Erie, Pa., has been engaged by G. Van Bochove & Bro. as foreman of their rose department.

Kittery, Me.—The Kensington Flower Shop has been incorporated here, for the purpose of dealing in flowers, plants and nursery products. The capital stock is $10,000, and the officers are: President, Horace Mitchell, of Kittery; treasurer, S. J. Morrison, of Portsmouth, N. H.

Portland, Me.—The building containing the store of E. J. Harmon & Co., on Congress street, was damaged by fire early in the morning of February 15. The loss in the Harmon store was caused principally by smoke and water and was estimated as not more than $300, mostly covered by insurance.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

During the last week the weather was unfavorable, and consequently few people were out. The celebration of Lincoln's birthday occasioned a few dinner decorations, and toward the latter part of the week retailers were cornering the Jerusalem cherry plants for Washington's anniversary. Stock is still plentiful. Bulb stock is moving very satisfactorily.

Various Notes.

The dance and card party held by the Minnesota State Florists' Association at the U. C. T. assembly rooms, St. Paul, on the evening of February 15, was a decided success. About 100 couples attended. Frappe was served during the evening and supper at twelve. All the florists of the Twin Cities were present, and a number of out-of-town brother craftsmen dropped in. The festivities were prolonged so that it was decided to postpone the meeting that should have been held the following evening until February 23.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

ERIE, PA.

Current Comment.

Several thousand dollars' worth of damage was done to the shade trees of Erie by the recent storm. Telegraphic communication with the outside world was entirely cut off for a few days, while poles and wires were strewn about on the streets promiscuously. On Monday, February 15, Buffalo could be reached by wire, but Tuesday and Wednesday were hopeless. The city was dark at night, on account of the danger from live wires. There was no damage reported from any of the greenhouses, excepting slight loss of outside shrubbery. Business has been quiet for a few days, while stock is getting more plentiful and good in quality.

Jesse Frost, formerly assistant foreman for the Baur Floral Co., has resigned and is building a greenhouse, in which he intends to grow choice vegetables.

The Herald Paper Box Co., of Erie, is commencing to manufacture boxes for the retail florists' use.

Miss Elizabeth Moran, saleslady at the store of the Baur Floral Co., has been on the sick list.

The Erie Y. W. C. A. is having a "War of the Roses." One lady is captain of the "Red Rose Party" and another of the "White Rose Party." The war is to determine which side can secure the greater number of members for the Y. W. C. A. in a given time. The decorations at their banquet, given "before the war," consisted of red and white roses.

The King Construction Co. found it desirable to establish a distinct department for the handling of all matters pertaining to sales. H. E. Bates, who is well known among growers in the east, has taken charge of this new sales department. Mr. Bates has recently been with John A. Payne, of Jersey City. Previous to this he was with Hitchings & Co. and with the Pierson-Sefton Co. The King Construction Co. aims to keep its organization up to date and the organization of this department is in line with this policy.

Single Chrysanthemums
From Seed

I am offering seed of Wells' new early flowering singles, in original sealed packets, at 25c and $1.00 each. These can be sown any time and, planted outside in the spring, will give you bushels of flowers in early fall, or plants can be lifted and potted when in flower.

ALSO

Wells' New Hybrid Pentstemons

This is a new race that shows the most glorious combinations of colors in scarlet, crimson, pink and white. The plants grow 2½ feet high and the flower spike is 18 inches long. No one who has not seen it can form any idea of the brilliant display a bed of these plants presents. No trouble to grow. Simply prick off the seedlings, like asters, and plant outside in May.

Trade packets, 25c and $1.00 each. Hundreds of seeds in a packet.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The continuous spring weather for the last ten days has had a telling effect on the forsythia and bulbous stock in the parks.

This has been another busy week. Continuous funeral work, receptions and dinners have kept everybody busy. Stock is coming in more plentifully.

Various Notes.

Laurel roping and greens are commencing to arrive for the inaugural festivities. The Gudes have started on the court of honor. J. H. Small & Sons have the ball in the pension office. W. W. Kimmel has the contract to plant 300 spruce trees at the approach to the new Union station. It is estimated that between 25,000 and 50,000 yards of laurel garland will be used for decorating.

Ed. Barry, for years with the American Rose Co., is now with the Gude Bros. Co.

The next regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held Tuesday, March 2, at Eagles' hall. This will be the time for the annual election of officers and a large attendance is expected.

S. S. Pennock was in town last week, completing arrangements to open the branch store of the Pennock-Meehan Co., March 1, at 1212 New York avenue, N. W.

I. L. Pillsbury reports business excellent, both local trade and his mail-order business in his patented carnation staple, which he is sending all over the United States. He was at Springfield last week to exhibit a vase of carnations, the bursted calyxes of which he had mended with his staple, and was especially pleased that the judges, Peter Olsem, Geo. A. Kuhl and F. L. Washburn, all men who grow and handle carnations, should speak, in their report to the Illinois State Florists' Association, of his staple, adding "Which we consider a very good thing."

PREPARE FOR EASTER

An immense stock of Easter plants are now ready for immediate shipment, blooming Easter week or before if desired. : :

"From whom shall we purchase our Easter supply this season?" That seems to be the cry all over the country. "We tried so many." "I know what I am going to do," some sensible man says. "I shall go back to Godfrey Aschmann; I found him the truest and most reliable man in the business. What he advertises he has, and there is no bluff about it. I tell you his immense stock of choice Azalea Indica can't be beat, and he knows just exactly what people want. And lilies! he has them this spring to beat the band. The finest I ever saw. No wonder. He imports them direct from Japan, where he has a friend who looks after his interests and sends him the cream of the island. He has such a mass of it that he can supply all who want to buy lilies. And don't talk about his other plants, of which he has an equally large stock. I never saw such a sight of Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora, hydrangeas, spiraeas, tulips, hyacinths, ferns, araucarias, palms and other stock as he has for Easter. He has a stock of such abundance and beauty, and at such remarkably low prices, that he is able to challenge any rival firm in the country."

A specialty with us is Azalea Indica, grown for us under contract by an Azalea Specialist in Belgium. Have houses full of the choicest American varieties, right for Easter, such as have never before been duplicated. Simon Mardner (double pink), Dr. Moore (double pink), Deutsche Perle, Niobe, Bernard Andreas alba (pure double white), Apollo (red), Empress of India, Vervaeneana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), Memoire de L. Van Houtte (large double pink), Helene Thelemann. Notice: Please bear in mind that we do not import azaleas to sell dormant in fall, having the residue left for Easter, but force only the good ones for Christmas and Easter, which now are all covered with buds, and the price is 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Have three houses full and can supply all requests.

Easter Lilies. Of Lilium multiflorum we can supply all wants this Easter, and they never were in such a fine condition; raised from 10-in. bulbs, imported direct from Japan by ourselves because we knew that Easter lilies would be scarce this year. Kindly send in your order early. 6-in. pots, medium height, 10c per bud for plants with less than five buds; 12c per bud for plants with more than five buds.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Begonia, new, improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula obconica, 5-in., $2.00 dozen.

Yellow and White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida, best plants, 4-in. pots, $10.00 per 100; 5¼ to 6-in. pots, for Easter, at $3.00, $4.00 to $5.00 per dozen.

Spiraeas Gladstone, 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c to 75c; Superba, Japonica, Floribunda, 6-in. pots, 25c to 50c.

Lilium Multiflorum, 5000, 6-in. pots, for Easter, 35c, 50c to 75c.

Jerusalem Cherries for Washington's birthday, 6-in. pots, full of berries, 35c, 50c to 75c.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Daffodil Von Sion, best double, three bulbs in a 5-in. pot, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, from 18 to 25 and 25 to 30 inches high, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, specimen plants, swell stock, the same in width as in height, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25 to 30 inches high, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

The New Crested SCOTTII FERN NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI

This crested sport of Scottii will hold the same position to all the crested forms of Nephrolepis that Scottii now holds to the Boston. It is entirely distinct from all others and will become even more popular than its parent, with which it is identical in every way except that the pinnae are subdivided, giving it a beautiful crested appearance.

We have shown the plant at the exhibitions noted below and have been awarded the following honors:

SHAW GOLD MEDAL, St. Louis Horticultural Society, Nov. 3rd, 1908, for "Best plant of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce."

SILVER MEDAL, offered by the Society of American Florists, through the St. Louis Horticultural Society, Nov. 3rd, 1908, for "The most meritorious plant, or flower, of American origin."

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT of the Horticultural Society of St. Louis, Nov. 3rd, 1908.

SILVER MEDAL, Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, Nov. 3rd, 1908, for the best new plant.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, Nov. 6th, 1908.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT, Dutchess County Horticultural Society, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 30th, 1908.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT, Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, Madison, N. J., Oct. 30th, 1908.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT, Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 4th, 1908.

We are booking orders now which will be filled in strict rotation June 1st, 1909

Price per doz., $3.50; per 100, $25.00; per 1000, $200.00. Twenty-five supplied at hundred rate and five hundred at thousand rate.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Trade was pretty lively last week. Stock remains well cleaned up. Carnations are somewhat scarce at the present time. The demand for violets, valley, orchids and this class of stock has been good.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is handling many single and double locally grown violets, and finds a ready sale for them, although the competition with the Rhinebeck violets is pretty keen.

Various Notes.

Harmonie hall was beautifully decorated for the Harmonie Society's annual masquerade ball. Wm. Dilger, chairman of the decorating committee, superintended the work of decorating. Over thirty cases of southern smilax were used, with many wagon-loads of evergreen trees.

Another most attractive decoration was executed last week by the Bemb Floral Co.

Owing to the heavy snow storm falling at the time, several exhibits intended for the club's last trade exhibit arrived too late to receive mention in last week's issue of the Review. The following were worthy of special mention: Leopold Mallest, of Mount Clemens, sent a lot of fine Beacon and Lawson. J. K. Stock showed a vase of double snapdragon, which drew much attention. The Chas. Knopf Floral Co., of Richmond, Ind., showed its new carnations, Ruby and Mrs. Chas. Knopf. The Highland Park Floral Co., of Highland Park, Ill., shipped a lot of its latest introduction, Lucille. This variety has proved itself a wonderful keeper, being still in good condition. Indianapolis was also represented by Bertermann Bros., with a vase of the beautiful, solid yellow, James Whitcomb Riley, which also seems a good keeper. The color is a delicate shade of yellow.

Henry Fruck has finished repotting the collection of orchids at Breitmeyer's. From now on Mr. Fruck will devote his time to landscape work, for which he is well fitted, having had a lifetime's experience on private places.

The fall show premium committee has been requested by President Brown to submit an outline for a premium list at the next meeting of the club, March 1.

J. J. Karins, of Dreer's, passed through our city this week, homeward bound. He reports an exceptionally gratifying trip. During Mr. Karins' absence a little boy arrived at his home.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade conditions have not shown much change, although comparing it with last year it is some better. Carnations have been somewhat scarce, but there are enough other flowers of all kinds. Roses are getting finer and more plentiful every day; good Beauties continue scarce. Violets clean up, but at low prices. For some reason this flower will not bring the prices of former years. The lilies, tulips and jonquils coming in are especially fine.

The retail stores are keeping up fine displays in their windows and it seems to be necessary to do this and anything else possible to stimulate trade. The close of the fashionable season is usually the best of the winter for florists, but, while there are many small social affairs, they do not have much effect on the business.

Various Notes.

One of the retailers says in looking over the year's business he finds that his profits are not much less than other years, notwithstanding the fact that the decoration business has been almost nothing, and he is satisfied that the trouble in other years has been that the wealthy have been keeping him and his force busy and enabling them to make a big show, while he made his profits off the smaller trade. Hereafter the smaller buyers will command more respect from him.

Mrs. E. A. Williams is one of our people who says she has no word of complaint to make, as her trade, while not up to other years, at least has kept her busy and shows a fair profit.

Randolph & McClements have moved their Highland store to Penn avenue, where they will be able to make a better show. Their principal store will still remain at Baum and Beatty streets.

Samuel McClements was host at a dinner given to a number of his friends at the Rittenhouse February 15.

President Burki has been looking over the grounds and says he thinks he will be able to secure the finest accommodations the Carnation Society has ever had for next year. He says Pittsburg will have a big show and it must be placed right.

Thos. Smith, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., participated in the big Marathon race February 20, in which there were almost 5,000 entries. He came in for a prize.

W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., of New Rochelle, N. Y., was a visitor last week, stopping on his way west. Hoo-Hoo.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—J. C. Rogers is erecting a greenhouse.

This is The Florists' Manual

By William Scott

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual." —J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

PERSIMMON SEED.

Please tell me a good way to germinate persimmon seed. P. L. D.

Persimmon seeds will germinate readily sown just as peach or apricot pits are, viz., in nursery rows, dropping the seeds a few inches apart in early spring. The seed should be kept cool and damp through the winter, rather than dry. This insures earlier germination. If you only wish to sow a few seeds, they can be started in a cold greenhouse or frame about April 1. These fruits cannot be relied upon to reproduce themselves and the plants will therefore require budding when two or three years old. C. W.

TO RETARD HYACINTHS.

We have a lot of hyacinths, two bulbs to a pot, which we want for Easter sales. They are buried in coal ashes on the north side of the house, and now have good shoots an inch or so in length. We have mild winters in this locality (North Carolina) and nearly every year just before Easter we have a week or so of warm weather, and it is almost impossible to keep hyacinths from being in bloom before Easter. Is it possible to put these in cold storage about the first of March and thus hold them back for Easter? If so, how should they be treated? Would they have to be buried in ashes in the storage? What temperature? How long before Easter should we begin forcing them? W. S. G.

I would recommend you to stand your hyacinths at once on the floor of a cold cellar. They need not now be covered with ashes. In such a place you should be able to hold them back for Easter. Give them a dark position for a time, and more light as the tops lengthen. Any temperature just above freezing will be all right. Hyacinths will not require much forcing for Easter. I should say that in your state, if placed in a cool greenhouse two weeks before Easter, they would be in season. Much depends on the weather. If cold and dull, two or three more days might be needed. If they come out rather early, replace them in the cellar, where they will keep fresh much longer than in the greenhouse. C. W.

ELBERON, N. J.

Horticultural Society.

The first annual dinner of the Elberon Horticultural Society took place February 10, at the Deal Country Club. The tables were beautifully decorated and the menu was all that could be desired. About 100 partook of the feast. Arthur Herrington acted as toastmaster. Among the notable guests present were the Long Branch city council, John Shore and W. E. Maynard.

The Elberon Horticultural Society held its regular meeting February 15. After routine business had been transacted, N. Butterbach read a paper on "Roses," which was listened to with marked attention and was followed by a spirited discussion by all the members present. This evidence of interest pleased Mr. Butterbach so much that he thanked the members for the pleasure it gave him to read to such an enthusiastic meeting.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Butterbach. W. B.

BEAVER, PA.—It is reported that the Pittsburg & Lake Erie railroad will soon begin the construction of greenhouses on ground owned here. Flowers and plants grown in these greenhouses will be distributed among the various stations of the road, to adorn the lawns around the depots.

WORCESTER, MASS. — Early in the morning of February 16, one end of a boiler at H. F. Littlefield's greenhouses was forced out by an explosion and some glass in the boiler-room windows was smashed. The explosion was discovered before the greenhouse temperatures had dropped enough to injure the plants. Oil stoves were put in barely in time to save the stock from blight. The boiler was quickly repaired and the total loss was slight.

ESTIMATING RADIATION.

In building a boiler, how many square feet of heating surface to the foot? One square foot of boiler heating surface will heat how many square feet of hot water radiation? J. H. T.

It is estimated that one square foot of heating surface in a hot water boiler will provide heat for eight square feet of radiation in the heating system.

If a pipe heater is in question, the heating surface will depend upon the size of the pipe used, each square foot of radiation being supplied by two lineal feet of 1½-inch pipe, or two and three-tenths lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe, or one and three-fifths lineal feet of 2-inch pipe. L. C. C.

SIZE OF GRATE AND STACK.

I have a boiler sixty inches in diameter, sixteen feet long, and containing fifty 4-inch flues. What size and height of brick stack will be required and what should be the area of the grate bars? B. H. I.

The boiler in question is rated between seventy and eighty horse-power, probably seventy-five horse-power, and has a heating surface of approximately 1,000 square feet. The grate area will depend upon the character of the fuel to be used. If the fuel is hard coal, there should be one square foot of grate surface to forty of heating surface; if soft coal is used, one to eighty. The boiler should, therefore, have a grate with twenty-five square feet of surface for hard coal or twelve and one-half square feet of surface for soft coal. The stack should be thirty-three inches in diameter for the large grate and eighteen inches for the small.

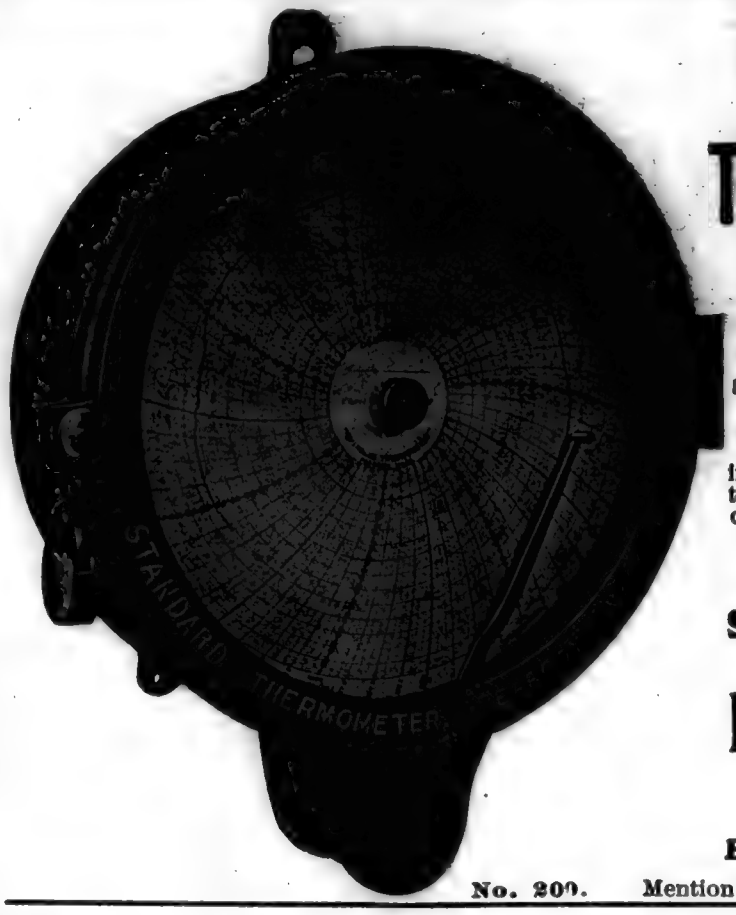
TWO VIRGINIA ROSE HOUSES.

On page 74 of the Review of February 4, I read the inquiry of D. G. G. and the answer, and I wish to take the liberty of disagreeing with the instructions given. As the heading says "Two Virginia Rose Houses," I do not think it would be necessary to put in twenty-two pipes in each house, or nearly that number, for we around Chicago never use more than eighteen pipes to the same space, and some use only fifteen and have no trouble in keeping warm.

I should suggest that D. G. G. put three pipes under each bench, if he intends to build six benches to the house, and the best and cheapest way to install them would be as follows, assuming, of course, that the houses run east and west: Run the main, 4-inch in the first house and 3-inch in the second, across the two houses at the center walk, with a tee at the center of each of the three north benches, opening at the top. From these branch with a 1½-inch pipe to the bench on each side, down to just below the bottom of the crosspiece under the bench. Then run each 1½-inch pipe to the farther end of the house, run along the end of the house and return under the three south benches to the center, connecting there with the return pipe, which would only need to be 2-inch, with a fall of one inch to twenty-five feet.



This system will give perfect satisfaction, and as the pipes under the farthest north bench return under the farthest south, there will be plenty of pipe at the ends to keep them warm. Allow not less than two inches of space between the cross pipes at the ends, for expansion. One-inch valves at the flow pipes and ¾-inch valves at the return would be large enough.

W. J. K.

THE WATER "BLOWS OFF."

I recently installed a new hot water boiler, rated at 6,400 feet of 2-inch pipe, and have had trouble ever since. There are two 4-inch perpendicular pipes running up from the second and third openings in the boiler. These connect into 3-inch pipes, which connect with the 3-inch flow pipes running to the farther end of the two houses, and there entering manifolds that supply the return pipes under the benches—ten 2-inch returns in one house and eleven in the other. These returns connect with a 3-inch pipe at the boiler end of the house, and the 3-inch pipe connects with a 4-inch return which enters the boiler. Altogether, there are twenty-one 2-inch returns fed by the two 3-inch flows. The drop in the 3-inch flows, from where they enter the houses to the farther end, is about thirty inches. The 2-inch returns have a gradual drop to the boiler end of the houses, and the 3-inch pipe which they there enter has a straight drop of two feet and then connects with the 4-inch, which has a gradual drop to the boiler. The flow pipes have separate connections to the boiler, one on each side of the boiler.

The expansion tank is a 20-gallon barrel, and connection is made to it from one of the returns, about twenty feet from where it enters the boiler. The expansion tank is about two feet higher than the highest part of the system and twelve feet above the boiler. There is a ¾-inch stand pipe, to keep air out of the system, connected to both of the 4-inch perpendicular pipes up out of the boiler.

In order to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in one house and 55 degrees in the other house, it is necessary to have on a good, lively fire, and unless the boiler is kept from boiling, the water will blow off out of the ¾-inch stand pipe and thereby empty the system of water. By standing close to the boiler, closing the ash door and damper and opening wide the fire door as soon as the water begins to steam, we are able to keep the water from blowing out of the stand pipe. The consumption of fuel is awful, caused by having to leave the fire door open so that the water in the boiler will not boil and blow off. I had the best plumber in the town make the connection to the new boiler and he put on the stand pipe, too. T. W. M.

This looks like a case of too little radiation, but I cannot say for certain, as you do not state the size of the houses. If you will state the length, width and height of the houses, we can tell. As an immediate help, take out the ¾-inch stand pipe and put a plug tapped for a pet cock in place first; then elevate the expansion tank to ten or twelve feet above the highest point in the system. Use a large tank and when the system is cool have only two or three inches of water in the bottom of the tank. These changes will help. L. C. C.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Valentine's day created a good demand for flowers and everyone was busy. There was an active sale of violets, with an abundance of stock to supply all demands. There was also a good call for red roses and carnations. Several weddings and a number of receptions and parties kept the leading stores quite busy last week.

Florists' Ball.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association gave its midwinter ball at U. C. T. hall, this city, February 15. About 175 people were present and the time was pleasantly spent by all. The weather, the music, the floor, the refreshments and all appointments were ideal, and the affair was the most successful social event ever held in the Twin Cities. The arrangements were in the hands of O. J. Olson, L. R. Cady and T. W. Nagel, who deserve much praise for the success of the affair. X. Y. Z.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass., has secured the fine location recently occupied by W. L. Lewis, at Worcester, and has placed his artist, Carl Meacham, in charge. Mr. Meacham has had many years of excellent training under Mr. Aitken and will make good in his new position of trust.

William Schlatter & Son, of Springfield, Mass., are planning for three additional houses, 25x123, for cut flowers, to supply their increasing demand. Last summer both members of this hustling firm made a trip to Europe. It was forty-three years since William, Sr., had cast eyes on the old soil, and William, Jr., was kept busy listening to the oft spoken remark of "How things have changed!" Now the senior William has the traveling fever. It is strange how many of our old friends, when once they get started, are loath to settle again.

J. W. Adams & Co., of Springfield, Mass., report a very satisfactory business in the nursery department.

Attica, Ind.—J. B. Klaws, formerly of Crawfordsville, is now grower for the Attica Floral Co.

Aurora, Ill.—The Aurora Greenhouse Co., which recently opened a downtown retail store, reports a good season.

East Bridgewater, Mass.—J. K. Alexander, who last season grew more than 500,000 dahlia plants, covering nearly twenty-two acres, has lately purchased a 39-acre tract almost adjoining his present farm. He expects to plant about twenty acres of this new ground the coming season, in addition to the old field. He will make a large showing at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition in Seattle, Wash., this year.

Condition of Business.

The demand for flowers continues good, and business in the last two weeks has been such that there is no reason to complain. The outlook for the coming week is also most encouraging. While numerous parties, receptions and banquets have consumed a large quantity of flowers, still we cannot compare their requirements to the amount of stock used in funeral designing. All of the florists report a busy week on this line of work.

The weather conditions are improving and consequently the crops are increasing somewhat. The carnation supply is first-class, while roses are still scarce and it is an impossibility to find enough to supply the demand. Callas and longiflorums sell readily, as do narcissi, Romans, jonquils, etc.

Various Notes.

The fourth annual banquet of the Miami Valley Nurserymen's Association was held at the Phillips house, of this city, February 18, following a business meeting of the association, held during the afternoon. The members were accompanied by their wives, and about forty persons sat down at the festal board. Friends and business associates from allied trades were included in the company. Music and flowers added to the pleasure of the scene and the after-dinner speeches were all in harmony with the good feeling that marked the occasion. J. W. McNary, in responding to the toast, "Our Association," referred to the fact that the nursery business was the only one of sufficiently high character to make "grafting" respectable, and followed with a parody on Poe's "Raven." with appropriate local hits. Mrs. T. J. Dinsmore, wife of the president of the association, gave an interesting reading, entitled "How Ruby Played." L. M. Brumhall, a prominent attorney of Troy, O., closed the banquet hour with a felicitous speech on the nobler phases and purposes of the nursery business.

H. H. Ritter has a very contented look on his face. A good business last week seems to be the cause.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bartholomew left February 19 for Chicago, where they are spending a few days with friends.

Warren G. Matthews has been very busy during the last few weeks. He has had some large funeral orders.

Arno and Julius Hendrichs left February 17 for New Orleans, where they will enjoy two weeks with friends and also attend the Mardi Gras.

Visitors last week were: Mr. Johnson, of the Chillicothe Floral Co., Chillicothe, O.; E. C. Pruner, representing E. H. Hunt, of Chicago, and Herman Ehrhard, of Sidney, O. R. B.

Athens, Ga.—The Athens Floral Co. has had a fine business in the last year and is preparing to build another house, 20x100.

HUNT'S GUARANTEED FERTILIZERS

OUR FERTILIZERS ARE PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR FLORISTS' USE and are analyzed by an expert chemist to see that they are free from all acids. You can depend upon their being just what you want, AND SAFE. You ought to have these on hand at all times, ready for use.

PURE BONE MEAL

The brand we are selling has no superior. It is an absolutely uniform grade of pure bone, guaranteed free from acids, and is sold at as low rates as many inferior brands, which cannot be used with safety in greenhouse work.

Guaranteed Analysis. Per ct.

Ammonia	4 to 5
Phosphoric acid	23 to 26
Equal to bone phosphate	50 to 60

12 per cent immediately available and soluble in water.

Price

50 lb. bag	$ 1.25
100 lb. bag	2.00
200 lb. bag	3.50
1000 lbs., ½ ton	15.00

HUNT'S PURE BONE FLOUR

This is identical with our Pure Bone Meal, except it is ground to a very fine dust or flour, making it especially valuable for use in liquid form or for mixing with other fertilizers when quick action is required.

17 per cent immediately available and soluble in water.

Price

50 lb. bag	$1.35	500 lb. bag	$ 9.00
100 lb. bag	2 50	1000 lbs., ½ ton	16.00
200 lb. bag	4.00	2000 lbs., 1 ton	30.00

BLOOD AND BONE

Preferred by many of our best and largest growers owing to its great percentage of ammonia and available phosphate, which makes it quick acting. It is a mixture of pure tankage or blood and the best grade of Bone Meal in proportions to stimulate root action and bring out the best color in the blooms.

Guaranteed Analysis Per cent

Ammonia	6½ to 7½
Bone phosphate	25 to 35

Price

50 lb. bag	$1.35	500 lb. bag	$ 9.00
100 lb. bag	2.50	1000 lb. bag, ½ ton	16.00
200 lb. bag	4.00	2000 lb. bag, 1 ton	30.00

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE

One of the most effective of fertilizers and largely used by the best growers, both as a top dressing and in the manure tanks. The raw material for Hunt's Sheep Manure is the droppings taken from solid floor sheep corrals. Ordinary manures are largely shoveled up from the ground and contain a large proportion of soil for which you pay, but from which you get nothing except possibly weed seed. A trial order will convince the most skeptical of the superiority of our brand.

Guaranteed Analysis. Per ct.

Ammonia	3¼ to 4
Available phos. acid	1½ to 2
Actual potash	1¾ to 2½

Price

100 lb. bag	$1.50	1000 lbs., ½ ton	$ 9.00
500 lb. bag	5.00	2000 lbs., 1 ton	16.50

AMHERST, MASS.

Massachusetts Agricultural College.

On February 3 George Sinclair, of Holyoke, gave an interesting talk before the floricultural classes on "Chrysanthemum Culture." Mr. Sinclair spoke largely on methods of culture, and gave many details of interest to growers. The following week E. J. Canning gave an excellent address on "The Work of the Private Gardener." On February 17, Edward MacMulkin, of Boston, spoke on "The Retail Trade." Mr. MacMulkin not only gave a talk full of excellent suggestions for success along this important line of floriculture, but he brought with him a large number of handsomely decorated baskets, with different varieties of flowers for them, and demonstrated to the students, in a pleasing way, methods of disposing of the short-stemmed flowers in a manner satisfactory to the dealer and the customer. He also showed how various color schemes could be worked out. These talks by various practical men are proving popular with the students. They realize that in no other way can they get better details of management and culture of plants and flowers, than from the experience of these successful men. This week M. A. Patten and Peter Fisher are to talk on carnations.

On Thursday, February 18, a party of short course men left on a three days' observation trip among the larger commercial florists' establishments in eastern Massachusetts. On Saturday, February 13, the class visited Adams' nurseries, Aitken's, Beals', Schlatter's and Reed's greenhouses, in Springfield.

The dedication of the new instruction building for floriculture and market gardening, and of the new range of greenhouses, promises to be an interesting affair. Many of the florists have signified their intention of sending flowers for the exhibit to be held by the senior class at that time. Several horticultural societies will send delegates to attend these dedicatory exercises. The principal speaker will be J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, who will discuss in a general way the subject of intensive culture of plants under glass.

READING, PA.—Hoskins Bros., who have greenhouses on North Tenth street, are making extensive preparations for the Easter trade.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

RESULTS bring advertising. The REVIEW brings results.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

In Use For Twenty Years

This photo was taken a year ago last October. It is one of fifty sash that have been right outdoors, in constant use, for this is the twentieth year. It was made right. It is one of our

Sash that Last

Perhaps you have thought it was because of the poor wood that your sash got twisty, and rotted out so soon, but the chances are they are made wrong. There is a right way. You ought to know about that way. Send for Sash Circular—it tells it. Freight allowance on 10 or more sash.

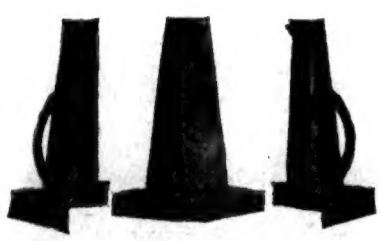
The Des Plaines Gutter

Manufactured by



THE GEO. M. GARLAND CO., DES PLAINES, ILLINOIS

Designed for the purpose of meeting the requirements of builders with a limited capital. Note that the screw fastening is a considerable distance from the lower end of sash-bar; also that the drip drains into the drip-conductor below the fastening point. Made in 5 ft. 6¼-in. lengths. Price, per ft., 38c.

Why Use Cedar Posts

under your benches, when you can put a concrete post there for the same money? You can make any height post up to 23 in. off this mould. Price per mould, $10.00.

We Make a Semi-iron House

Which Cannot be Equaled for the Money

We guarantee our castings against breakage. Perfectly straight castings made in lengths up to 8 ft.
